Steel Strike Up to Owners, Says Lewis, Vowing Peace

He Promises to Unionize 500,000 Wtihout Any Disorders.

Industry Reported Arming Its Guards

Secretary Perkins Tells Operators Not to Give Way to Panic.

By Sidney Olson.

If industrial warfare breaks out along the iron and steel industry front while organizers are enlisting the 500,000 steel workers in an industrial union, it will be the fault of the corporations, a statement by the John L. Lewis committee for industrial organization said in effect last night.

The Lewis committee, in one of the most important sessions in labor's history, promised definitely to organize the steel workers without a strike, in a statement packed with attacks on "the arrogant dictatorship" of the corporation and "the sinister policy of the American Iron and Steel Institute."

The statement said:

"The committee desires to avoid industrial strife and disturbances or violence of any character. If such violence should accrue it will be due solely to the provocative policy of the corporations engaged in the steel industry."

Firms Reported Arming.

In the background were reports that the steel companies have been arming and training guards for the actual warfare likely to ensue if efforts of the committee continue successfully.

The four-hour meeting of the committee here in the offices of the United Mine Workers was preceded by a vigorous warning to the American Iron and Steel Institute by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins. The institute recently issued a statement and published an advertisement in many newspapers outlining a policy of "protection for our workers" against "outside organization efforts."

She urged the $5,000,000,000 steel industry not to become "nervous or panicky." She directly asked them through her press conference "not to do anything foolish."

She used as a text the full-page advertisement of the Steel Institute, which warned labor that the industry would present "a united front" against efforts by organized labor to secure a closed shop.

"No Reason for Panic."

Secretary Perkins said:

"This is not a strike. It is a movement to extend existing labor organizations. There is no reason, it seems to me, for panic. It is not necessary to have a strike in order to organize."

Pointing to the industry's advertisement, she snapped:

"They announced that there was going to be a strike, and what its purpose was to be. I think it is not necessarily a correct assumption, and it is not based upon developments to date."

Then, weighing her words and

Chef Slayer Given From 3 to 15 Years

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, in the United States District Court, yesterday sentenced William Martin McNamara, slayer of John Mikedis, from 3 to 15 years in the penitentiary. McNamara was convicted last week of manslaughter in connection with the death of Mikedis, chef in a K street restaurant.

In denying the request of defense attorneys that he take into consideration McNamara's youth—he is 21—Justice O'Donoghue remarked that the jury had shown ample sympathy when it found him guilty of manslaughter.

McNamara, a slightly-built youth who came here from Petersburg, Va., to attempt a reconciliation with his estranged wife, Ruth took his sentence without a tremor. Previously he had expressed himself as well pleased that he escaped a more serious conviction. He will be sent to Lorton.

Mrs. Snow Gets Reno Divorce; D. C. Matron Charges Cruelty

Daughter of Former Tennessee Congressman Wins Freedom From World War Flier, Once $1 a Year Government Aid.

Mrs. Enid Sims Snow, prominent young society matron of Washington, was granted a divorce yesterday in Reno from her husband, Chester A. Snow, jr., on the ground of extreme cruelty, according to the Associated Press.

The couple was married here on February 19, 1923, and have an 11-year-old daughter, Enid Claire. Mrs. Snow makes her home at 2139 Wyoming avenue northwest.

One of the five daughters of T. W. Sims, who represented Tennessee in Congress from 1897 to 1921 and was chairman of the committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce during President Wilson's Administration, Mrs. Snow made her local society debut in 1918.

She went to Reno last June, but returned here without having pressed a divorce suit. An agreement was reached last August as to custody of the daughter and property rights.

Chester A. Snow, sr., is a retired patent attorney and real estate operator. In 1933 the son became a "$1 a year man" in the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce, holding that post a short time.

Snow holds a transport pilot's license and an Army airplane pilot's rating. He was in the Army Air Service during the World War and is a major in the Air Corps Reserve.

Hamilton Cites Roosevelt Risk Of U.S. Collapse

Created 'Fear of Fear' for Political Profit, Chairman Asserts.

By the United Press.

Chicago, July 2.—John D. M. Hamilton, aggressive chairman of the Republican National Committee, tonight accused President Roosevelt of willingness in 1932 "to risk a complete collapse of the Nation in order to gain the political advantage and personal satisfaction of the dramatic upturn he knew was inevitable."

Mr. Roosevelt himself created "the fear of fear which he claims to have conquered," Hamilton told the Illinois Republican finance committee.

Here to complete the work of organizing Republican national headquarters before he starts a swing about the country for Gov. Alfred M. Landon, Hamilton charged that Mr. Roosevelt, by refusing to "cooperate" with President Hoover "in a mutual effort to recall waning confidence," had played politics in the face of national disaster.

He held that economic and not political factors were responsible

2 Children Killed, 27 Hurt in Tornado

Monroe, La., July 2 (U.P.).—Two children were killed and 27 other persons injured, 7 seriously, by two tornadoes that swept over portions of northeast Louisiana today.

The dead, fatally hurt when their home was demolished at Archibald early today, were Howard, 6, and Charles, 4, sons of Mr. and Mrs. George Bradford.

The tornado had swooped down at Mangham, 3 miles south of Archibald, a few minutes before, injuring 12 persons, demolishing houses and schools, with damage upward of $10,000.

Farley Ignores Cabinet Issue At Conference

Campaign Alone Concerns Leaders in Three-Hour White House Parley.

By Robert C. Albright.

For three hours yesterday President Roosevelt talked practical party politics with Postmaster General James A. Farley, and both apparently became so engrossed in the discussion that neither mentioned the matter of Farley's proposed withdrawal from the Cabinet.

With the Postmaster General and his chief aids on the National Democratic Committee, President Roosevelt went over in detail the preliminary arrangements for campaign activities, a tentative budget said to approximate the $2,000,000 spent in the 1932 campaign, and available speaking talent.

But on the question of Farley's separation from the Postmaster Generalship, temporary or permanent, to devote his full time to the campaign, all present said they were silent.

Another Parley Monday.

Charles Michelson, Democratic publicity director, said the announcement, when and if made, probably would come through his office. He said it was safe to say no announcement would be made before Monday, when another party conference will be held at the White House.

In the meantime, Farley will have plenty of time to talk the matter over with the President. He will leave with Mr. Roosevelt this morning on the President's Virginia speaking trip.

For two years, separation of the offices of Postmaster General and National Committee chairman has been rumored intermittently, and became widely current at the Philadelphia Democratic Convention. The story most prevalent is that Farley may take a campaign leave

First Lady Calls White House Fire Hazard; Rewiring Ordered

The White House is a fire hazard, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt revealed yesterday, with a wiring system declared defective and obsolete by the Fire Department.

So parts of the Executive Mansion will be torn up this summer while new electric wiring is installed, the First Lady said. Work will begin as soon as the President begins his summer vacation.

Mrs. Roosevelt, holding her last press conference of the season, asserted the greatest part of the rewiring will be done on the main and second floors, including the President's living quarters and the state rooms.

Most of the present wiring was installed 35 years ago. Rooms which need no attention are on the third floor, which the Chief Executive had remodeled when the roof was raised and straightened. It will not be necessary for electricians to invade the kitchen, either.

Asked if the fire hazard was enough actually to endanger the building, Mrs. Roosevelt replied:

"Yes, it is."

Mrs. Roosevelt announced she would not participate in campaign politics.

"I am going to do exactly as I usually do," she said, "and I am not going to make any campaign speeches.

"I shall try as far as possible to visit WPA projects and Youth Administration projects, as well as State and Federal institutions when I happen to be near them.

Extent to which and President and Mrs. Roosevelt have entertained during their administration was shown at the press conference. Raymond D. Muir, chief usher at the White House, said the President and Mrs. Roosevelt have received 29,020 visitors since January 1, 1935.

Of this number, Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt received 16,619 during the first six months of last year; 2,544 during the last six months of 1935, and 9,857 during the first half of this year.

Crowd to See Park Opened By Roosevelt

Journeying to Big Meadows, Va., high on the famous Skyline Drive, atop the Blue Ridge Mountains, President Roosevelt today will dedicate the Shenandoah National Park.

The Chief Executive was expected to arrive at the scene of the dedication at 2:25 p. m., and the meeting will be called to order five minutes later.

As early as yesterday afternoon officials at Big Meadows reported motorists from many States were at the outskirts of the park, forming a vanguard for the estimated 50,000 persons who are expected to form the vast crowd.

Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes will deliver an address before Roosevelt speaks.

Bishop Tucker to Speak.

Beneath the great dome of the mountain sky, the meeting will be called together by Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the Virginia State Commission on Conservation and Development.

Invocation will be delivered by the Right Rev. H. St. George Tucker, Episcopal Bishop of Virginia.

After Ickes finishes his address, Gov. George C. Peery of Virginia will speak briefly in presenting the President.

Then Mr. Roosevelt will look over the vast crowds and officially dedicate the park as a shrine of natural beauty and an American heritage.

Six Civilian Conservation Corps workers from the six camps in the Shenandoah National Park area will occupy seats of honor on the speaker's stand.

They have been chosen to sit near the President. They are Gilbert Moomaw, of Mountain Lake Park, Md.; Fred Hesley, of Woodstock Camp; Dewey Haney, of Swift Run; Walter Lunsford, of Raphine Camp; Elmer Batman, of Kimball, and J. R. Hensley, of Elkton Camp.

Clear Skies Forecast.

A representative of the mountain folk, who for generations have made the Shenandoah Park area their home, also will sit on the stand with the officials.

Scientist, 'Eaten By Gods,' Is Safe

Monrovia, Liberia, July 2 (AP).—Without even the briefest glimpse of "the angry gods" who were reported to have swallowed him, Dr. Robert Morey, anthropologist for the Rockefeller Institute, rested here today.

He had escaped death in the jungle, where he wandered in circles for two weeks after his native guides had deserted him. He will return soon to the United States.

The guides left Dr. Morey because they feared "the angry gods" of the Sacred Mountain Pandemai.

Dr. Morey has been in Liberia since October studying primitive customs and people. He started toward Pandemai, which the natives worship and which they believe white men may not look upon. When the area of the sacred mountain was reached, the guides deserted and reported to authorities it was useless to conduct a search for the scientist because he had been swallowed by the gods.

Field reports to Resettlement Administration set 100,000 as number of farm families in Northwest needing help.

New floods threaten south Texas areas, where 23 lost lives.

Secretary Wallace, at Duluth, announces Government purchasing and processing plan to take up to million head of livestock off dried ranges. Fund of $5,000,000 made ready here.

Rainfall Forecast.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 2.—A widespread damper on the crop-consuming drought was forecast by the Weather Bureau today as various authorities estimated its cost to date at $250,000,000.

Rainfall was predicted for the Ohio Valley, the Southeastern States and parts of Minnesota and North Dakota—the latter in the heart of the five-State belt including South Dakota, Wyoming and Montana, where the dry spell has been characterized as the "worst in history."

The bureau said precipitation this week had relieved the seriousness of the situation in all the affected States except the Dakotas, Montana and Iowa.

Wheat Quotations Soar.

Meanwhile, excited bidding skyrocketed wheat quotations 3 to 5 cents a bushel today as trading rules limiting daily price fluctuations, under which North American grain markets operate, were invoked.

Speculators, stirred by fears of a spring wheat crop disaster as a result of drought in the United States and Canada, swarmed into the grain pits at Chicago, Minneapolis, Kansas City and Winnipeg, major markets of the continent, bidding wheat prices as well as values of other grains to new highs for the season.

Chicago wheat futures sold above $1 a bushel for the first time since March before the old crop May contract was closed out. December wheat here sold as high as $1.03½, within 6 cents of its 1935 peak. At Minneapolis, wheat was as high as

Stocking Slayer Sentenced to Die

San Francisco, July 2 (AP).—Found sane by a jury, Albert Walter, jr., was sentenced today to be hanged at San Quentin Prison September 4 for the silk-stocking strangling of Miss Blanche Cousins, of Idaho Falls, Idaho, whom he attacked.

Superior Judge Lile T. Jacks ruled the defendant was guilty of murder in the first degree.

Walter displayed no emotion. His father, a Boston salesman, was visibly shaken and his wife collapsed in the jail matron's quarters.

"That's OK," said Walter as he was led from court to be taken to prison. "I asked for it and I got it."

"I regard the death sentence as the penalty for all of my crimes. I am a lost man. I knew it a year ago and told my wife about it. Why I didn't commit suicide then I don't know."

The father said he would employ an alienist and an attorney in a new effort to save his son.

Tavern Manager's Wife Identified as Brunette Who Paid Call.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 8.—Miss Audrey Vallette, 31, former show girl and daughter of a family prominent in suburban Wheaton and Gary, Ind., was shot to death today in her bed in a North Side hotel, where she had registered as Anabelle Blake.

Her slaying, Capt. Andrew Barry said, was a crime of vengeance.

A search was ordered for Mrs. Ruth Freed, whose picture Capt. Barry said, was identified by Harold Knox, assistant manager of the hotel, as that of the petite brunette who visited Miss Vallette shortly before the shooting.

Police learned tonight the dead woman was the daughter of E. Perry Vallette, of Gary, an employe of the Illinois Steel Corporation. At the Vallette home it was said she sometimes used the name of Anabelle Blake.

She was the great-granddaughter of Col. Henry Vallette, who fought in the Civil War and was a pioneer settler in Wheaton. Distantly, she was related to the late Judge Elbert H. Gary, once head of the United States Steel Corporation.

The brunette whose visit to Miss Vallette was followed by death wore no hat, coat nor stockings when she entered the hotel, attendants said. She left the room hurriedly and drove off in a maroon coupe.

The license number, Capt. Barry said, was traced to Mrs. Freed's husband, Edward, sometimes known as Ed Reid, night manager of a tavern on North Clark street.

While police sought Mrs. Freed for questioning, Roland Schenck, a night club master of ceremonies, approached police at the hotel and said he had spent most of the day with Miss Blake, leaving her about 15 minutes before the shooting. He was ordered questioned.

AUDREY VALLETTE.

Knox said the missing brunette had appeared at the hotel and asked to be shown some apartments. On the seventh floor she remarked, "I guess I'll look in on Miss Vallette."

Robert Dow, an elevator operator, said she entered the Vallette apartment. Shortly afterward Knox was attracted by the flashing of a signal light on the switchboard and heard Miss Vallette gasp, "Help, I've been shot." About the same time he saw the brunette depart in the red coupe, he said.

Attired in a pink negligee, Miss Vallette was already dead in the bloodstained bed, a bullet in the right side of her chest, when Knox hurried to the room.

Holiday Throng Starts Exodus From District

Travel Agencies Report Greatest Activity in City's History.

By land, water and the skyways Washingtonians today will begin the greatest Fourth of July exodus on record.

Thousands of Government workers, with the new annual leave allowance of 26 days, effective since Wednesday, will depart from the Capital late today on vacations. Other thousands will desert the Capital to spend the Independence Day week-end with the folk back home.

Officials last night said rail and bus travel were, of course, most widely used, but that many men and women on a holiday would fly on the airlines, and numerous others would journey down the Potomac on steamers, bound for Chesapeake Bay and the seashore.

The lower railroad rates, effective since June 1, caused ticket agents to do a rush business. Many trains were running extra cars, and almost all the major railroads were offering special excursions.

Most of the rail travel will be North and West. The greatest volume of rail travel in at least seven years was indicated by passenger agents.

Neighbor Rescues Girl, 19, From Gas

Margaret Isabel Hamilton, 19, of the 3500 block Warder street northwest, was saved from death in her gas-filled apartment yesterday by a neighbor, who smelled escaping gas.

Mrs. Lillian Epstein, the neighbor, told police she was in her apartment across the hall from Miss Hamilton's rooms when she noticed the odor. She knocked on the door of the Hamilton apartment and was admitted by the girl.

Walking into the kitchen, Mrs. Epstein said she found all the jets on the gas stove open. The girl fainted after Mrs. Epstein tried to get her to leave.

Miss Hamilton was taken to Emergency Hospital. Mrs. Epstein said the girl had complained of being in ill health.

'I'm a Genius,' First Wife Told By MacArthur

Stepped on Feet When He Made Love, She Says in Balm Trial.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 2.—The first wife of Charles MacArthur, the playwright, testified in her $100,000 "heart balm" suit against Helen Hayes today that the writer stepped on her feet when he made love and warned her after he married her that he "was a genius."

The wedding, said the witness—Carol Frink, newspaper drama critic—was performed by the author's father, a Presbyterian minister, "because Charlie said we could save a few dollars that way."

"You mustn't expect too much of me," she quoted MacArthur as saying after the ceremony. "I'll probably be hard to domesticate, for I'm a genius."

Miss Frink hinted she had her doubts about the last three words, for MacArthur was then just a rewrite man on a Chicago newspaper, and she was earning more money than he.

The romance Miss Frink related while Actress Hayes, MacArthur's

Reformatory Head Resigns Under Fire

Nashville, Tenn., July 2 (AP).—The head of the State Reform School, whose administration a Davidson County grand jury described as "most inhumane," quit today without the formality of submitting a resignation.

"I declined to resign, but after considering the thing for a while I decided to just quit," announced Supt. G. Newt Choate, who last night defied Gov. Hill McAlister's demand to step out.

As for the Governor's demand Choate said he could "see no motive in anything that's been done except political."

Choate came under fire when the grand jurors visited the school after an inmate exhibited scars he said were inflicted by a lash.

The investigators said they received testimony youthful charges were brutally beaten, sometimes with the spoke of a wagon wheel.

Pope Orders World Fight By Catholics On Bad Films

Episcopacy Told to Set Up Boards of Review Over the Globe.

Abstention Pledge Asked of Faithful

Decency Legion Praised; Hollywood Is Pleased With Encyclical.

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, July 2.—Pope Pius ordered a permanent, organized fight of the Roman Catholic Church today to save the world from the "debasing" influences of "bad films."

To that end he told his bishops throughout the world to establish boards of review to advise the faithful of the films they must avoid or those which they might view "with impunity."

Finally His Holiness enjoined the clergy to obtain pledges from their communicants, renewable each year, to stay away from pictures which were "offensive to truth and Christian morality."

In the first encyclical addressed directly to leaders of the Catholic Church in the United States, the 79-year-old pontiff demanded "painstaking vigilance over the motion picture."

"All right-thinking men, Catholic and non-Catholic, will help assure that the great international force—the motion picture—shall be directed toward the noble end of promoting the highest ideals and the truest standard of life," he said.

"National Offices" Urged.

Pope Pius, in directing bishops to set up "national offices" to review films, specified those which "seduce young people . . . glorify passions . . . show life under a false light . . . destroy pure love and respect for marriage."

Regional boards, he said, may even censor films which are admitted to the general list."

The Pope praised the United States episcopate for reforms which he said had been effected by "the legion of decency."

He explained he sought to direct "this magnificent power" for the good of mankind.

"They will likewise remind the motion picture industry that the demands they make regard not only Catholics but all who patronize the cinema. * * *

"Why, indeed, should there be a question of merely avoiding what

Phobic Professor, Ex-Wife Reunited

Madison, Wis., July 2 (AP).—Exactly a month after she was granted a divorce; Mrs. Grace Golden Leonard, 28, was reunited today with her husband, William Ellery Leonard, 60-year-old University of Wisconsin literary professor, whom she married a year ago to release him from his "phobic prison."

Neither Leonard nor his blond third wife was present as Circuit Judge A. C. Hoppmann affixed his signature to the petition, signed by both parties, to set aside the divorce decree. Previously the jurist had granted the divorce.

The couple has been seen together frequently within a small area of the university campus which the professor terms his "phobic prison" since Mrs. Leonard returned from New York on the first anniversary of their marriage, June 29.

Bodies of 2 Students Sought In Lake; Upset Canoe Found

Firemen Dragging Waters Near West Virginia-Maryland Border for Pair Missing From Catholic Summer Camp.

Firemen were dragging Deep Creek Lake, near the West Virginia-Maryland boundary, last night for the bodies of two Washington theological students who were believed drowned when their canoe overturned.

The missing were:

Alfred Schrieber, about 25, of Minnesota, graduate of Notre Dame and third-year theological student at Holy Cross College in Brookland.

Francis Rdzok, about 24, of South Bend, Ind., also a graduate of Notre Dame and a second-year theological student at Holy Cross.

Both were students at a Catholic summer camp on Deep Creek Lake. The camp is maintained by the Holy Cross Congregation at the House of Studies connected with Catholic University.

Dressed in heavy clothes, the two young men left camp late Wednesday in a canoe. Neither was an expert swimmer.

When they failed to return for supper, Father Kenna, camp director, sent out a searching party, which found the capsized canoe waterlogged in an inlet approximately two miles from camp. Both paddles bobbed on the surface of the lake. During the late afternoon, campers said, there was no wind, the lake was calm and the weather clear.

Members of the Oakland Fire Department searched for the bodies Wednesday night. They continued dragging throughout yesterday and still were searching for the bodies last night. A volunteer corps joined in attempts to find the bodies.

Cumberland, Md., sent its rescue boat and a crew of firemen with grapnels to join in the search. State police also lent their aid.

Holy Cross College was notified the youths were missing early yesterday by Father Kenna.

In event the bodies are found, college officials said, they will be sent to Notre Dame, where both will be buried.

Sister Dies, Operation to Save Day-Old Siamese Twin Delayed

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Medford, Mass., July 2.—Surgeons decided late tonight to delay as long as possible the severance operation by which they hope to save the life of a Siamese twin whose sister already had been dead more than 24 hours.

Dr. John B. Vernaglia, after X-ray examination of day-old Mary Fiorenza at Lawrence Memorial Hospital, said he wanted her to gain as much strength as possible before he attempted to cut her free from her dead sister, Carina.

Mary's sister Carina (Italian for "little dear") died last night less than five hours after birth, but Mary, responding to formulae prescribed by Dr. Vernaglia, continued to gain strength and late today was reported "doing very well."

The children, born to (Diego (Dick) Fiorenza, 28, and his 25-year-old wife Mary, were joined at the base of the skull, in contrast to the original Siamese twins, born 125 years ago and joined at the breast bones, and to Holyoke's 24-year-old Siamese twins, linked at the hips.

Immediately after birth the infants were baptized, first by their aunt, Mrs. Carina Fiorenza, and later by a Catholic priest.

The father of the Siamese twins, manager of the fruit department of a Dorchester chain grocery store who works from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m., had not reached home late yesterday when the freak birth occurred.

Officiating at the birth were Dr. Vernaglia and Dr. Sidney J. Solomon with a nurse assisting. Also present were Mrs. Carina Fiorenza and the two grandmothers of the twins, Mrs. Anna Cotrona and Mrs. Anna Fiorenza.

When, an hour later, the father arrived at his five-room ground-floor flat in a brown-shingled four-

Employment Up 4,500,000, Perkins Asserts

But 3,500,000 Figure for Idle Is Too Low, Adds Secretary of Labor.

Employment in May, 1936, in the non-agricultural and non-governmental brackets has risen since the 1933 low by more than 4,500,000 persons, Frances Perkins, the Secretary of Labor, revealed today, but she said, employment now falls far short of the high point of 1929 by 5,000,000.

There are now 30,950,000 persons at work in non-agricultural employments in the United States, Miss Perkins said. She estimated approximately 12,000,000 persons are attached to agriculture and in addition about 3,230,000 are at work on emergency projects financed with Federal funds. The total for all private and regular Government employment, exclusive of agriculture, is estimated by Secretary Perkins to have been about 26,310,000 in May, 1933, and 35,980,000 in May, 1929.

Miss Perkins said her figures were taken from a survey just completed by the Bureau of Labor statistics. She took issue with recent surveys by private sources, which showed that only about 3,500,000 people are unemployed. This figure is much too low, she said.

"Employment in all manufacturing industries, including wage earners as well as salared employes and employers in May, 1936, is estimated at 8,512,000 persons," Miss Perkins said.

Some Industries Gain.

"While manufacturing employment is about 1,570,000 less than it was seven years ago, an appreciable number of manufacturing industries are employing more workers now than they did in 1929. Among the more important of these industries are rayon yarns, industrial chemicals, wireworkers, stamped and enameled ware, clocks, leather, soaps, and beverages, including beer."

A number of other manufacturing industries are operating at approximately the same level as in 1929, she said, but the more important industries are about 10 per cent below that level.

Miss Perkins attributed the variation in the official Labor Department estimates and the estimates of private tabulators to the "reluctance on the part of some business concerns which do not fare as well as their competitors to reveal their employment figures."

"The firms reported in one survey represent in the main the larger and more successful business organizations," she declared. "These highly select companies and industries are not, however, typical of industry and business as a whole. It should be further emphasized that the compilation overlooks the shrinkage of employment caused by the disappearance of concerns that have gone out of business or merged with other firms since 1929.

Would Be Representative.

"If estimates of changes in unemployment are to reflect conditions that generally prevail, they must be based upon a sample large enough to be representative of the specific industries covered."

Miss Perkins had scarcely finished presenting her unemployment figures when the American Federation of Labor, through President William Green, released its own jobless statistics showing 11,259,000 workers are still unemployed.

President Green expressed apprehension over the fact that while business activity is only 5.7 per cent below normal, employment continues to lag.

"It is significant," he said, "that while employment gains this spring have created at least temporary jobs for 1,585,000 since January, these gains fall far short of the employment necessary to create jobs for all. At the present rate of re-employment, industrial activity will have to rise far beyond 1929 levels to put the unemployed to work. This will require a higher level of workers' buying power than any previously achieved."

Markers to Direct Manassas Visitors

Manassas, Va., July 2 (AP).—Markers along the highways, pointing to the scene of the first major conflict of the War Between the States, will be erected this week in connection with preparations for the re-enactment of the first Battle of Manassas on July 21.

The committee in charge of the seventy-fifth anniversary celebration, headed by Mayor Harry P. Davis, is making plans for the handling of a crowd of 50,000 or more, basing their attendance estimates on the 30,000 who witnessed the Chancellorsville celebration in May, 1936.

John Q. Rhodes, jr., State motor vehicle commissioner, will have charge of traffic arrangements in co-operation with Federal authorities.

Water bags and paper cups will be placed on tripods at convenient points for the relief of thirsty spectators. First-aid equipment also will be provided for use in event of emergencies.

Cumberland Discusses Aid for Idle Youths

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 2.—Harold W. Smith, chairman of the Cumberland Welfare Federation, presided at a meeting of representatives of city and county welfare agencies. The matter of employment for approximately 300 idle youths, between 16 and 25, was discussed. It was shown that these young men are without trades and in the unskilled class, whereas practically all skilled workers, artisans and mechanics are employed.

The Allegany County Welfare Board has only $3,100 available monthly for relief purposes, exclusive of old-age pensions, aid to the blind and dependent children. The Associated Charities has had its case load increased from 150 cases to 183 a month. The increase is due to the lack of county funds and because some are not certified for WPA work.

Reports showed that 250 persons have been dropped from WPA rolls in recent months, having obtained employment.

U. S. Spending to Be Theme of Much Oratory; New Dealers to Be on Defensive.

By Franklyn Waltman

BETWEEN now and next November the country will hear a great deal about a balanced Federal budget; about New Deal extravagance and reckless spending, about deficits and debts and about taxation and burdening generations yet unborn.

WALTMAN.

This talk will come from the Republican orators in the campaign. It will be their strongest issue. The New Dealers would prefer that nothing were said about their spending and the amazing accumulation of debt during their regime. But since they cannot suppress the issue, they will try to persuade the country that what they have done would be cheap at twice the price—or at least at the price incurred.

During the months ahead some Republican spokesmen will attempt to make it appear that the Federal credit is hovering on the brink of disaster—that the spending of another $1,000,000,000 will push it over.

Many New Dealers who have never had more than $1,000 in their hands or bank accounts at one time will say: "Pshaw! we really have not spent anything." They will proceed to explain that the national debt could reach $55,000,000,000 or $75,000,000,000 without anyone feeling it and they themselves will become dizzy with the size of the figures which they recite but which they do not comprehend.

Both sides will resort to exaggeration and to extreme statements one way or another in discussing the fiscal condition of the country, and it will be meaningless to the average man in the street. His only statement will be—and it will be the most sensible of all—"Who's going to pay all this money?"

The ending of the last fiscal year on Tuesday presents an opportunity, before the oratorical barrage starts, to set forth the simple, undisputed facts of the Federal Government's fiscal condition. Nothing that either side can say can change these facts. They may be distorted, interpreted or explained—but they cannot be denied.

Consequently it is well to get in mind the basic facts over which the controversy will rage. The figures used here are taken from the official Treasury records. Piecemeal they have been revealed before, but they have not been put together in this form previously—indeed, they could not have been because the figures for the last fiscal year were not available until yesterday.

The most reliable gage of the condition of the Treasury is the figure for the national debt. Other figures, such as expenditures and revenues, are subject to additions and subtractions. But the gross national debt figure represents what this government owes—and the difference between the national debt in one year and in another represents the amount borrowed.

The national debt on Tuesday night—the end of the 1936 fiscal year—was $33,779,000,000, or $5,078,000,000 more than it was on June 30, 1935. The figure for last Tuesday represents the highest peak which the national debt ever has reached—in war or in peace. The peak of the national debt after the war was $26,596,701,648 on August 31, 1919. The lowest postwar debt totaled $16,026,087,087 on December 31, 1930. Due to the falling off in revenue and the increase in expenditures as a result of the depression the debt ever since has mounted steadily.

Thus from January 1, 1931, to June 30, 1936, the Federal Government went into debt $17,753,000,000. Thus every day during the last five and a half years—including Sundays and holidays—the Government incurred an average debt of $8,836,000. In other words the per capita debt—your share of the national debt—on December 31, 1930, was about $130. It is now about $260. Thus during the depression the national debt burden has just about doubled.

Let us look at this debt figure in another way. Under our present system of retiring debt—that is, at the rate of $500,000,000 annually—a boy born today would still be contributing in his thirty-fifth year to pay off the debt so far incurred in the depression. In other words, at that rate of debt retirement—assuming no further growth in the debt—it will be 1970 before the debt figure will be reduced to where it was in 1930.

Just one word of modification regarding the present national debt figure should be said. The Treasury has not spent all of the $5,078,000,000 which it borrowed in the last year. It has in its cash box $2,225,112,350. Thus of the sum borrowed during the depression only $15,528,000,000 has been spent.

But that sum in the cash box will be spent during this fiscal year because it is estimated the Treasury in the next 12 months will spend at least $2,500,000,000 more than it receives in revenue, making the seventh year of deficits.

But if left at that point, the picture still would not be complete because during the depression Congress set up several agencies—the RFC, the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation and the Home Owners Loan Corporation, with the right to borrow in their own name—but with their debts guaranteed as to both interest and principal by the Treasury.

These agencies on June 30 had outstanding obligations totaling approximately $4,750,000,000. It is expected that these agencies will be able to liquidate this indebtedness by payments they receive from banks, home owners and farmers. Nevertheless, the Treasury is committed to make good any part of that sum which these agencies fail to—so actually the debt commitments of the Treasury stand at $38,500,000,000, or an increase of $22,000,000,000 since January 1, 1931.

So much for the debt—which gives the clearest general picture of the condition of the Treasury. An analysis of Treasury expenditures, receipts and deficits during the depression, however, is necessary to make clear the details—and where we are going. But that will have to wait until tomorrow.

den spurt, Greyhound officials reported. Extra motor coaches were dispatched in every direction. Destinations were North, South, East and West, and by last night the Greyhound lines were compelled to rent buses from short-haul firms to accommodate the swollen business.

Meanwhile counter-balancing the great crowds departing, were other thousands of visitors from many sections of the Nation, pouring into the Capital for Washington's Independence Day celebration on the Monument Grounds, planned by a special committee, headed by C. Melvin Sharpe.

Many of the visitors will also take part in a tour of the historical forts in and about Washington with a picnic lunch at Fort Totten, near Soldiers Home, at noon. The office of National Capital Parks has arranged this feature.

Other events of the Fourth of July observance include athletic meets at several recreation centers and swimming pools, sponsored by citizens' associations.

The National Capital Parks office has announced special traffic regulations will be in effect at the Monument Grounds tomorrow night as more than 100,000 persons are expected to gather there for the elaborate display, procession of flags, martial music and brief patriotic speeches.

The program will begin at 7:15. The fireworks are scheduled to begin an hour and a quarter later, and will include such fancy pyrotechnics as "The Pyramid of Fire," "The Grand Cannonade," "The National Salute," "The Wheel of Wheels," "Two Flying Eagles" and "Battle Scenes." The complete display will require more than half an hour.

In order to keep accidents at a minimum, the Red Cross yesterday warned against careless use of the explosive materials. Parents were asked to supervise close supervision over youngsters and, when possibe, to set off the firecrackers themselves.

The Red Cross also called attention to the fact that tetanus germs are likely to cause infection where the skin has been punctured and advised all persons injured by explosives to have extensive or serious wounds treated with tetanus antitoxin.

Other hazards which annually take a toll of lives and injuries are drowning and traffic accidents, the Red Cross said in urging all motorists to maintain a moderate rate of speed in driving to the beach or picnic grounds. Constant vigilance over all persons in the water, whether in a swimming pool or in the ocean, was recommended. Non-swimmers were warned to stay out of canoes or boats unless accompanied by swimmers.

In issuing the multiple warning, Harold F. Enlows, Red Cross director of first aid and life saving, said: "Common sense and practicability are the greatest preventatives yet known in the prevention of Fourth of July accidents. Use your head and save your skin."

Although department store and other business houses will be closed all day tomorrow the downtown section of the city will wear a festive air as flags, bunting and other patriotic decorations will be used extensively.

Bank Head Arrested In Vermont Larceny

Rutland, Vt., July 2 (AP).—State's attorney, Asa S. Bloomer, said tonight Robert C. Clark, former State bank commissioner, was arrested at Bellows Falls today as an accessory to the larceny of monies from the Marble Savings Bank of Rutland.

Clark was commissioner of banking in Vermont from 1923 to 1934 when he resigned to become treasurer of the Bellows Falls Trust Co., the position he now holds.

Bloomer's warrant charged Clark in eight counts with having knowledge of what Bloomer said was the theft of $10,000 by John J. Cockin from the Marble Savings Bank, and with aiding Cocklin after the theft was committed.

Gov. Charles M. Smith is president of the bank.

Landon Works On First Blast At Democrats

Confers With Aids Over Acceptance Speech in Topeka July 23.

By the Associated Press.

Estes Park, Colo., July 2.—Gov. Alf M. Landon worked tonight with aids on his opening campaign blast at the New Deal—his speech accepting the Republican Presidential nomination to be delivered in Topeka July 23.

Until then, the Kansas Governor said at his press conference, he will not discuss controversial political questions publicly.

"Not Permanent Solution."

Carey said his personal belief was that "benefit payments might be necessary as a temporary expedient but are not a permanent solution to the farm problem."

Landon declined to comment on Carey's representation of his views.

An indication that the farm problem would be dealt with in Landon's acceptance speech was seen in the arrival of Earl H. Taylor, former associate editor of the National Farm Weekly. He is assisting the Governor in preparing agricultural material for the campaign.

With Taylor came Charles P. Taft, Cincinnati attorney and son of the late President, and Ralph West Robey, Columbia University economist, also members of Landon's campaign staff.

Adds Professor to Staff.

Landon said he would leave Estes Park Saturday, spend Sunday with friends in the country near Topeka and return to his office Monday.

The Governor announced a new addition to his campaign staff—Andrew J. Cordier, professor of political science at Manchester College, at North Manchester, Ind. Cordier, an expert on international relations, is now in Topeka. Cordier has served two terms as Wabash County Republican chairman in Indiana.

W. B. Bell, of New York, chairman of the Republican finance committee, will confer with Landon tomorrow.

Confers With Democrats.

Robey said he believed it too early to tell from where Representative William Lemke, Union Party Presidential candidate, would "pull his strength," but added the opinion he would take more votes from the Democrats than from the Republicans.

Gov. Landon conferred with Lee Meriwether, St. Louis Democrat.

Meriwether declared he would "support Landon with twice the enthusiasm with which I supported Roosevelt in 1932.

"With Landon in the White House, Western States, which have been treated like provinces, will get a fair deal," Carey said after his meeting with the Kansan. "He knows our problems."

Martin Confident.

New York, July 2 (AP).—Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, Eastern campaign manager for the Republican Party, today said after a trip through New England he was confident Gov. Alf M. Landon would carry all the New England States.

Eastern industrial centers "feel the New Deal has been a hardship to them," he declared. "This is particularly true in the textile centers.

"New England is all Republican. We're going to carry every State for Landon and make a substantial gain in Congress. We're not worrying about New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Pennsylvania is always a doubtful State, but we are positive that when the votes are in it will be on the Republican side."

Martin left for Washington late in the day after leasing an entire floor of an office building for Eastern campaign headquarters.

From Washington the Massachusetts Congressman planned to go to Chicago for a conference Monday with John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, and to talk over plans with Gov. Landon in Topeka Tuesday.

Bette Davis' Strike Finds Warner Firm

Hollywood, July 2 (AP).—Jack L. Warner, vice president of Warner Bros. Motion Picture Studio, replied today to Actress Bette Davis' walkout demand for a new contract with the statement, "We intend to make her live up to her obligation to the studio."

The film executive said the actress is endeavoring to repudiate her contract "and has refused to report for work unless her demands for an exorbitant salary are met."

"The dispute is based on something more than the question of salary," a statement from Warner said. "It involves the principle of whether or not Bette Davis or any other player can snap their fingers at their moral and legal obligations to the studio to which they are bound by contract."

He said the studio gave the blonde star a new contract "with a considerable increase in salary about a year ago."

New Japanese Envoy To China Maps Work

Nanking, China, July 2 (AP).—Japan's new ambassador to China, Shigeru Kawagoe, said tonight immediately after his arrival that he would lose no time in taking up Sino-Japanese problems with Chinese leaders.

He plans to discuss three principles of Japanese policy in China as enunciated recenty by Premier Koki Hirota—cessation of the anti-Japanese movement, a common front against Communists, and economic collaboration between the two countries.

Economic issues, the diplomat said, are more important at the present time than political ones, especially the question of Japanese co-operation in the development of Chinese communications and railways.

Convention Zealot Stirs Feather Storm

Philadelphia, July 2 (AP).—A zealot for peace, who invaded the Democratic National Convention gasbed last week in an Indian bonnet, waged a feather-storm campaign today.

From a hotel window, high in the City Hall area, he poured cases and bags of feathers. A light breeze carried them for blocks.

He shook his headgear at a mounted policeman who shouted for him to stop, dumped out the remaining feathers and disappeared from the hotel. Clerks would not give his name and said only that he was from Wichita, Kans.

Police attempted to clean the feathers from the streets. They didn't have much success until someone suggested wetting them down with a fire hose.

Hamilton

"No Other Way to Go."

"Looking at the depression in the light of knowledge and common sense," he said, "we know today that throughout this country and the world the tide of depression reached its ebb in July of 1932. That being the case, there was, as Gov. Landon pointed out, no other direction for business to go except up.

The decision of Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York to run again was commented on by Hamilton in this manner:

"And in the last few days supporters of the Administration have been disheartened by the extraordinary spectacle of their candidate for President so uncertain of carrying his own State that he must draft the aid of a Governor, whom he himself placed in office, at the sacrifice of the man's own personal preferences and probably political future."

Former President Herbert Hoover wired to the diners addressed by Hamilton that he was confident "of Republican success under Mr. Hamilton's leadership."

Hamilton contrasted the Republican and Democratic platforms, charging the latter with "omissions and evasions."

"The Republican platform," he said, "approaches governmental policies from the standpoint of the welfare of the people, while the Roosevelt platform is willing to subordinate the interests of the ordinary man and woman whenever that may be necessary to perpetuate itself in power."

Sympathizes With Farley.

In passing, Hamilton expressed sympathy for Postmaster General James Farley in bearing the "brunt of criticism for the blunders of his associates." He recalled that Farley took the blame "when it was discovered that they had added new stamps to their collections" and in the "cancellation of the air mail contracts and the subsequent loss of 12 Army pilots in the Government's attempt to fly the mail."

The demonstration for Mr. Roosevelt when he accepted the Democratic nomination at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, Hamilton laid to "stage management." He said it was reported that 50,000 of the audience "were brought down by truck and bus from Jersey City under contract with Democratic boss Mayor Hague."

In a press conference, Hamilton said campaign contributions had been received from 70,000 to 80,000 persons so far.

"We have more than half as many subscriptions in now, in these few weeks, as we have ever had during a full campaign," he said.

Confident of Farmers.

The farm situation, from a Republican standpoint, is "a lot better than anyone on the Democratic side would have you believe."

"Of course," he added, "the Democrats are going to spend millions of dollars out here in one form or another—in view of this drought—but that isn't going to buy the American farmer, in my opinion."

The Republican campaign strategy, he said, will stress that "a great many men supporting Mr. Roosevelt are against the American form of government and have been for years, according to their public utterances.

"Mr. Roosevelt," he added, "was thoroughly familiar with that when he took them on."

A political observer he refused to name had estimated that the Democrats would not carry 15 States, including the Solid South, Hamilton said.

"I think that's much more than the Democrats actually will get," Hamilton added. "I think they'll have a hell of a time carrying six or seven States."

46c Collected On Each Dollar Spent by U.S.

Deficit for the Year Totals $4,764,000,000, Final Figures Reveal.

By the Associated Press.

For every dollar that the Government spent in the fiscal year just closed, final figures revealed yesterday that it collected 46 cents in revenues.

The result was that expenditures exceeded receipts by $4,764,000,000, addipg up to the largest peace-time deficit in the history of the country.

The receipts were $4,116,000,000, or $316,000,000 greater than in the previous year, but the increase in revenues was offset by greater disbursements, including $1,673,000,000 for the soldiers' bonus.

The total outgo was $8,880,000,000, or $1,504,000,000 more than the $7,376,000,000 that was spent in the fiscal year 1935. The gross public debt rose from $28,701,000,000 to $33,779,000,000, an increase of $5,078,000,000.

President's Estimates.

In a supplemental statement Secretary Morgenthau recalled that a net deficit of $2,682,000,000 was estimated in the President's budget message to Congress last January. He noted, however, that an outlay of $1,673,000,000 for the soldiers' bonus and a loss of about $452,000,000 of expected revenue through invalidation of the processing taxes were not included in that budget.

"Had it not been for these two items the net deficit for the year just closed would have amounted to approximately $2,236,000,000, or about $446,000,000 less than the amount estimated in the budget submitted to Congress in January, 1936," he said.

The net deficit for the fiscal year 1935 amounted to $3,002,000,000, he recalled.

Income Taxes.

Income taxes amounted to $1,426,000,000, an increase of $327,000,000 over last year; miscellaneous internal revenue totaled $2,010,000,000, an increase of $353,000,000; customs receipts aggregated $387,000,000, an increase of $44,000,000; miscellaneous receipts from sundry sources totaled $216,000,000, an increase of $36,000,000; and processing taxes on farm products totaled $77,000,000, a decrease of $444,000,000 below the amount for 1935.

Total expenditures compared with $7,376,000,000 paid out in the fiscal year 1935. In addition to the $100,000,000 paid in the adjusted service certificate fund, the expenditures for the year included $1,673,000,000 of payments to war veterans.

$5,000,000,000 Increase.

"Deducting this latter amount from the total expenditures for the year, leaves expenditures for all other accounts of $7,207,000,000," Morgenthau explained in his statement. "This compares with an estimated expenditure as contained in the 1937 budget of $7,645,000,000."

The gross public debt showed an increase of $5,078,000,000 over last year. However, the Treasury now has a general fund balance of $2,681,000,000 as compared with a balance of only $1,841,000,000 last year. Included also in the present indebtedness are adjusted service bonds, issued in payment of adjusted service certificates and still to be retired amounting to $945,000,000.

B. & A. Road Asks For Refinancing

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 2.—The Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad asked the public service commission today to approve a complete plan of refinancing the company, which took over part of the old Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad last fall.

The railroad proposes to issue $750,000 in bonds, which may be pledged to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as security for a loan. The proceeds of this loan would pay the railroad's debt to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, which loaned the new company $350,000 last fall. The rest of the proceeds would be available for new development and improvements.

An issue of stock totaling $1,250,000 is the second part of the refinancing plan. Of the total, $475,000 would be in common stock and $775,000 in preferred. This will be given to the bondholders of the old Baltimore & Annapolis Short Line for their first and second lien bonds on part of the new company's property. The company's petition said that more than 90 per cent of the bondholders had agreed to the exchange.

23 Known Dead As Texas Flood Havoc Spreads

Many Missing, Damage to Crops Mounts; Loss May Exceed $4,000,000

By the Associated Press.

San Antonio, Tex., July 2.—Floods poured new destruction into south Texas tonight, leaving 23 known dead, many missing and steadily increasing crop and property damage over a widening area.

Stricken sections appealed for aid over crippled communication lines, and downstream towns braced for flood crests swelled by fresh rains. Hundred of thousands of farm acres lay stripped of corn and cotton crops.

Twenty-three bodies have been recovered. Gonzales, 60 miles south of here in the sector hardest-hit, reported at least two lowland families missing.

Gonzales County alone, through County Judge Willis Ellison, estimated its crop and property damage at well over $1,000,000. Officials of the stricken areas expressed the belief total damage would exceed the $4,000,000 loss in spring floods and tornadoes of 1935.

Leesville, hamlet of 250 persons isolated for 36 hours, was a scene of ruin. Water surged through the streets from five to ten feet deep. A building was flooded, food was ruined and wells were polluted.

First news of Leesville's plight reached Gonzales through the son of Mrs. Lizzie Wyatt. He walked to town to buy a casket for his mother, a paralysis victim, at the height of the flood. Leesville residents spent a night of terror on roof tops—only points of safety. Mrs. Wyatt's death was the only one reported.

State sanitation engineers went to the area with typhoid vaccine, chlorine solutions for muddied water supplies and creosote solutions for inundated homes. Health department workers dragged carcasses of dead cattle through mud for mass cremations.

Hundreds of destitute families in Gonzales County, fearing pestilence and stripped of household possessions, pleaded for Red Cross aid. D. H. Kenton, county Red Cross chairman, estimated there were 400 homeless families there.

Lynn Smith, president of the Chamber of Commerce, telegraphed United States Senators Tom Connally and Morris Sheppard, pleading for immediate release of approved PWA projects and other forms of Federal assistance.

Above Hardy's Bluff, where a ranching family of four was drowned yesterday, came reports of a family named Ivy, the number of its members unknown, being swept away. Below Gonzales an unconfirmed report that a Mexican family had been drowned added to the fear of a rising death list. Two hundred pipeline workers trudged through mud in search of bodies.

Seventeen bodies have been recovered in Hays County, where the usually placid Plum and Wood creeks rampaged for hours and caused a train wreck that killed two.

The bodies of Natalia Gonzales, 3, and Rodrigo Garza, 8, last of nine members of two Mexican families swept down Wood Creek, were recovered. The nine bodies were placed in a grave 15 by 17 feet, and given joint burial on the outskirts of Kyle.

The Guadalupe River, which flooded more than 300,000 acres in Gonzales County, pushed downstream toward Cuero, rippling out over 10,000 acres in a steady 18-inch-an-hour rise.

Homes were evacuated at Three Rivers as the Nueces, Frio and Atascosa rivers, which converge on outskirts of the village, started a rapid rise. Nueces floodwaters lapped on the grounds of the Federal subsistence home project southeast of Three Rivers.

Suspect Arrested In Mail Bombing

Philadelphia, July 2 (AP).—Chief Postal Inspector J. W. Johnston said today that Michael Fugeman has been taken into custody for questioning in the Good Friday mail bombings which killed three and injured two at Wilkes-Barre.

Johnston said that Fugeman's home in Hanover Township, south of Wilkes-Barre, had been searched "under proper warrant" by postal officers and State police. He refused to say whether anything significant to the investigation had been found.

"This man has been in the picture since April," Johnston said.

The bombs sent through the mail last April killed Thomas Maloney, president of a defunct independent mine union, his 4-year-old son, Thomas, and Michael Gallagher, a cemetery sexton.

Investigators at the time said a judge, a former sheriff, a mine disputes umpire, and a mine superintendent, had been marked for death. The bombs were homemade. Six lethal packages were mailed. Two of them exploded.

$1.18, at Kansas City 99¼, and at Winnipeg 84¼. Liverpool wheat advanced 4 cents.

The rules permit only 5 cents advance in wheat prices during one session in domestic markets. At Winnipeg the limit in force today was 3 cents. Wheat sold up to the limits in each market, and despite heavy profit taking, particularly in Chicago, held there. After the markets were closed the Winnipeg exchange increased its limit from 3 to 5 cents, effective tomorrow.

Indicating many traders expect sharply higher wheat prices tomorrow, "offerings" ranged more than 4 to 5 cents above closing prices during the half hour of trading in indemnities that followed the close on the board of trade.

Chicago corn prices, rising the 4-cent limit, closed at a new top for the season, with July selling at 72@72¾ cents. Oats, rye and barley also were at new seasonal highs.

Traders virtually ignored reports that rain was expected in parts of the domestic Northwest tomorrow, pointing out that much of the crop was ruined past redemption. Fears were centered on the Canadian belt, where crop damage reports increased. A Canadian surplus was the chief reliance of importing countries and many traders believed the serious losses incurred by United States wheat would prevent this country from becoming an export nation.

United States to Buy Cattle.

Livestock producers in the drought areas tonight were extended the promise of immediate relief in the form of a Government cattle purchase program similar to that of 1934.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace announced his aproval of the program to take as many as 1,000,000 cattle off the ranges when he arived to address a meting of the Minnesota Bankers Association.

He abandoned his planned tour of the drought sector—extreme west central Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana and Wyoming. Instead, he planned to go to Des Moines to handle administrative matters before setting out on his "first vacation in seven years."

Secretary Wallace sent a telegram to J. W. Tapp, chairman of President Roosevelt's special drought committee in Washington, saying of the cattle purchase plan:

"Purchases should be arranged so as to effect largest measure of relief to producers without enhancing the beef prices to consumers. Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation should arrange to dispose of meats salvaged by donation to State relief agencies."

He declared movement of cattle to sections outside the drought area for grazing, resorted to in the 1934 emergency, would not be repeated.

In Washington, Tapp indicated a tentative allotment of $5,000,000 had been made available.

Tapp said several days would be required to perfect the program and begin purchases. If sufficient rainfall is received in the drought area in the next 10 or 15 days, he added, extensive cattle programs will not be necessary, although machinery for the operation will be prepared.

With an estimated 100,000 Northwest farm families needing subsistence aid, the drought committee planned to press the general relief program into definte form next week. On the drought front in five Northwestern States, WPA administrators hurried machinery to set 50,000 men to work building conservation dams, roads and other public projects to provide them with an income.

As the rain center, which brought floods causing at least 23 south Texas deaths and more than $1,000,000 in crop and property losses, moved eastward over parched Dixie, drought damage in the Southeastern States was figured at $150,000,000.

To this, Chicago statisticians added at least $100,000,000 for America's spring wheat belt alone and asserted Canadian drought losses would add possibly as much as $75,000,000.

Northwest reports told of trainloads of stock being rushed from withered prairies. At Rapid City, S. Dak., observers said the livestock exodus equalled that of the 1934 drought.

Lewis Warns Steel Operators

speaking slowly, she added:

"I hope they will not do anything foolish and against the public interest and themselves. I hope they do not get nervous and panicky."

She said an adequate force of Federal agents had been dispatched to the steel area to watch the situation.

The Lewis committee's pronouncement noted that in addition to the ten union chiefs present, representing more than 1,000,000 workers, two new national organizations were accepted into membership yesterday: the United Rubber Workers and the United Automobile Workers of America.

In this connection, a sentence in the statement issued by the group last night served to stand off the demands of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor that the committee cease its efforts. The A. F. of L., craft union in type of organization, has sought through its chief, William Green, to force Lewis to abandon his mass-union plan. The statement said:

"The committee briefly discussed the letters sent by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to the organizations associated with the committee for industrial organization. The committee took no action on the matter, as the members deemed it inconceivable that the executive council would commit any act to split the labor forces in the midst of the campaign in the iron and steel industry and in the face of the arrogant ultimatum issued to the entire labor movement by the American Iron and Steel Institute."

In outlining its campaign of unionization, the committee reported that Philip Murray, chairman of the steel workers' organizing committee, had established headquarters in Pittsburgh, appointed regional directors in the principal iron and steel areas in every substantial steel community east of the Rocy Mountains, and had made "gratifying progress" in securing new members.

"Arrangements were consummated to provide the organizing forces with adequate financial assistance, legal protection and necessary facilities of every character. Reports indicate that the threatening statement of the American Iron and Steel Institute, as announced by the public press and in full-page paid advertisements in 375 newspapers, have brought home to the employes in the iron and steel industry the imperative necessity of organizing to protect their economic status and to compete with the arrogant dictatorship, as represented by the corporations in that industry."

A convention of iron and steel workers will be held in or near Chicago Sunday, and another in or near Cleveland Tuesday. At Homestead, Pa., a memorial service will be held for "victims of the riot of 1892, shot down by guns held by detectives employed by the Carnegie Steel Co."

The committee promised that when thousands of workers have been enrolled in the industrial unions, the American Iron and Steel Institute will be approached, as the industry's spokesman, and invited to engage in "a conference to work out the labor problems of the industry in accordance with the rules of modern collective bargaining."

The statement then declared:

"If the corporations in the industry are in accord with modern thought as affecting industrial relations, then obviously the industry and country can be spared the distress incident to industrial strife on a broad front."

The institute's advertisement, widely attacked on editorial pages, had said:

"The steel industry will use its resources to the best of its ability to protect its employes and their families from intimidation, coercion and violence, and to aid them in maintaining collective bargaining free from interference from any source."

The institute's position is that the company unions, which opponents assert are company-dictated, are a better manifestation of the "free rights of labor" than the industrial unions of the type proposed by Lewis.

The attitude some employers will take to their workers was hinted today when B. F. Fairless, president of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, asked his employes to remain loyal to the company union plan, and warned them against "outside" organizers.

In the meantime the position of the Lewis comittee on three vital problems was cleared somewhat. The members needed to take a definite position preparatory to the July 8 meeting, when they face the executive council of the A. F. of L., on whether they will cease efforts to increase industrial unionization. They had to outline strategy for the steel fight, and determine whether to concentrate on the steel struggle or attack on all fronts.

They now have put the burden on the A. F. of L. of deciding whether to attempt to punish "the rebels." It is evident there will be no cessation of efforts to organize on all fronts, and they have tossed the gauntlet to the steel corporations "to start something," in the opinion of veteran labor observers.

On Monday night John L. Lewis will make a radio address on "Industrial Democracy in Steel," at 9:30 p. m. over the National Broadcasting Company's blue network.

It appeared that none of the industrial organizations would even attend the July 8 meeting with the A. F. of L. in view of the statement yesterday.

Meanwhile Senator Robert M. LaFollette (Progressive), Wisconsin, was expected to announce shortly his plans for the Senate Labor Cmmittee's inquiry into the use of firearms and spies in labor troubles.

Army Seeking Flood Control Fund of WPA

Engineers Petition for Money to Begin Surveys on Projects.

The Board of Army Engineers petitioning the Works Progress Administration for funds to begin surveys, engineering plans and dam borings on the more important projects approved by Congress in the $320,000,000 omnibus claims bill, it was announced yesterday.

How large a sum will be required was not revealed, but one official said the amount would be "substantial." If the petition for funds is approved the money will not be used for actual construction, but all preliminary work will be completed so there will be no delay when Congress appropriates for building.

Engineers pointed out that much of the work connected with surveys could be done by unskilled labor. This fact is being impressed upon Harry L. Hopkins, work progress administrator, in the hope he will make the money available.

Army engineers are critical of the failure of Congress to appropriate for flood control.

"The projects in that bill are the finest Congress has ever approved," said one member of the corps. "They would pay for themselves through the lives and property they would protect."

Meanwhile, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes announced at his press conference that an interdepartmental committee would be set up shortly to determine which projects authorized under the bill were most desirable. The National Resources Committee, of which Ickes is chairman, will co-operate with Army engineers.

Representative Bert Lord (Republican), issued a statement from his home in Binghamton, N. Y., saying that emergency flood control in New York, Pennsylvania and other areas could not wait until next year when Congress convenes.

"Only a word from the President would have been necessary to the House Appropriations Committee and the House and Senate leaders to have put into the last deficiency bill the $50,000,000 suggested by the authorization bill," Lord said.

"If the President has absorbed the information which has been available to him from every source, Congressional, civic and engineering, he knows that the emergency flood control items cannot wait until next year."

Panama's U. S. Envoy And Brother Resign

Panama City, Panama, July 2 (AP).—Ricardo Alfaro, Minister to Washington, resigned his post today supposedly because of disapproval of the government's attitude in the present political situation.

His brother, Horatio Alfaro, finance minister, also resigned.

Both resignations were accepted and no appointments announced.

Action Will Close Last Channel for Illegal Liquor Into U. S.

By the Associated Press.

After months of negotiation the United States has obtained a pledge of Belgian co-operation in plugging what officials have termed the last remaining "spigot" through which illicit rum and alcohol have poured into this country.

The Belgian government has informed Ambassador Nelson Morris that it will take effective measures to prevent ships flying the Belgian flag from continuing to unload illicit alcohol on the high seas for transshipment in "rumrunners" to the American coast.

Since the United States has similar co-operative agreements with Canada, Cuba, France, Great Britain and Mexico—who control the gateways to the American borders—the understanding with Belgium would close the last major channel past American tariff and excise tax collectors.

Foreign alcohol, made for only a few cents a gallon, is subject to a tariff of $5 a proof gallon and $2 excise tax a gallon. Some American officials estimate that at least 500,000 gallons, made in Belgium, have been smuggled into this country during the last year.

The cheap Belgian alcohol, officials said, has been "cut," colored and mixed to be sold as whisky, gin, rum and other liquor.

Belgian law makes it possible for alcohol manufactured there to be loaded without clearance papers showing the destination of the cargo. The "effective means" to be taken by Belgium are presumed by officials here to indicate that clearance papers naming a definite port may be required for future shipments.

Science Teachers Elect Miss Scott Treasurer

Miss Esther Scott, Washington public school teacher, was elected treasurer of the National Department of Science Instructors at their convention in Portland, Oreg., yesterday, according to the Associated Press.

Lillian C. Compton, of Cumberland, Md., was elected secretary of the group, which is meeting in connection with the National Education Association convention.

Puppy's Playfulness Injures Two in Crash

The playfulness of a young puppy caused the driver of an automobile to crash head-on into a tree yesterday, injuring the driver and a passenger.

The car, driven by Jane E. Reese, 19, of 3232 Military road northwest, crashed into the tree in the 6500 block Sixteenth street northwest, when a puppy owned by Miss Reese jumped from the back to the front seat, causing her to swerve.

Miss Reese and a passenger, Owen C. Dunne, 23, of 3301 N street northwest, were treated at Walter Reed Hospital for cuts.

Operation Charge Holds D. C. Doctor

Dr. Macpherson Crichton, Washington physician, was arrested yesterday and charged with performing an illegal operation on a warrant sworn against him by Theodora Sharlot, of 81 Linden avenue, Middleton, N. Y.

Dr. Crichton was released under $1,000 bond, pending action of the grand jury.

The arrest was made at Dr. Crichton's home, 1715 H street northwest, by Detective Sergts. D. H. Jones and C. H. Mansfield.

2 Traffic Lanes In Chain Bridge Are Considered

Vehicles Would Not Be Allowed to Pass, Sultan Says.

The new Chain Bridge probably will have only two traffic lanes and cover 24 feet in width, instead of 36 feet with three lanes, Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, said yesterday.

While plans will not be drafted for several months, Col. Sultan has been studying the general design of the span for which Congress appropriated $250,000 and authorized $350,000 in the 1937 District act.

With only two traffic lanes, the passing of motor vehicles on the bridge will be prohibited as at present. Col. Sultan said he believed this will be conducive to fewer accidents than would three lanes, one of which would be used for passing.

The bridge in general will resemble the present structure, being of steel framework, and it will rest on the same piers that have held the old bridge for a generation. However, it will be raised 8 feet on the Virginia side and 5 feet on the District side, and the District approach will be made less abrupt.

It is probable that actual construction of the bridge will not begin for a year as District officials are wary of letting a contract before the entire $350,000 authorized is made available. They are afraid

Educators Pick Pratt to Head National Group

Spokane Meeting Opposes Military Training in U. S. Schools.

By the Associated Press.

Portland, Ore., July 2.—Orville C. Pratt, superintendent of Spokane, Wash., schools, was elected president of the National Education Association tonight in a close race with William H. Holmes, Mount Vernon, N. Y., school superintendent.

Pratt succeeds Miss Agnes Samuelson, who becomes first vice president. She is State superintendent of public instruction in Iowa.

Vigorous opposition to compulsory military training in public schools was voiced today by the association.

The educators adopted the report of a resolutions committee which opposed war, military training and warned of "danger to the fundamental principles of democracy" in academic restrictions.

The report urged repeal of the Congressional restriction against the teaching of communism in the District of Columbia schools and sought "full support of the tenure of position for teachers."

The educators pledged support of a Congressional measure which would provide a maximum of $300,000,000 annually in Federal funds to aid education and recommended a permanent Federal division for youth education.

In their protest against compulsory military training the educators did not go so far as the resolutions committee had recommended. A phrase calling attention to the "tendency to militarize schools and colleges through increasing support and expansion of the Reserve Officers Training Corps," was stricken from the original resolution before adoption.

Tonight the educators listened to a three-sided political debate participated in by Democratic Gov. Paul V. McNutt of Indiana, former Representative Burton L. French, of Idaho, a Republican, and Norman Thomas, Socialist Presidential candidate.

"The Democratic platform does not retreat," said McNutt. "It does not make reckless promises."

"The Republican Party," French argued, "regards the Constitution as the great bulwark of American liberties, but it recognizes change."

Jury Awards $5,000 To Crash Victim's Estate

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., July 2.—Damages amounting to $5,000 were awarded the estate of Radcliffe Merchant, son of T. D. Merchant, of Purcellville, in the suit in Loudoun County Circuit Court against Dr. J. B. Hackley and his son, J. B. Hackley, jr., also of Purcellville. The three-day case closed this afternoon and the jury deliberated one hour and a half.

The suit grew out of the death of Radcliffe Merchant, Richmond Medical College student, who was killed October 21, 1934, when the car in which he was riding with young Hackley, a V. M. I. student, crashed into a bridge abutment in Richmond. The boys had attended a dance together in Richmond and were on their way home when the accident occurred. Hackley was injured.

Staff of Theater Ends Salary Strike in Paris

Paris, July 2 (AP).—A two-day occupation of the Opera Comique by its entire staff—including actors, singers and dancers—ended tonight.

The 300 strikers agreed to give Jean Zay, minister of education, a "free hand" in negotiating a settlement of their demands, among which were reorganization of the theater, dismissal of the director and payment of back salaries.

Their leaders said they decided to withdraw because they believed continuance of occupation "would be interpreted as an act of distrust" of the government.

Her Feet Stepped On

CAROL FRINK,

'I'm a Genius,' First Wife Told By MacArthur

Stepped on Feet When He Made Love, She Says in Balm Trial.

second and present wife, listened, was the sort of a story MacArthur himself might have written. And the courtroom was thronged.

The courtship began in 1920, Miss Frink declared, "at the water cooler" and "back of the files" in the office of the Herald and Examiner, Chicago newspaper where both were employed.

MacArthur, a new rewrite man from the Chicago Tribune, "made no impression" on Miss Frink, she said, until she went on an assignment on a street car one day and found him following in a taxicab. By motioning through the windows, he persuaded her into the cab.

She said their first "date" was at dinner, when he jumped up to greet her and "spilled water all over the table."

Then they went to an outdoor concert.

"We were holding hands in Ravina Park," Miss Frink continued, "when he suddenly grabbed hold of me, swung me around, stepped on my feet, kissed me on the nose, and said he loved me."

"When we came to our senses," the witness continued, the band shell was dark and the place was locked. They climber over a fence and "waited a long time for a local" train.

The conductor came for their tickets, she said, and MacArthur told him:

"This is the girl I'm going to marry. How do you like her?"

After that the playwright proposed. She quoted him:

"Take a chance and marry me."

"And what did you say?" Her counsel, Sam Golan, asked.

"I said this is so sudden."

The crowd laughed so hard the judge had to rap for order.

Miss Frink went on to tell how she sent MacArthur back to Chicago from their wedding in New York "to pay his debts." Discussion of the debts was cut off by Judge Walter La Buy's order until the prosecution should establish its major premise—that Helen Hayes alienated MacArthur's affections while he was still wed to Miss Frink.

He did not marry the actress until two years after Miss Frink divorced him.

MacArthur, who took the stand briefly before Miss Frink as a witness for Miss Hayes, was indefinite about the whole affair.

Asked whether he remembered when he and Miss Frink were married, he replied:

"Not exactly. About 1920."

He was asked to identify letters alleged to have been written by him to his first wife. Of one he said:

"That sounds like me in 1920."

Of another:

"That's pretty sloppy handwriting."

"But is it yours?" asked Lawyer Golan.

"I'll say it's mine if you like."

"Not if I like. Is it yours?"

"Let's say it's mine."

"Not let's say—is it your handwriting?"

"Yes."

Asked what were "all those x's on the bottom of one letter, MacArthur replied:

"Yes, they were kisses."

The signature on the letter was: "The Big Slob."

"I called myself the Big Slob," the playwright explained soberly.

Cumberland Opens Playground Season

Cumberland, Md., July 2 (AP).—Cumberland's four public playgrounds, to which children made over 36,000 visits last summer, opened today for the summer season, lasting until September 1.

Formal ceremonies were discarded except at 12, the South Cumberland Playground, where city and county officials spoke at the opening at 7 p. m. The residents of South Cumberland are attempting to raise funds to add equipment for their playground. Mayor Thomas W. Koon was the principal speaker.

More than 1,000 children thronged to the other playground, play leaders said, to use the various swings, whirls and sliding boards. The organization of the playgrounds is patterned after the Baltimore system, and the two leaders at each field keep a daily record of the number of visits and the activities of the children.

The playgrounds are under the supervision of the city, which contributes $1,500 a year for their upkeep. The two double tennis courts on the North End Field are the only public courts in the city.

City Officers Installed.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 2.—Climaxing one of the closest municipal elections here in years C. H. Dailey, Republican, last night was sworn in as mayor of Martinsburg, along with four Republicans and three Democratic councilmen. The certificates of election were issued only after recounts had been made in every councilmanic contest, as well as in the race for mayor, in which A. S. Peery was the defeated candidate. The election was held June 9.

District Will Replace Marked Safety Zones

Safety zones along Wisconsin avenue from Massachusetts avenue to the District line, removed during recent paving operations, will be replaced starting today, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer announced yesterday.

Although several other cities have found that raised islands provide better protection to pedestrians and street-car patrons, Van Duzer said the steel "button" and white-line type of zones have proved successful here. Only seven persons have been injured this year while standing in safety zones, he added.

Mrs. Crossman, 81, Succumbs at Home

Mrs. Ida E. Crossman, widow of William D. Crossman, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Alice Waite, 4525 Ninth street northwest. She was 81, and a resident of this city since childhood.

Mrs. Crossman was a member of the Wilbur Class of Calvary Baptist Church. She had been ill for two months. Mrs. Crossman was born in Baltimore and moved to Washington at an early age.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Waite and Mrs. L. B. Gray, of 1817 Lamont street northwest; five grandchildren, one great-grandchild and four sisters.

Funeral services will be held today at 1 p. m. at S. H. Hines funeral home. Interment will follow in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Kents Are Reported Awaiting Second Child

London, July 2 (AP).—Mayfair heard rumors today the Duchess of Kent is expecting a second child.

Some sources suggested that might have been one of the reasons for a recent dental operation undergone by the Duchess.

She has been seen but little in public for some weeks, and has been living at Coppins Iver, Buckinghamshire.

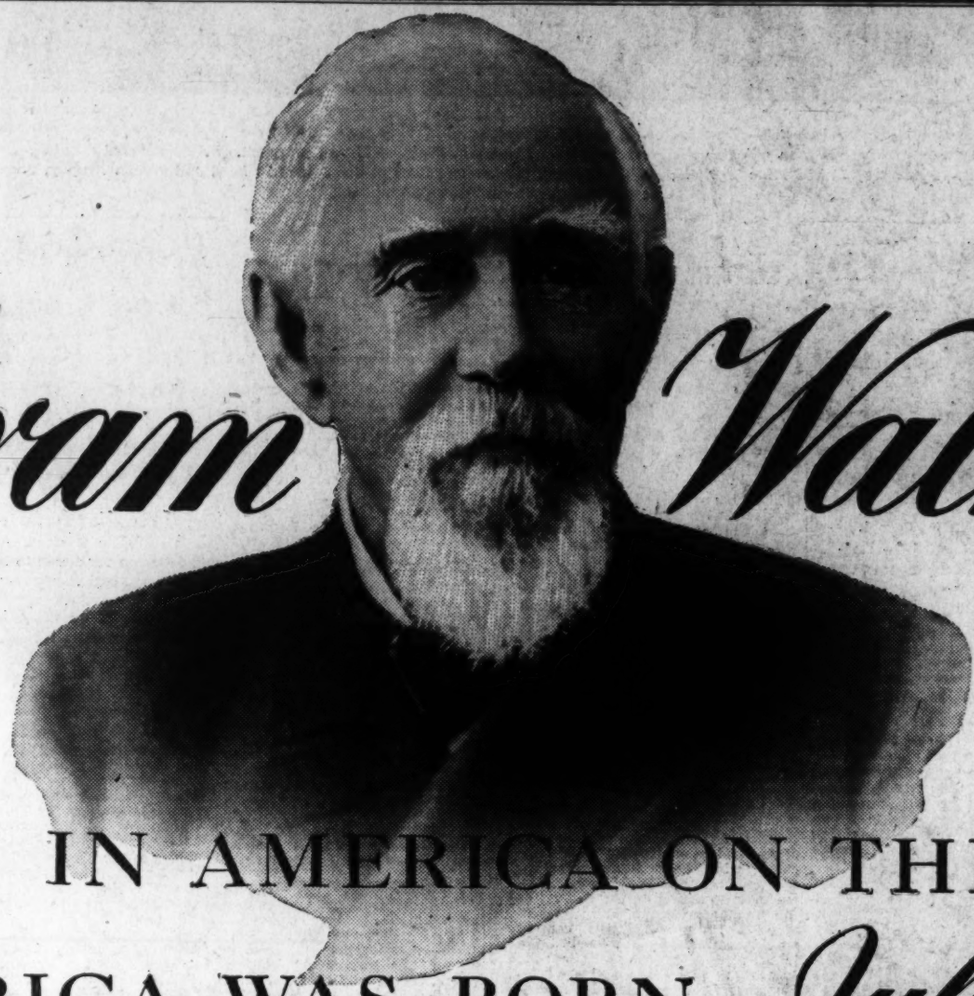
A news magazine openly hinted little Prince Edward, who was born to the Kents last October 9, soon would have a playmate.

Rain Aids Tomatoes.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., July 2.—Rains the past few days have refreshed the early tomato crop and increased the yield. The demand still is good and the farmers are selling the tomatoes readily at 60 cents a basket, which is considered a fair price.

Hiram Walker



BORN IN AMERICA ON THE DAY AMERICA WAS BORN... July 4th

THE happiest fate that can befall a man is to be born an American and to be equal to an American's opportunities. And, if there is one day better than any other day to be born on, it would seem to be the Fourth of July.

Hiram Walker was born in Douglas, Massachusetts, forty years to the day after the Declaration of Independence was signed, born without the handicap of any special advantages.

We pay this tribute to his memory, not so much because he was a world-famous figure at 83, but because in these times it seems of special significance that he was a failure at 41.

His first business venture was a tannery that was wiped out by fire, and his second was a grocery business that was wrecked in the panic of the '50's. But he remained true to the American tradition that failures are the most useful ingredients of success.

In 1857, operating with the faith and vision that survives limited resources, he laid the foundation of a distillery destined to become the largest independent business of its kind in the world.

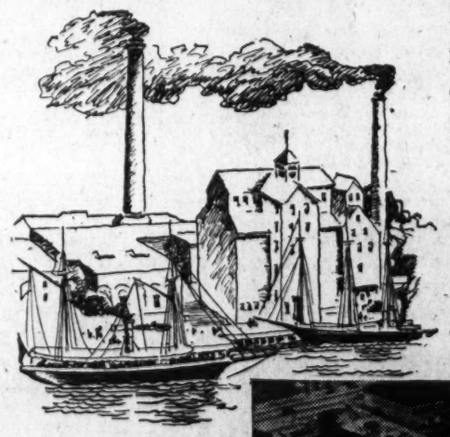
A Life-long American

Hiram Walker, born an American, lived and died an American citizen. He couldn't forget he was born on the 4th of July... and when two years ago we completed the greatest monument to his memory, the opening ceremonies and the "old man's" birthday naturally came together.

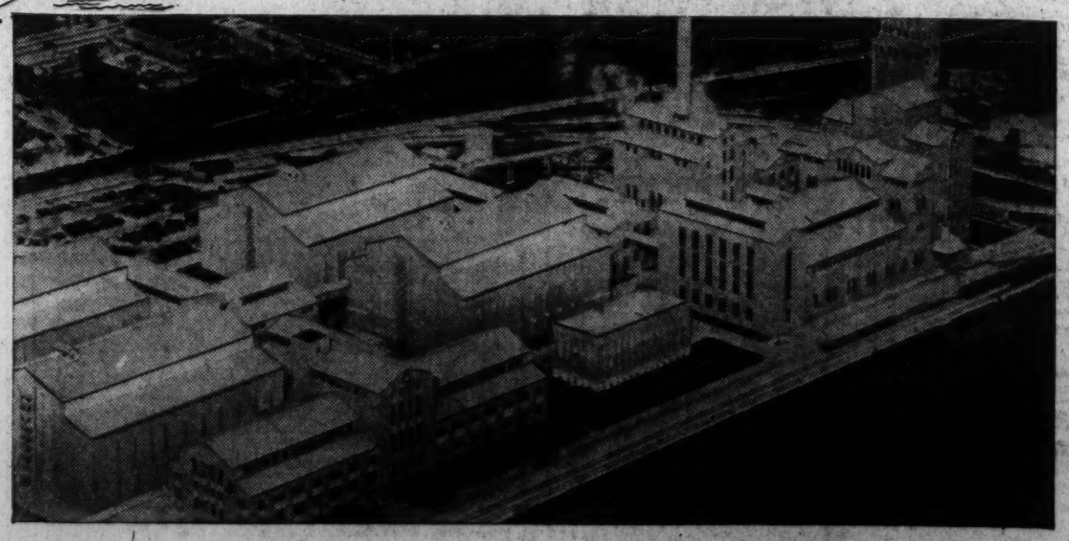
For, the great nine million dollar Hiram Walker Distillery, at Peoria, Illinois, the largest plant of its kind in the world, was dedicated to the memory of the founder on the 118th anniversary of the founder... July 4th, 1934.

Now, it is true, as Emerson says, that a great institution is the lengthened shadow of one man. But it is also the composite shadow of many men, who carry on and perpetuate the heritage of one man's foresight and enterprise and thereby prove how well and true the founder built.

Today, the two great Hiram Walker organizations, one in America and one in Canada... one operating the largest distillery in the world at Peoria, the other conducting the original plant at Walkerville, Ontario, now grown to enormous proportions... testify to the devotion and loyalty of succeeding generations to the faith and principles of the founder.



Birthplace of "CANADIAN CLUB" ...the original Hiram Walker distillery, at Walkerville, Ontario, erected in 1857.



New American Home... HIRAM WALKER'S DISTILLERY at Peoria, Illinois... dedicated on July 4th, 1934. It was built at a cost of over $9,000,000 and is the world's largest, most modern and best-equipped distillery.

Street Fighting Follows Deaths In Mexico Riots

Inquiry Into Killing of 13 in Yucatan Ordered by Cardenas.

By the Associated Press.

Merida, Yucatan, July 2.—Scattered street fighting was reported tonight as organized labor's indignation ran high following yesterday's rioting in which police killed 13 and wounded 51 in a strike demonstration.

Federal troops guarded the city's peace as the government began an investigation into the deaths of 12 farmers and laborers and a physician who were in the crowd of striking bus drivers demonstrating before the palace of Gov. Fernando Lopez Cardenas.

Police Inspector Leopold Espinosa was suspended and Maj. Pedro Larios named to replace him.

Saloons were closed to aid in restoring order.

Inquiry Ordered.

President Lazaro Cardenas, in Mexico City, ordered Agustin Arroyo, Under Secretary of the Interior, to fly to Merida to conduct the inquiry.

Gov. Lopez Cardenas prepared to fly to Mexico City and give an explanation of the affair to the President.

The Governor, blamed by labor leaders for the resulting demonstration because of his alleged non-enforcement of labor contracts, sought an "indefinite leave" of the Legislature, but observers expressed the opinion the bitterness engendered by the tragedy would make it "impossible" for him to return to office.

Federal soldiers disarmed the police and took charge late last night after the killings.

Traffic Blocked.

The demonstration began with a mass meeting after the striking bus drivers, along with some taxicab drivers, blocked traffic in downtown Merida.

The participants marched to the Governor's palace in protest against non-enforcement of the labor contracts which were drawn in May with the assistance of the Governor.

Several small bombs exploded in the demonstration. Police then opened fire with machine guns.

The Governor, as he vacated his office temporarily, blamed plantation owners with instigation of the disorder because of their opposition to division of their lands among workers.

(The councils of the Confederation of Workers of Mexico and the general confederation of workers called emergency sessions to discuss the affair in Mexico City. The two groups were reported considering general strikes in Yucatan and Capeche, the neighboring State, to protest against the deaths.)

'Heart Balm' Ban Rejected in N. Y.

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 2 (AP).—The appellate division by a 3-to-2 decision today affirmed a Supreme Court justice's ruling that the New York State law outlawing "heart balm" suits was unconstitutional.

The court affirmed the opinion of Supreme Court Justice Leander B. Faber, of Brooklyn, in ruling that Lawrence Hanfdarn, of Forest Hills, was within the law in filing a suit for $30,000 damages against George Mark, of Elmont, on the allegation that Mark alienated Mrs. Hanfdarn's affections.

Mark carried the question to the higher court.

The majority opinion in the appellate court held that courts of appeal in New York State had recognized the equality of the sexes in the past by extending the right to sue for damages in alienation of affections actions to wives as well as husbands.

"The Legislature," the majority justices said, "has no power to abolish such actions without providing a substitute."

Youngstown Telegram Bought by Vindicator

Youngstown, Ohio, July 2 (AP).—The Vindicator Printing Co. announced today it had acquired the Youngstown Telegram, Scripps-Howard newspaper, merging it with the Vindicator. The newspaper will be known hereafter as the Youngstown Vindicator and the Youngstown Telegram.

The Telegram will discontinue publication with its last edition today. Both are afternoon newspapers. There is no other daily in the city. For the present the consolidated paper will be issued from the Vindicator Building, but as soon as arrangements can be made the Vindicator will occupy the building erected by the Telegram in 1931.

New Liner Surpassing Queen Mary Is Planned

Glasgow, July 2 (AP).—Preparations for constructing a bigger and faster companion to the S. S. Queen Mary were begun tentatively today on the Clydebank.

In shipping circles it was said the liner, if constructed, probably would be christened the King George V, in honor of the late monarch.

An official order for the construction still is awaited. It was suggested the projected liner would have a tonnage of about 85,000 as compared to the 80,773 of the Queen Mary.

U. S. May Enter Flogging Inquiry

Wilmington, N. C., July 2 (AP).—A possible opening for a Federal investigation of floggings attributed to night-riding "vigilantes" in near-by Columbus County appeared today as local officials maintained silence about their plans.

The Star-News announced it had made available to postal authorities a purported confession by a self-styled member of the hooded band, which is accused of beating at least four women and two men on the pretext that they were "undesirable."

The "confession" set forth that all intended victims of the floggers were first warned by letter to leave the county upon pain of being "disciplined" by the vigilantes, the paper said. If the letters were sent by mail instead of by messengers, it was pointed out, the postal laws would apply.

Solicitor J. J. Burney, who announced a "war to the death" upon the night riders when their activities were disclosed in the course of a trial in Whiteville, seat of Columbus County, last week, would not discuss the case today.

Selassie Asks Loan by League Of $50,000,000

Negus Also Cites Articles of Covenant in Attack on 'Aggressor.'

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, July 2.—Emperor Haile Selassie, "King of Kings," his hopes shaken by developments at Geneva, took two bold steps tonight in an attempt to save his country from complete domination by Italy.

First, he asked the League for a loan of $50,000,000 to "defend her integrity." Then he sent to the Assembly a draft of a resolution calling attention to provisions in articles 10 and 14 of the Covenant for nonrecognition of annexation obtained by force of arms.

The Negus, who delivered a personal appeal to the Assembly two days ago, said Ethiopia has a right to assistance from the League under article 14.

He recommended that League members guarantee the loan, which would be floated by Ethiopia under conditions to be fixed by the Council and after consultation with a League financial committee.

Clear Reply Not Given.

Selassie said he had placed before League nations questions to which with few exceptions the powers had not given a clear reply "in the present tragic circumstances."

For the sake of nations "which may be menaced by future aggression," he said, "it is important frankly and loyally, without equivocation, for each nation to take its responsibility by its vote."

A call for an immediate peace conference by leading nations "to prevent a European war" was made unexpectedly by Eamon de Valera, president of the Irish Free State.

"The terrible menace which threatens us all today can be warded off," he said.

Asks U. S. Adherence.

The Dutch delegate, Dr. A. C. D. De Graeff, asked for the adherence of the United States and other nonmembers to the League.

He suggested the League be reformed by eliminating sanctions and making the body into a purely consultative one.

Australia's spokesman, Stanley M. Bruce, said in discussing the League's failure to save Ethiopia, that "the hope of millions of men and women has been extinguished. We must rekindle that hope."

Other speakers touched upon reform of the League, which is to be taken up at the Assembly's meeting in September. Most urged abandonment of sanctions against Italy.

In proposing a peace conference, De Valera said, "realism demands for the moment that statesmen should concentrate on Europe. Let us set about the task of preserving peace in Europe and put aside until later the task of making the League effective as an instrument of world peace."

Baldwin Denies Disregarding Warning of Reich Air Strength

British Premier Explains His Famous '35 Speech; Is Cheered by Commons; Asserts He Won't Quit Cabinet Post.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 2.—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, whose resignation had been rumored after vigorous oppositional attacks, returned to the House of Commons tonight amid rousing cheers to deny he had disregarded warnings of German air rearmament in 1934.

He flushed and was embarrassed, but spoke firmly in reply to a question put to that effect by Thomas Johnston, Laborite.

"There appears to be some misunderstanding," he said.

Later at a dinner of the City of London Conservative Association Baldwin declared there was "not a word of truth" in reports he was going to resign and delivered an ultimatum that no one was going to dictate to him when he should leave office.

"The first moment I feel myself incapable of sustaining the burden now resting on me," he said, "I shall be prepared to pass it to other hands. But it is for me to decide and for no one to dictate to me."

Denied Being Misled.

In the House of Commons Baldwin also disposed of the Earl of Londonderry's assertion made last week that the premier had not been misled concerning the rearmament as Baldwin had stated in Commons in his famous speech of 1935.

The earl said at that time he had furnished Baldwin with facts and figures which Baldwin did not relay to the Commons. That statement drew a charge of "lying to the House" upon Baldwin by opposition members.

Baldwin stepped resolutely to the floor after being absent, resting at his country home at Chequers.

"In saying we were misled," he said, "I certainly intended no reflection on any department or individual. If such reflection gained credence, I am glad to correct it."

"It isn't a case of there having been any difference between myself and the air ministry as to our earlier estimates of the rate of German rearmament in the air having been falsified by subsequent acceleration."

The Earl of Londonderry declared he was "quite satisfied" with the prime minister's explanation.

Before Johnston put his question he said:

"We are all glad on personal grounds to see the prime minister in his place once again."

Meanwhile, it was authoritatively reported Baldwin was being urged by friends to attend Commons only twice a week instead of daily. Reports he might resign were termed by the friends as "really quite unfounded."

Continuing his reply, Baldwin said that, despite the difficulty of obtaining information "about a country in which no estimates of defense expenditures are published," the British government was satisfied the present information on German air rearmament was reliable "so far as can accurately be obtained."

Heavy Program.

Friends who scoffed at reports the premier intended to retire soon said his resignation would be most untimely in view of the heavy program scheduled before adjournment of the House. They pointed also to the fact the premier would have a chance to recuperate in the long holiday following adjournment.

More than 50 conservative members of the House signed a motion earlier requesting that no military or other commitments, which might be construed as leading to future accords, be made in speeches outside Parliament by ministers or members.

The action was taken following a storm of criticism in the wake of one speech made by War Secretary Alfred Duff Cooper in Paris in which he told the French "your frontier is our frontier."

Opposition members immediately charged his speech was construed by the French as tacit military accord.

Canadian Camps For Relief Closed

Ottawa, July 2 (AP).—All relief camps in Canada have been closed, Norman Rogers, minister of labor, announced today.

"Every man resident in the camps was offered employment if he so desired it, and no compulsion was used," Rogers stated. "The closing of the camps has been carried out without confusion to the men or to industry."

In a statement covering the closing of the camps the minister revealed 14,291 placements of men have been made since demobilization began March 1. From the camps the railways have taken 8,853 men. The railways have also engaged 2,297 men "from local sources" while 657 men from the camps have received employment on farms. Those placed in "other employment" numbered 2,484.

At the commencement of demobilization, there were 20,376 men distributed in camps on 163 projects.

Would Forgive Locarno Violation in Order to Negotiate Treaty.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 2.—France is willing to forgive Germany's violation of the Locarno Treaty if Adolf Hitler agrees to negotiate a new security pact, it was said tonight in authoritative circles.

Premier Leon Blum, it was added, is ready to abandon the French demand that the Reich promise not to fortify the Rhineland and to limit troops in the region, in the hope of getting Germany into a "new Locarno" line-up.

France's previous government, under Premier Albert Sarraut, took a flat stand that France would refuse any discussion whatsoever with Germany unless the "broken law" was first repaired.

While these diplomatic developments were reported, the army commitee of the French Senate decided to consider fortifying the Franco-Swiss border against a possible thrust by German soldiers against France through Switzerland.

New Locarno Plan.

Blum's plan was said to call for the sketching of a new Locarno by France, Great Britain and Belgium at a meeting in Brussels. Italy would be included if Premier Mussolini agreed.

German delegates would then be asked to discuss the new pact. If Reichsfuehrer Hitler refused to accept, the London agreement of March 19, calling for a virtual military alliance between France, Britain, Belgium and Italy would be called into force.

French officials, commenting on a report Hitler would call a special Reichstag meeting this week-end for an important announcement of policy, said they were not informed of such a move.

Mlle. Genevieve Tabouis, diplomatic writer for the newspaper L'Oeuvre, said Hitler would take this step.

An avalanche of Leftist votes swept Jean Chiappe, Communist-hated former prefect of Paris police, from his Chamber of Deputies seat tonight.

The Chamber, with Communists howling "Chiappe in prison! Chiappe in prison!" and with Rightest bolting the session en masse, voted to oust Chiappe from its membership. The ballot was 282 to 193.

Chiappe now is president of the Paris Municipal Council. Extreme Leftists dislike the little Corsican because he was in charge of police during the swindling activities of the late Serge Stavisky. Once the idol of the masses, he was forced out of office in the furor which preceded the riots of February 6, 1934.

To Consider Hotel Aid.

On the economic front, the day recorded a government promise of "consideration" for the problems of hotels which have been hurt by strikes and other difficulties. The minister of the interior, Roger Salengro, said between 35 and 40 per cent of all French hotels were in financial trouble.

The Bank of France reported the first break in the gold outgo in 14 weeks. A statement for the week ended June 26 showed the bank got back 46,000,000 francs ($3,036,000) of more than 11,000,000,000 francs ($726,000,000) recently withdrawn.

A. C. Smith Heads Democratic Group

Other officers elected were first vice president, George Offutt; second vice president, John Colpoys; third vice president, Mae Helm; corresponding secretary, Lillian Brown; treasurer, Dr. F. Thomas Evans; counsel, J. Nelson Anderson; recording secretary, Lee Shugar.

It was decided at the meeting to present an annual award to the District official whom it is adjudged "has done the greatest amount of good for the political and civic betterment of the District of Columbia." The award will be made on the annual District League Day, now planned for next May.

Senator's Concern For Mrs. Dill Cited

Spokane, Wash., July 2 (AP).—Clarence C. Dill, divorce-seeking former Senator, slumped in his chair today and listened to attorneys read more letters they claimed he had written his wife, professing respect for her and concern for her fortune.

"The sharks are biting at you," said one of the letters, referring to Mrs. Dill's property holdings.

On the witness stand, Mrs. Dill explained the letter referred to holdings on the Atlantic Seaboard; that much of it was mortgaged during the "trying years" of the depression and that she lost some of it by foreclosure.

Mrs. Dill, the former Rosalie Jones, suffragist leader, testified she was "just one jump ahead of the sheriff" in 1930.

Dill charged his wife was parsimonious, slovenly and tactless. He asserted she accused him of "drinking like a fish" and conducted herself in a manner injurious to his political career. Mrs. Dill is resisting his suit.

Girl Tells Court Of James' Kisses

Los Angeles, July 2 (AP).—Even as Robert S. James' fifth wife, Winona, lay at the point of death in a hospital, Miss Grace Yarnell testified today the red-haired barber tried to make love to her.

"Two times he kissed me," the witness said. "Two times in one day—once going to the hospital to see Winona, once on the way home."

Miss Yarnell, cousin of Winona, was a witness at the trial of James on a charge of slaying his seventh wife, Mary, by drowning her in a bathtub after exposing her to the fangs of a rattlesnake.

The State injected the death of Mrs. Winona James in a Manitou, Colo., tourist camp cabin three years ago in an effort to show James removed both wives by similar methods to collect life insurance on them.

Hindenburg Is Moored; 4th Flight a Record

Lakehurst, N. J., July 2 (AP).—The German dirigible Hindenburg grounded at 4:20 a. m., Eastern standard time, today, completing its fourth commercial flight from Germany in record-breaking time.

The big ship made the run from her home port, Frankfort-on-Main, to Lakehurst in 52 hours and 51 minutes, cutting 8 hours and 34 minutes from her previous record, Lieut. George Watson, of the Naval Air Station announced.

The Hindenburg's lines were made secure at 4:35 o'clock after she made what was said to be the first flying mooring ever made by a German airship. A ground crew was ready, but was not called upon, as the ship flew directly to the mast.

The American Taste Declares its Independence

In 1776 America declared its independence.

And, before the Revolution was over, Americans had developed the cocktail.

There may be many drinks that foreigners can tell us about—but if there's one drink we can tell the world about—IT'S THE COCKTAIL.

And it's a lesson the world has been glad to learn.

SINCE the year 1870 (interrupted only by Prohibition) Fleischmann has been distilling a smooth, dry gin especially for the distinctive American taste that created the cocktail and other American drinks.

Fleischmann's Gin is distilled from American grain in one continuous process—the time-honored American way. It makes a smoother cocktail—brings out the hidden flavors of Vermouth, fruit juices and other ingredients. And it is always uniform—for Fleischmann controls every step in its manufacture, from the purchase of the grain to the finished bottle—with its typically American label.

Trust your native taste and brands. Mix your cocktails with Fleischmann's—the original American Gin, made by American labor and American distillers who have been with Fleischmann over 45 years.

Lemke Faction Deserts Farm Holiday Group

Own Association Is Set Up With Candidate's Manager as Leader.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, July 2.—A controversial sequel to the turbulent National Farm Holiday Association convention, which tabled a resolution indorsing William Lemke as the Union Party Presidential candidate, developed late today with the creation of a "rump" organization and "election" of Lemke's campaign manager as president.

John Bosch, who as acting president since the death of Milo Reno, Des Moines, called the convention, and was elected last night to head the organization, said:

"I don't think the new organization will make any difference."

Burdick Heads "Bolters."

Usher L. Burdick, of North Dakota, Lemke's campaign manager, was chosen to head the "bolters," who claimed they represented three-fourths of all State presidents who attended the national convention, which closed last night. They refused to recognize this meeting. William Keane, of Iowa, was named vice president, and Walter Groth, of Minnesota, secretary-treasurer.

Bosch declared the ousting of Groth as secretary-treasurer of the Minnesota group for insubordination several months ago was the "real reason" for the move.

"Groth refused to follow orders of the board of directors in the disbursement of Holiday Association funds and was expelled from the organization some time ago," Bosch said.

Groth charged Communistic control of the Holiday Association. The bolting group issued a statement asserting "we recognized that the purpose of the assemblage did not appear to be representative of the national body and that the procedure of the activities was not within the provision of the constitution and by-laws of our organization."

Convention Called.

By resolution, the bolting faction directed Burdick to call a convention of the association "within 60 days." It was signed by Burdick, Keane, Arthur W. Cameron, New Mexico; Charles Glodamer, Wisconsin, and George Iverson, jr., Maryland.

Bosch asserted Maryland had no paid-up members in the national organization and that New Mexico had only 21 members.

"Minnesota alone has two or three times as many members as the combined total of those States represented by the bolting faction," Bosch said. "But we're not a bit worried."

New Deal Plans Feminine CCC With 50 Camps

3,000 to 5,000 Girls Will Earn and Learn at Establishments.

By the United Press.

The New Deal set out last night to attack the depression from this angle—CCC camps for girls with feminine frills thrown in.

The plan is to use a few millions of WPA's $1,425,000,000 to establish 50 camps throughout the country where between 3,000 and 5,000 jobless women may earn and learn at Federal expense.

The program, heartily indorsed by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, will be launched soon when the President asks the Budget Bureau to set aside funds to finance the camps.

Pending a formal announcement, National Youth Administrator Aubrey W. Williams would disclose only this fragment of information:

"While full details have yet to be worked out, the campers, all of whom will be drawn from relief rolls, will engage in educational, vocational, and recreational projects as well as doing light landscaping and similar work."

States Must Apply.

Miss Dorothea De Schweinitz, who will direct the camps, and Miss Hilda Smith, who started the idea in the days of direct relief, disclosed the plan is to set up camps only where States ask for them. They will be established in Y. W. C. A., 4-H Club camps, in unused school buildings, hotels, etc.—any place WPA can get rent free.

Girls will enroll in groups from 60 to 100. They must be between 18 and 25 years old, unmarried women receiving preference, in good physical health, mentally alert and interested in education.

The girls will do the camp work, cook the meals, wash the dishes, make the beds and attend regular classes in home economics, health, training in citizenship and other useful subjects.

Cost to the Government, according to camps run in the past, will be about $10 a week per girl. That included $1.50 a week spending money for each feminine enrollee.

Discipline will be left up to the girls.

Asked if the girls would follow the CCC examples and wear uniforms, the Misses De Schweinitz and Smith had this to say in chorus: "Heavens, no! please!"

Communism Charged.

Piermont, N. Y., July 2 (AP).—Clifford O. Poole, chairman of the resolutions committee of the Rockland County American Legion, announced tonight that organization had adopted a resolution charging that girls at Camp Jane Addams, a Federal project, were favorably discussing communism.

The camp, in Bear Mountain Park, was referred to in the resolution as Camp Tera, but its name has been changed from the original designation and it now is under supervision of the National Youth Administration.

The resolution likewise asserted, Poole said, that American patriotic songs were parodied at the camp in such manner as to cast "slurs" upon the United States.

Michael Grossman, of the Rockland County Veterans of Foreign Wars, a guest at the Legion's meeting, said he had taken the matter up with Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, who promised an investigation.

Grossman said that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt had been interested in the camp at its inception, but that the discussions of communism had begun subsequent to her manifestation of interest.

Miss Bernice Miller, director of the camp, said a "small minority" of the girls apparently interested in communism were allowed to discuss that interest as a matter of "free expression." She added whatever parodies were sung were sung y that same group.

She said, too, that Mrs. Roosevelt had retained her interest in the camp, and that her daughter, Mrs. John Boettiger, had been made a member of a board connected with the camp.

Survivor Will Watch Bull Run Spectacle

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., July 2.—Mayor Harry Wooding has decided definitely to accept an invitation tendered him by the City of Manassas to attend the re-enactment of the first Battle of Bull Run on July 21, the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Civil War engagement.

Mayor Wooding is believed to be the only survivor of the first battle, although he makes no such claim himself. Three years ago, when the State veterans' reunion was held at Manassas, he was the only delegate present who had been through the fight. The Danville mayor is to be taken to a position of vantage where he can watch the Federal troops re-enact the battle.

Rejected Suitor Faces Kidnap Charge of Girl

Seized After Teacher Is Taken From Home at Midnight.

By the Associated Press.

Norwich, N. Y., July 2.—A man said by police to be a rejected suitor was held tonight on a charge of kidnaping Ora Wager, 25-year-old rural school teacher, from her boarding house last night and taking her to a nearby village against her will.

He was Gus Turkett, 36, who, Officer Harold Mattice, of the Norwich police, said had been refused "dates" by Miss Wager since she decided recently to marry Melvin Morse, a 23-year-old grocery clerk. She planned to marry Saturday.

Turkett also was charged with assault.

Mattice said Turkett went to the boarding house at midnight and demanded that Miss Wager go with him to her father's home at Middleburg some miles away.

When she refused, the officer said, she was grabbed, and, clad only in her pajamas, swiftly carried to an automobile where a friend of Turkett was waiting.

The young teacher appeared at her father's home this morning after an eight-State police alarm had been issued for the apprehension of the alleged abductors. She returned to Norwich with her father and Turkett, who was immediately taken into custody for questioning. He was arrested a short time later.

District Attorney Glen Carter said warrants, charging kidnap and assault, also had been issued for the arrest of Roscoe Coons, said by police to have been Turkett's companion.

Dedication

Completion of the final details was directed by Hall.

President Roosevelt and his party

Despite the prediction for fair weather today, clouds cloaked the jagged peaks of the Blue Ridge late yesterday afternoon and floated across the Skyline Drive.

To the rear of the speakers' stand a tent has been erected for the President, who will be accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt and other members of his party. From this tent the peaks and ridges of the mountains were not visible.

In Natural Amphitheater.

The stand itself has been erected in a natural amphitheater typical of the rugged majesty of the mountain country. The national colors deck the front of the stand and a gigantic red eagle has been fashioned on the front.

Shenandoah National Park, which formally will be presented to the Government of the United States, is 180,000 acres in extent. It is approximately 3,500 feet above sea level. A few hundred yards from the spot where the dedication will take place the Shenandoah Valley opens up to the West.

To the East are the lesser Blue Ridge ranges and the Piedmont Plain.

will motor into the mountains from Washington today. En route they will stop for a picnic luncheon.

When the ceremonies are over, the President will journey to Charlottesville, where he will spend the night.

Tomorrow at 10 a. m. he will speak at the old home of Thomas Jefferson, Monticello.

Then the multitudes assembled to hear the President dedicate the park will sing the "Star Spangled Banner," as the Marine Band plays the National anthem.

Additional music will be furnished by the Harrisonburg (Va.) Boys' Band and the Shenandoah Municipal Band.

Forty-five State policemen have been assigned to stations along the Skyline Drive as Virginia officials made last-minute preparations to handle the crowd.

John Q. Rhodes, State director of the Division of Motor Vehicles, said he would permit the movement of approximately 10,000 persons an hour into the area today.

Murphy's Need In Philippines Told Roosevelt

Islands' 'Gold King' Urges President to Keep U. S. Aid in Post.

The retention of Frank Murphy as High Commissioner to the Philippine Commonwealth was urged on President Roosevelt by Judge John W. Haussermann, the "gold king of the Philippines," when he called at the White House yesterday.

Murphy is being urged by Democratic leaders to resign his Philippine post to run for Governor of Michigan, and is due to announce his decision in a few days.

Judge Haussermann said that Murphy is the choice of all Americans and Filipinos of all walks of life and of all political beliefs. He mentioned the fact that President Manuel Quezon of the Philippine Commonwealth also favors Murphy.

"Murphy has earned the unanimous approval of the inhabitants of the Philippines," he continued, "because of his experience as Governor General, his patience and sympathy for the masses, his tact and high character, and his demonstrated ability."

Judge Haussermann is a Republican, but he said he is acting in a strictly nonpartisan and nonpolitical spirit and his only motive is that the continuation of Murphy as High Commissioner at Manila would serve the best interests of both the Philippines and the United States as well as the cause of peace and good neighborliness in the Far West.

"Politics has absolutely nothing to do with the preference of Americans and Filipinos for Murphy," Judge Haussermann emphasized.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Pan American Union presents the United States Army Band (Capt. Thomas F. Darcy, conductor), Christine Stewart, dancer, and Rosalmira Colomo, contralto, in a concert of Latin-American music in the Aztec Garden Thursday night. Program of works by 16 composers representing Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Peru, El Salvador and the United States.

Guests of the Pan American Union at this second open-air concert of the season fared more comfortably than on the chilly evening in May when the series began. Under a cloudy sky the air had a brooding quietude and a semi-tropical warmth, while fireflies flitted across the lawns and flashed in the tree tops. A large and appreciative audience filled the esplanade and the greater part of the seats along the garden paths.

In the program arranged by Capt. Darcy, familiar numbers such as Valderrama's "Death of the Inca" and selections from the opera, "Il Guarani," by Carlos Gomes were balanced by first performances in this country of the idyll, "Neo Cadina," by Alas of El Salvador, and "Recuerdos del Pasado," by Velasco of Colombia.

The most interesting work on the program was Justin Eli's suite, "Kiskaya," wherein the Haitian composer utilized aboriginal themes with ingenuity and effectiveness. There was rhythmic variety in the four movements, and the harmonization was thoroughly in character with the primitive melodies.

That "La Bananier," by the American composer, Louis Moreau Gottschalk, was given its first public performance in the United States may be accounted for by the fact that it was written in Brazil where he died in 1869. A native of New Orleans, Gottschalk was an exceedingly popular pianist during the decade preceding the Civil War, and many of his piano pieces enjoyed a long vogue, although they are almost forgotten now.

"La Bananier" is based on a working song of banana-pickers in Brazil. It has an attractive melody tinged with melancholy, and is well arranged for instrumental projection.

Senorita Colomo was cordially received in her two groups of songs, and her warm contralto voice thoroughly stood the test of singing in the open air. Miss Stewart was graceful and vivacious in the Guajira dance, "Por Ti Sola," and the paso doble, "La Novia del Torero."

His Rail Record Clear, Engineer Killed by Fall

William E. Evans With B. & O. 40 Years Without an Accident.

During the 40 years he was a locomotive engineer on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, William E. Evans never had an accident, but he died Wednesday of injuries received in a fall nine days ago. Evans was 70 and lived at 3734 Kanawha street.

Evans, injured when he climbed a tree to pick cherries while visiting his daughter, Mrs. Evelyn E. McIntyre, Silver Spring, Md., died in Montgomery County Hospital. He suffered fractures of the arm, hip and pelvis.

From 1891 until he was retired four years ago, Evans had been with the B. & O. Railroad as an engineer. Previously he was a Captital Limited engineer on the run betwen Washington and Cumberland, Md.

Member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, he also belonged to the Knights of Pythias and Masonic Fraternity, of Brunswick, Md. He was born in Chillicothe, Ohio, the son of John and Eliza Evans.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. today at the V. L. Spear Co. funeral home, 1009 H street. Burial will be at Taneytown, Md.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Minnie A. Evans; a son, Dr. William E. Evans, jr., of Baltimore; four other daughters, Mrs. Ruth Littlefield, of Los Angeles; Mrs. Edna Moltz, Columbia, S. C.; Mrs. Josephine Holmes Creswell, N. C., and Mrs. Nellie Guertler, of Washington; three brothers, Charles, John and Benjamin Evans, all of Chillicothe, and three sisters, Mrs. Kate Overly, Frankfort, Ohio; Mrs. Ruth Weiderman and Miss Sallie Evans, of Chillicothe.

Clarke Centennial Plans Exhibition

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., July 2.—Sponsors of the Clarke County Centennial, which will be held July 8, 9 and 10, have made a successful effort to assemble a collection of rare historical objects, including many which were once owned by former Presidents. The collection will be on exhibition during the three-day celebration.

In an eighteenth century room will be china which graced the home built at Jamestown, Va., by Richard Jacqueline for his wife, Martha Cary, which was brought to Clarke by their grandson and used in the home of the father of two of Clarke's "gentlemen justices."

In the same room will be found the sundial on which George Washington, as a young surveyor, found the time at Greenway Court, the estate of Lord Fairfax, nearly 200 years ago. Nearby will be the surveying instruments of Brattaile Muse, son of Col. George Muse, who instructed Washington in military matters.

Dr. Devereaux, Veteran of Two Wars, Is Dead

Former Georgetown Teacher Also Aided Hoover in Siberian Relief.

Dr. John Ryan Devereux, 68, retired Army and Public Health Service physician and former Georgetown University Medical School teacher, died of a cerebral hemorrhage yesterday at his home, 3 West Bradley lane, Chevy Chase, Md. He had been ill for about two months.

Dr. Devereux served in the Army Medical Corps in both the Spanish-American War and the World War, assisted Herbert Hoover in administering relief in Serbia after the war, and in 1925 went to Rumania to organize relief work there for Pope Pius.

He was born at Lawrence, Kans., in 1868, the son of John P. Devereux and Margaret Ryan Devereux. His father was a circuit court judge in Kansas at the time. An uncle, the late Rev. Patrick John Ryan, was Archbishop of Philadelphia.

After serving his interneship in Philadelphia, he came here in 1895 to teach at Georgetown Medical School, remaining there until the outbreak of the Spanish-American War in 1898, when he was commissioned as a lieutenant in the Army Medical Corps.

At the conclusion of the war he was commissioned a captain in the Medical Corps of the Regular Army and saw service at many posts throughout the country until he resigned in 1906. During his army service he assisted in relief work in San Francisco after the disastrous earthquake.

Dr. Devereux then went to Vienna, Austria, where he spent several years in further medical study. He returned to this country to take a position at Johns Hopkins Medical School in Baltimore. He resumed teaching at Georgetown in 1910.

Early in 1917 Dr. Devereux organized an ambulance unit for the Red Cross. Before the unit's departure for France, however, the United States declared war and Dr. Devereux again entered the Army Medical Corps, this time with the rank of major.

He saw service with the Medical Corps in France and was then transferred to the Inspector General's department. After assisting in the organization of Serbian relief work he came back to the United States to enter the Public Health Service, resigning a year later as a Lieutenant Colonel.

Dr. Devereux was closely associated with charitable work, and for many years was a member of the board of the Catholic charities.

Surviving are his wife, the former Annie L. Sinnott, of Philadelphia; four daughters, Mrs. R. H. Jeshke, wife of Maj. R. H. Jeshke, of the United States Marine Corps; Mrs. H. T. Chase, wife of Lieut. H. J. Chase, of the United States Navy; Mrs. R. F. Crist, wife of Lieut. R. F. Crist, of the Marine Corps, and Agnes Devereux; six sons, Joseph F. S., of Chevy Chase; John R., jr., of Washington; Capt. James Devereux, of the Marine Corps; Ashton, of Baltimore, Md.; Edward, of Washington, and Tristram, of Chevy Chase, Md. Eighteen grandchildren also survive.

Requiem mass will be held at the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament in Chevy Chase Monday morning. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Folk-Song Curator Seeks Data On Mythical Lover of the South

John A. Lomax, curator of folk songs at the Library of Congress, yesterday started a Nation-wide search for information about "Staving Chain," a mythical American character, of a sort kindred to Paul Bunyan and John Henry.

Staving Chain, represented in song and fable as of prodigious strength and industry, is described chiefly as a Casanova of the cotton fields.

"Never in all my days of folk song exploration," said Lomax, "have I run across anything like Staving Chain when it comes to the ladies."

Songs about his love-making are sung all through the South, from mountains to levees and deltas.

Lomax said he got the best description of Staving Chain in Lafayette, La.

"I had heard of him for many years," Lomax said, "but this was the first man who could give me any hint as to where he originated. He said Staving Chain came originally from Virginia."

According to Lomax, Staving Chain had more charm, more brains, more clothes, and, most of all, more women than any man in the background of his people, Lomax said.

"But nobody," said Lomax, "seems to be able to tell me where he got his name or what it means."

America Abstains.

The American delegate to the narcotics conference at Geneva has abstained from signing the convention drawn up at that meeting and ostensibly designed to decrease the illicit traffic in drugs. The penalties this convention provided are so trifling as to make it, from the American point of view, entirely worthless.

This abstention is in harmony with the consistent policy pursued by the United States regarding the narcotics traffic. America has managed her internal drug problem excellently: her statutes are rigorous, and rigorously enforced; the hands of her narcotics manufacturers are clean. Consequently she has maintained a similar attitude in the matter of world-legislation, demanding in the wider field the standards she sets in her national domain. Too often, however, her demands have been turned down by other nations. That is why the American delegates walked out of the 1925 conference. Nor could the American representative at the 1936 conference consistently have done less than withhold his signature.

There is, moreover, another aspect to the abstention. Addressing the League of Nations' Opium Advisory Committee just before the recent conference opened, Stuart J. Fuller, of the American State Department, described as "terrifying" the spread of drug-addiction in provinces of China near to the Japanese zones of influence. This situation he directly attributed to the activities of Japanese and Korean traffickers permitted to operate with the consent and possibly the connivance of the Japanese authorities.

"Where Japanese influence advances in the Far East, what goes with it?" asked Mr. Fuller. And he answered: "The drug traffic." He continued: "What is the reason? A maximum penalty of a few weeks' rest in jail, and a fine amounting almost to the profits of one poor day's business of a petty trafficker . . . The Japanese government, whose subjects have been more widely and more closely connected with the illicit traffic in China in morphine, heroin and cocaine than those of any other country, should without further delay take steps to punish the Japanese and Koreans who . . . have thus brought Japan's name into disrepute."

These are strong words, but entirely justified by the facts. It is plain that certain powerful countries, themselves suffering little, if at all, from the illicit drug traffic, have persistently refused to do what the situation demands in restricting the nefarious activities of their nationals in other lands. In this respect Japan has been the worst offender.

The Mexican Highway.

A more auspicious moment could scarcely have been chosen for the dedication of the new highway between Nuevo Laredo and Mexico City.

It is 400 years to the month that De Vaca, the first white man to cross the Rio Grande, entered Mexico City by the overland route. Moreover, the new 770-mile automobile highway is opened at a moment when Europe and the Orient are so overcast with clouds that many American vacationists will welcome an opportunity to find new vistas under fairer skies. Finally, a sense that the future of the New World lies in closer co-operation—the aim of the Pan-American conference scheduled for Buenos Aires in the fall—will further stimulate intra-continental interest.

It is to be hoped that the new highway will also play its part in ridding Mexico of the continual disturbances which only yesterday brought news from distant Yucatan of more killings. Such incidents can only delay, to mutual detriment, the intermingling of two cultures, hitherto largely sealed off from each other. For most southbound travelers this first link of the Pan-American highway will mean new thoughts, new designs, new language and new customs. In reverse fashion, there will be many new broadening experiences for our neighbors coming north of the Rio Grande by the new route.

The highway, as it stands today, is only a beginning. Eventually, it will open a through way to the Argentine. Already a reconnaissance survey has plotted a route to reach Panama City, with the lowlands of Nicaragua offering the only considerable obstacle. The terrain directly south of the canal also promises some difficulty, but none that should be insurmountable. For no swamp is too deep and no gorge too broad when peace is the engineer's guerdon and commerce his backers' reward.

The Treasury Apologia.

In his Wednesday night radio broadcast Secretary Morgenthau compared his review of the last fiscal year to a financial accounting such as the officers of a private corporation render to stockholders at the end of each business year. Corporation heads, however, frequently make their annual reports a medium through which to discuss problems and policies and outline plans for the future. Secretary Morgenthau sedulously avoided mention of these more fundamental issues, preferring to recite facts and figures with a certain amount of interpretative comment.

There was no hint or implied acknowledgment that the head of the Treasury feels personally responsible for directing the financial affairs of the Nation. On the contrary he emphasized the confusion into which Treasury calculations have been thrown by "unforeseen and extraordinary events," such as cash payment of the bonus and invalidation of the AAA. The Treasury is pictured as being in much the same position as a manufacturer whose financial accounts are upset by a disastrous flood.

This rather passive and fatalistic acceptance of the unexpected may possibly explain Secretary Morgenthau's failure to make constructive suggestions for improving the fiscal position of the Government. But it hardly excuses the complacency with which he views the outlook, and the trouble which he takes to sugar-coat some rather unpalatable financial facts. In a politician such persuasive arts are condoned by the public. But when practiced by the head of the Treasury they seem inconsistent with the gravity of the responsibilities that go with such high office.

Is is, of course, entirely proper for the Secretary to call attention to the existence of a large volume of recoverable assets which constitute a partial offset to the outstanding debt of the Federal Government. Loans to borrowers from public agencies, totaling over $4,000,000,000, should, of course, be taken into account to get a true picture of the financial position, even though the liquidation value of these holdings is uncertain. But the picture is not complete unless the Government's contingent obligations, likewise in excess of $4,000,000,000, are considered. Recoverable assets, some of them belonging to Federal agencies issuing bonds guaranteed by the United States, cannot be viewed as an offset to the direct debt without various qualifications.

This same eagerness to minimize the size of the debt is manifest in the references to the Treasury's huge cash balances. Undoubtedly those balances are important, but it is also well to remember that they will be subjected to an abnormally heavy drain as the holders of bonus bonds turn them in for redemption. That process is still far from completion. The stabilization fund—another so-called offset to the present debt—is a windfall due to expropriation of private property by the Government. The best way to test the value of this device for cutting deficits is to consider the final result of a succession of devaluation decrees providing additional billions of fictitious assets as an offset to the debt.

In short, Secretary Morgenthau has assumed by turns an apologetic, a defensive and a confident attitude in offering his financial statement to the Government's stockholders. He has probably left them a little bewildered, although he has presented some facts that should be brought to their attention. The method of selecting and interpreting official data is designed to make a good case for the Administration's spending policies, not to present a severely objective picture of actual conditions.

That same endeavor is apparent in the satisfaction which the Secretary professes in the decline in interest charges on the public debt. There is no hint that the lower rates are the outcome of conditions of an essentially abnormal and temporary nature. No reference is made to the possibility of a rise in rates which would bring about a decline in bond values and add greatly to the cost and difficulty of financing Government deficits.

The Nation is unfortunately left to infer that there are few if any clouds on the financial horizon, and it is expected to derive encouragement and satisfaction from a financial record that, in the absence of any real evidence of retrenchment, creates the gravest apprehension among those trained in the principles and practices of public finance.

Wanted: A Finalist.

There may be nothing the matter with Kansas, but of American tennis the same cannot be said. For the third year running, the United States will be unrepresented on the center court in Wimbledon's famous finals. Today, instead, Perry, of England, and Von Cramm, of Germany, will fight it out for the title. Again, as last year, the odds are on the Britisher, but at least one German athlete has recently shown a profound disrespect for odds. The outcome, to polish up an old one, remains to be seen.

But we wander. What's the matter with American tennis? Budge was good, but not good enough. And they don't pay off for that. Allison, to judge from the cables, also put up a presentable fight, but not much more. And while little Bitsy set Austin on his face during their match, it takes more than that to discourage the dapper Bunny.

After all the effort of building thousands of tennis courts, of teaching tens of thousands of youngsters to keep their shoulders forward on drives, of enticing hundreds of thousands to support tournaments to cheer the contestants on—we seem to be slackening rather than gaining in our prowess at a game in which America long led the world.

Give us an amateur Vines, another Wood at his wiriest, a Little Bill Johnson or a Big Bill Tilden—all hot stuff of other years. What American tennis needs is a good finalist, at least!

Confusion At Geneva.

"What answer," asked Haile Selassie, plaintively, in his address before the League Assembly, "shall I take back to my people whom you have promised to defend?"

He had appeared before that body in a last desperate attempt to rescue his nation from extinction by persuading the League to continue its punitive action against Italy. Even those delegates most anxious to liquidate the Italo-Ethiopian problem as quickly as possible admitted the cogency of his argument that "the Italian victory was a victory over all of us."

Nor could any fail to be impressed by the nobility with which the Negus pleaded his cause. The stupid and boorish tactics employed by the group of Italian journalists who booed and jeered the exiled monarch only increased the sympathy for him. Dignity in this struggle has throughout been on the side of the primitive and vanquished Ethiopians.

But nothing could turn the tide which sets in favor of liquidating the League's positive efforts to solve the Italo-Ethiopian problem. With the exception of Charles Te Water, the representative of the Union of South Africa, all who spoke at the Assembly meeting declared themselves in favor of dropping sanctions, with the face-saving proviso that this action should not be accompanied by any open recognition of the validity of Italy's annexation of the African kingdom.

There is, therefore, practical unanimity on the part of League members regarding the necessity of retreating at this time from the advanced position taken last fall. There is also general agreement that, somewhere back of the present lines, the army of peace must be reformed. But at what point and how? Regarding these questions there is anything but unanimity.

Some, like Litvinoff of Russia, argue that the history of the past few months has made it abundantly clear that the present failure of the League is the fault of the members rather than of the Covenant. Others insist that the League is foredoomed to failure if it attempts too much; hence that Article 16 should be watered down and perhaps eliminated altogether.

President de Valera of the Irish Free State, disturbed by the weakening of the League and the danger that this development might lead to the destruction of peace in Europe, urges the calling of a great international peace conference. On the other hand, the foreign ministers of Denmark and the Netherlands, voicing a widespread sentiment, would make the cardinal point of League action in the immediate future collaboration with the United States and other non-members.

Nothing better illustrates the confusion at Geneva than this well-intentioned but futile proposal. No doubt the League nations would pay a great price for regularized American collaboration. But any price would be too high for the probable results.

However dubious the wisdom of this Nation's retreat into isolation, the present aloofness from Geneva is a fact that cannot be ignored. There is not now the slightest possibility that the United States would agree to join or even formally collaborate with the League in distinctly political undertakings.

To water down the League Covenant in order to achieve a universality of membership that is, practically speaking, at present impossible of achievement, would only destroy the League as it exists without bringing the League that is desired into being.

Wedding Bells And Fireworks.

The month for brides has ended and the time for fireworks is at hand. But this year, according to statistics which show 950 marriage licenses issued and 196 divorces granted locally in June, it is hard to tell where one leaves off and the other begins. Though the "I don'ts" didn't cap the "I do's," they finished closer than during any other month in the District's history.

Whether the apple of discord will continue to vie in popularity with orange blossoms is a matter that only sour-grape prophets are willing to bet on. Because, as is generally the case, there are two sides to last month's record-breaking. One, perfectly logical, is the District's recently modified divorce law, which probably helps to account for the fact that 196 couples told it to the judge in 30 days. The other, just as logical, though perhaps not so tactful, is the fact that this is leap year.

Cupid may well feel discouraged. It was a bad break for him when the traditional wedding month was set so close to the day for celebrating independence.

Physicians, too, have their unusual problems. A girl who plans to enter a bathing beauty contest has asked her doctor to vaccinate her where the scar won't show.

The reason why the voice of the people is so muffled is because most of it is filtered through hats.

Transit Proposals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The conference of the citizens with People's Council Roberts brought out many illuminating facts. There are some things that the citizen can do to reduce the cost of operating street cars.

The abuse of the pass, in giving same to children on Saturday nights, creates an unnecessarily heavy load that night which increases the cost of operation and is charged against the citizens in determining the cost of each street car ride. This is one factor we can eliminate and this would eliminate part of the claim for increased street car fares. Citizens should refuse to give their street car passes to children on Saturday night.

The cost of street car operation is reduced by increasing the speed of cars, as it enables both cars and crews to carry more passengers. This can be accomplished by higher powered and higher geared cars as the new street cars operating on Pennsylvania avenue and by keeping motor vehicles off the street car tracks. The Police Department should be able to solve this later problem. Increased speed of street cars will gain passengers who now operate their own motor cars. This will increase revenue and reduce cost of operation.

The one-man cars are an impossibility in heavy traffic as on Seventh street. The writer has seen one-man cars delayed from three to five minutes at each transfer point during rush hours. As an alternate proposal during rush hours only, we could use trains of two cars each, thus saving one motorman but having two conductors. These could operate on long runs.

Citizens should study this problem and make suggestions for reducing the cost of street car operation now. The street car company will do it after the fares are raised.

Referred to Al Smith.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What is so rare as a political campaign and what could be so entertaining as the outbursts, invectives, recriminations and good old-fashioned ballyhoo now being exchanged by party leaders?

One thing, however, which baffles understanding is to know just how the Smith, Ely, Reed, Colby and Cohalan "quintuplets" determined what position Thomas Jefferson and other famous Democrats of an earlier period would take regarding the issues of 1936 and, furthermore, how the "quintuplets" obtained authority to address the country on behalf of these illustrious men long since departed.

Is this authority obtained through seances or is Al guilty of presumption to a degree hitherto unrecognized and unknown?

Our Error.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to call your attention to the story you published on June 26 on page 1, fifth column, relative to the suit I brought against Mr. Robertson, the former Commissioner of Patents.

The account is inaccurate in that you state, in line 3, that the suit was filed "yesterday," the 25th. The record of the case, Law No. 87668, will show, I believe, that the suit was filed Monday, June 22, 1936.

Replies To Mr. Moore.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would appreciate a small space to reply to my respondent, Mr. Guy G. Moore.

It strikes me that Mr. Moore somewhat strayed from my subject and substituted a rather personal interpretation of the well-known Yankee-Southerner historical antagonism. Nevertheless, in considering his article, I understand his contention to be that of the South—or maybe I should say "good ole Caroline"—is filled with golden opportunity; that even Northerners recognize the fact that young men should travel Southward; that I went South only for "my own" economic advancement; that I wrote an "atrocity story of the South;" that I am a Yankee and that North Carolina is the "best governed State in the world."

Well, Mr. Moore and I are both "up North" now; it looks as if opportunity didn't knock at our doors. In order to prove this point, he said the Dartmouth Prexy said, "Go South;" well, innumerable persons who live in the West say, "Go East." Mr. Moore and I have always heard Southerners say, "Go North" (we're almost there now); and let's not forget that Horace Greely said, "Go West, young man, go West."

So people generally see the good when they are away from a section; but I differed a little only because I was "bawn and raised" down there and was an "authority." And further, I think that when truth resembles an "atrocity story" and thus hurts us, we have only the problem of changing our mode of action.

As for my being a Yankee, Mr. Moore isn't even "getting warm." As for North Carolina being the best governed State in the world, I must say that my original letter to "Cotton Ed" did not particularize Mr. Moore's State. Maybe it is the best State in the world. Probably "Doctor Moore's volumes" statistically prove it, since some form of statistics along with many records would be necessary.

JOHN B. DUNCAN.
Washington, July 1.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Most readers of Mr. Guy G. Moore's letter in The Post of June 30 will receive his interpretation of the Yankee's relation to the South according to their own past experience and present prejudice. But when, to his plea for less rather than more tolerance, he adds the quite uncalled-for boast that North Carolina is "the best governed State in the world," he not only provokes an antagonism which may extend to his other statements—which alone would be a desirable effect—but he unwittingly furnishes evidence for the already prevalent belief that the "Saxon-Scotch philosophy" of which he speaks is merely complacent provincialism.

But, Mr. Editor, was it not furthering sectional misunderstanding to label Mr. Moore's letter "A North Carolinian View?" His views were his own—typical of chauvinists everywhere and not at all consequent to his being a North Carolinian.

Praise For Park.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to toss a little bouquet instead of a brickbat to the Park Commission or whoever is in charge of the work being done in Lafayette Park across from the White House. Particularly would I like to comment on the seats which have been placed in the park. They are a decided improvement on the usual park bench, the most comfortable I ever came upon, and so many of them. Going through the park last evening on the way home, I sat down expecting to continue on my way in a few minutes. A friend happened along, we stayed two hours and together spent some little time praising whoever designed these new benches.

With the lovely shade trees and these comfortable seats, I predict this park is going to be a very popular place during the hot weather just ahead.

The Function Of Government.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You ironically call the Democratic platform the platform of a new party, and suggest that it invites comparison between the political ideals of Thomas Jefferson and those of Franklin Roosevelt. If human experience counts for anything it is safe to predict that history will record that this comparison is not by any means as odious as you would seem to believe.

Jefferson's statement that "Government long established should not be changed for light and transient causes," which you quote from the Declaration, had reference to the then coming Revolutionary War to overthrow in America the power of the English King and not to the peace-time changes and adjustments in the internal affairs of American democratic government.

Jefferson contended that every generation must govern itself if it was to be governed at all and for that reason insisted that the Constitution should contain a provision for its periodical amendment. He wrote, "I know also, that laws and institutions must go hand in hand with the progress of the human mind. As that becomes more developed, more enlightened, and new discoveries are made, new truths discovered, and manners and opinions change with the change of circumstances, institutions must advance also, and keep pace with the times. We might as well require a man to wear still the coat which fitted him as a boy as for civilized society to remain ever under the regimen of their barbarous ancestors.

"It is this preposterous idea which has lately deluged Europe in blood. Their monarchs, instead of wisely yielding to the gradual change of circumstances, of favoring progressive accommodation to progressive improvement, have clung to old abuses, entrenched themselves behind steady habits and obliged their subjects to seek through blood and violence rash and ruinous innovations, which, had they been referred to the peaceful deliberations and collected wisdom of the nation, would have been put into acceptable and salutary forms.

"Let us follow no such examples nor weakly believe that one generation is not as capable as another of taking care of itself and ordering its affairs." . . . "Each generation is as independent as the one preceding, as that was of all which had gone before. It has then, like them, a right to choose for itself the form of government it believes most promotive of its own happiness." He therefore advocated a provision for the amendment of the Constitution in the life of each generation which he estimated at about 20 years, to keep it up to date and in step with changes and developments which time must bring. "Only lay down true principles, and adhere to them inflexibly." "Do not be frightened into their surrender by the alarm of the timid or the croaking of wealth against the ascendancy of the people." If this be the humanitarianism of the eighteenth century, Mr. Roosevelt has not gone that far.

Jefferson foresaw that in time powerful interest would arise which would make difficult if not impossible the amendment of the Constitution, and quoted an Italian proverb, "Let him who stands well, stand still." Then again, it was not the increasing power of democratic government that fostered the rise of dictators, but their weakness and ineffectiveness.

In Russia it was the weak and vacillating democratic government set up after the dethronement of the Czar that gave the opportunity to a handful of the Bolsheviki to seize power. It was the futile factionism of the Italian Parliament that permitted Mussolini to drive it from power. It was the browbeating and impossible exaction of tribute by France and England that hamstrung the young democracy of Germany so that Hitler was able to climb over its corpse to power. The function of government is to maintain peace and justice and to do that it must be able to cope with any power which threatens peace or justice among its people whether from without or within.

The Post Impressionist

What Made The Fur Fly?

Post Office, Friday.

FAIRFAX DOWNEY informs us that "big game has not been vanishing from the face of the earth half so rapidly as it has from the walls of sportsmen's homes." He's worried about it.

He tells us that even Washington's (and the Nation's) own Smithsonian Institution has begun to give the air to taxidermalized brutes. He's worried about this, too.

For our part, we find in each of these twin events an excellent reason for rejoicing.

The case of the Smithsonian Institution is easily explained:

The museum "not only houses regular collections," Mr. Downey reminds us; "but it is the Government repository for all natural-history specimens after they have served the purpose of study in other Government Departments."

Is—and has long been.

Too long!

It hasn't any choice.

Mr. Downey does think he has found one exception.—According to him, it is political—though we ourselves can't believe that. He says:

"Since 1932, it has been opportune for hunters (Dem.) to present mounted tigers" to the museum, "and a bad time for hunters (Rep.) to hope to slip in a stuffed elephant."

But, even if such an insinuation is correct, it is aside from the point:

On the other hand, the homes of the hunters are not.

Time was, and recently, when any true-blue hunter who shot anything larger than a wild goose, tried to shoot it in such a way as to give the taxidermist a minimum of trouble: had it stuffed and mounted with the least possible delay, and put it on the floor for a rug or on the wall for a decoration. Yet in these our immediate times, the glass eyes of dead deer seldom reproach you in those domestic regions, you seldom tread upon the coat-tails of a bear.

How has this happened?

It's all very well for Mr. Downey, writing in The North American Review, to try to place the blame on "the trend to smaller houses and apartments." He says:

"Even in houses and apartments of a size to permit such rooms" as trophy rooms and gun rooms, architects began a short while ago to assuage "the feminine desire for more closets . . . Low ceilings spelled exile for numerous splendid antlers. Ample stairways yielded to elevator shafts. The very floors were ruled out of bounds . . . After moving to a flat with a bowling-alley hallway, particular ladies declared they found it impossible to pass a protruding wildcat or warthog head, hung there, without rubbing their noses."

That strikes us as a very lame explanation:

In the first place it implies that a man who has the physical courage to stand up to a tiger and shoot it lacks the moral courage to face his wife and preserve the proofs of prowess.

And, in the second place, what with the Advancement of Woman, and so on, there are now almost as many women as there are men who like to kill animals.

No, you must seek deeper—or higher—than the architect and the housewife if you want to explain adequately the disappearance of wild beasts from tame homes. You must go——

Well, the Post-Impressionist fears you must go all the way to an acceptance of the theory of Human Progress—and this despite the fact that it is a theory which he himself has not great faith in: unless, of course, the word "progress" is most precisely defined.

It really seems as though people are slowly rising above that level of taste which included big-game trophies. Even the people who still like to shoot the big game.

We have always sympathized with the mood of a certain distinguished art critic when he first entered the huge common-room of the old Harvard Club in New York. The walls of that apartment bristled with horns and antlers. The tragic orbs of wilderness-beasts regarded you from every angle.

"Doubtless," said the art critic, "the corpses of wild animals are the most ancient form of decoration—and certainly they remain the most barbarous."

The Whipping Post.

"Nor further seek their merits to expose."

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Another Kansan.

Probably not many of our citizens are aware that Kansas has provided two nominees for the Presidency this year. The other one is Earl Browder, who was selected by the Communists in a meeting held last Sunday at Madison Square Garden. His running mate is an Alabama Negro named James Ford. They picked the colored man with the idea of steaming up the Southern white folks, but it is not very likely that he will go down into the South himself to address any of the party rallies. Mr. Browder will represent the ticket in the meetings of the Southern campaigns.

Mr. Browder is a Kansan of the John Brown tradition. He is an angry, onery man with a smile which is more than half snarl. He wants his rights. He has the rubbery persistency of the wholesouled revolutionary, and, although they put him away twice for opposing the draft in the Big War, he is just as stubborn and cussed today as he was then.

Comrade Browder does business from a little office on the ninth floor of a terrible old goat's nest in which the Communists publish their New York paper, the Daily Worker. On the walls are unframed pictures of Marx, Lenin and some Negro, probably James Ford. William Z. Foster, the man who conducted the big steel strike in 1919, is in and out of the place, and there are a lot of comrades around who could stand shaving and look foreign.

But don't pull that foreigner business on Comrade Browder, because he is more Kansan than Alf Landon if it comes to a showdown, and he can look any member of the Sons of the American Revolution or the First Families of Virginia dead in the eye. For Comrade Browder was born in Wichita, Kans., whereas Mr. Landon is out of Pennsylvania, and he can backtrack his American ancestry through the frontiers of Kansas, Kentucky and Virginia to the year sixteen hundred and something.

He is about five-ten in height, with pale blue eyes and pink lids, like Mussolini's. He wears a red mustache, and when he smiles he twists his lips and shows his teeth. He seems pretty sore about something, and I imagine he will tell us what is eating him in speeches in San Francisco, Denver, Butte and other sensitive points during his speaking tour, which begins in August.

Comrade Browder never had much schooling, for he had to quit and go to work as a cash boy in the Wallensten & Cohen department store in Wichita when he was 9 years old. That was in 1901. There were 10 kids in the family. His father, a laborer, was sick, and the $1.50 a week was important money. Their house rent was $3 a month. He tried to organize a strike of 15 cash boys, but failed when the boss eased him out of his job.

His old man, who is still living, went to Kansas in the '80s to farm a claim and spent his first year in a prairie dugout. The old man was a left-winger and voted for Sockless Jerry Simpson. He recently notified Comrade Browder that he had seen the light at last and was now a Communist.

It is hard to draw out these "ism" guys about themselves. They seem to be all ideas and without blood or personal interests, but after prodding Mr. Browder here and there I discovered that he once was a semiprofessional ball ployer. He was a catcher, but he doesn't even remember the names of the pitchers that he caught or the name of a single teammate on any of the clubs for which he worked. He does recall that he caught a game for the Potts Drug Co., of Wichita, at Whitewater, Kans., on July 4, 1910, the day Jack Johnson licked Jim Jeffries in Reno, and remembers that his team won by about 15 to 5. He was a weak hitter, but he scored a run from a base on balls.

Two years later, in the summer of 1912, he happened to be in Falls City, Nebr., and the manager of the local club invited him to catch a twilight game which ended in a tie, called because of darkness. This was the end of his baseball career. Nowadays he shoots an occasional game of pool and he sometimes takes a drink, but he doesn't have the look of a man who would get any fun out of either pool or drinking. He looks as though he wouldn't get much fun out of anything but fighting for his rights. He is determined to have his rights.

Of his year in the Platte County, Mo., jail and his 18 months in Leavenworth he has almost nothing to say even under questioning. It may be reticence, which would be strange in a revolutionary politician, but more likely it is just that he is numb on that side of his being. I asked Comrade Browder about the tough guys who were his classmates in Leavenworth and the cooties and smells of the prison, but he only said the tough guys were just like other average people and the prison wasn't so bad. You turn him on and he just doesn't run.

He is married to a Russian woman and lives in Yonkers and has three children, only one of whom is old enough for school. He doesn't like the personal family publicity which Presidential candidates are exposed to—which is a laugh, because it isn't likely that his young ones will have to take anywhere near as much of it as Miss Peggy Landon or the Roosevelts' little boys. If I hadn't told you, you probably wouldn't even suspect that Kansas had a second entry in the race this year.

Two Escaped Convicts Surrender in Texas

Mexia, Tex., July 2 (AP).—Handing over six pistols, a shotgun and a rifle, two convicts who fled the Retrieve Prison farm June 19 after shooting down a guard, surrendered tonight to officers near Thornton.

The convicts were Luke Trammell and Forest Gibson. Sheriff Will Adams, leading a posse, stepped out in the road in front of the convicts' approaching car, pointed a sub-machine gun—and the two got out, arms aloft.

New Mexican

V. Lombardo Toledano, Labor Leader, Emerges As Important Figure In Revolutionary Drama South Of Rio Grande.

By Jeffrey Paul.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Mexico City.

LITTLE BY LITTLE, slowly but surely, a strange name has been creeping into press reports which depict the various phases of Mexican politics. Besides the name of Cardenas, of Portes Gil, of Cedillo, there has appeared a longer and more musical cognomen—that of Vicente Lombardo Toledano, probably the most powerful labor leader in Mexico today. When Toledano cracks the whip, Mexican labor jumps—or falls.

One critic of this country said to me recently: "Morones, as head of CROM, our earliest and greatest labor organization, made no pretense of being other than what he was—a cheap, bombastic leader, who used labor questions and laboring men for but one end, his own enrichment. But Lombardo revolts me because he poses as an intellectual, a self-appointed messiah who will not rest until he has saved Mexico from capitalistic slavery. It is that intellectual hypocrisy, as much as his communistic preachings, that has so aroused conservative people in Mexico."

Toledano has a legitimate intellectual background. Once a teacher and important figure in the National University, he lost position and standing when he attempted to inject Marxian ideals into many departments that were willing to accept the preachings of all political and economic creeds. But there was a very definite refusal to accept Lombardo's thesis that only the doctrines of Marx should be taught.

As a labor figure, Toledano had been prominent in CROM circles when Luis Morones was about all there was to Mexican labor. There the young lawyer first came in contact with practical rather than theoretical radicalism, and when he lost out at the country's oldest seat of learning, he set up one for himself. Called the Universidad Gabino Barreda, the school never prospered. Transformed last year to the Universidad Obrera, it has been a bit more successful, being kept open, the opposition declares, with public funds supplied by the government.

As Rector and Editor His Influence Is Strong.

TOLEDANO as university rector, however, does not overshadow Toledano as editor. From his offices on Cinco de Mayo street, this active radical issues a magazine in a flaming red cover, which carries the legend, "Futuro," emblazoned in white across the crimson background. In these pages, clericalism, capitalism and all other reactionary elements are bound, gagged and hung for the entertainment of the proletariat.

Power one might have, both as university rector and as editor; but neither of these positions compare with the influence which Toledano wields as secretary general of the Confederation of Mexican Workers Confederacion de Trabajadores de Mexico). Popularly known as the CTM, this labor organization has outstripped all others in size and rapid growth. The removal of Morones dealt the old Crom leadership a blow that has crippled it badly and Toledano has followed up his advantage by adding unions from all sections of the country.

The former university professor first came into prominence when Calles returned from exile last December. A stirring harangue, delivered to his followers in front of the National Palace, centered attention on Toledano and increased his influence with President Cardenas.

In Mexico City there are but three papers which are so bold in their criticism as to deserve the name of "opposition press." These are El Hombre Libre and Omega, issued three times a week, and Novedades, a daily. It is they who have openly accused Toledano of receiving funds from Russia and they point to his visit, made about a year ago, as proof that his enthusiasm for the Soviet way of life is inspired by more than idealism. After less than two months in Stalin's stronghold, Lombardo returned to lecture and write on the advantages to be gained if Mexico set out to copy "the Soviet paradise."

His Stock Soared At Monterrey March.

WHEN THE PEOPLE of Monterrey organized an indignation march against Socialist agitation in the Queen City of the North last February, Toledano hurried up to the nation's industrial capital at the same time that President Cardenas put in a surprise appearance. As was expected, the employers and nonradical unions were given stern but vague warnings by the President, and the stock of the CTM boomed accordingly.

Not content with this meddling, Toledano took an even more decisive step that brought down on him denunciations from every side. The elements that had organized the Monterrey demonstration had also taken the precaution of having the affair preserved in films. When the negative arrived in Mexico City, Toledano went to see it. Then, accompanied by a group from his syndicate, he calmly "confiscated" the film on the grounds that "it was a false and bourgeoisie picture of what really happened in Monterrey." Demands for his prosecution were unavailing—and his prestige with radical labor grew apace.

It was due largely to the protests and manifestations of Toledano and his leaders that the Golden Shirts, a comparatively weak and uninfluential organization of Fascist tendencies, was abolished by the government. Hard on the heels of that stroke came the opportunity to eliminate Calles and Morones. The smoking ruins at Paso Grande had hardly cooled when the radicals were calling for the scalps of the men who were designated as the chief enemies of Mexican "labor"—in this case, the CTM elected itself to the post.

With that airplane flight to Brownsville on Good Friday morning, the last open opposition to Toledano's labor ambitions disappeared. Again calling a meeting to be held in front of the National Palace, the thin man with the big ears expounded a new doctrine of constitutional interpretation. According to his view (and it must be rememberd that he was attempting to justify the unconstitutional exile of his enemies) no man had a right to constitutional guarantees if his ideas and beliefs are not in accord with "revolutionary ideals."

In this way, Toledano said to all Mexico what he had been preaching privately for years. To oppose the revolution, to differ with Cardenas, to criticize Toledano, automatically strips a man of the rights which Mexican law and citizenship confer on him. Thus, a man who denounces Hitler and Mussolini because of their "oppression of the proletariat," has evolved an argument which, if put to practical use, would make the present regime far more single-voiced than either of the Fascist dictatorships. Even Stalin would be pressed to equal the all-sweeping power which Toledano's interpretation of the constitution gives to Cardenas and his followers.

Writings Belie His Denials of Communism.

TOLEDANO is difficult to pin down. In public addresses, he denies he is a Communist. Privately, and in his magazine, he does all he can to advance the dictatorship of the proletariat. His newspaper articles denounce capitalism, Yankee imperialism, Hitler, Mussolini, and all the other stock enemies of Marxian socialism. He is supposed to have picked most of the fifteen members of the radical Council of Higher Education and Scientific Investigation—whose Communist members are reputed to receive 30 pesos a day in salary!

This many-sided man, this editor, professor, labor leader and, as he proudly acknowledges himself, "professional agitator," is really one of the rulers of Mexico today. He demonstrated his power in the recent railroad strike and the more recent general strike which, if brief, was significant.

Portes Gil is busy organizing the peasants. He does not like Toledano. There is an increasing anti-Socialist feeling abroad in Mexico today. Cardenas is not the popular figure he was a year ago. Portes Gil, anti-socialism, changes in the popularity of Cardenas—all these things are of vital importance to Vicente Lombardo Toledano. Should any one or all three of them break in his disfavor, his dream of an eventual proletarian dictatorship in Mexico will be postponed indefinitely. Therefore, despite his present power, he may be nothing more than a passing white-cap in the troubled seas of Mexican politics. Time alone can give the answer.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Death and Kibitzing.

(Warsaw.—The court here has reduced from three to two years the sentence imposed on Josef Iljas, who shot a talkative bridge partner. Iljas was being set four on a bid of three no-trumps when his partner, Stanislas Bartlomie Jezyk, criticized him vociferously. The court of appeals held that the nervous strain under which Iljas was laboring was not taken into account when the three-year term was imposed.—News item.)

It is the opinion of ex-Judge Elmer Twitchell, at one time a prominent jurist (although he has forgotten just where), that even two years is too severe. Elmer thinks a verdict of justifiable homicide would have been fair, and that Josef should have been set free with apologies and a fresh deck.

• • • •

"I have been over the facts in the case of the State vs. Iljas carefully," said ex-Judge Twitchell today, "and I find the judgment of both courts full of error and lacking in common sense.

• • • •

"Kibitzing by onlookers is an offense against public order (Scrubbs vs. Nothnagle) and has even been held (Vishnoff vs. Glockhaus) an incentive to riot, but kibitzing by a dummy has always been held to be the crime of crimes. Feeling between dummy and partner nearly always runs high the minute dummy lays down his hand; all the factors leading to a criminal act are there, ipso facto and ad valorem. For dummy to add insult to injury by criticizing the player or making any suggestions whatever is to invite annihiliation by the most convenient means at hand.

• • • •

"Customs differ in different nations. In America the pistol is not favored, and tradition favors the use of such implements as a kitchen chair or fireplace tongs, the attitude being that it makes death less immediate, although quite as inevitable. Some years ago hanging was prescribed for the offense, but this proved unsatisfactory when the first victim, Horatio Preen, criticized the rope, insisting upon showing the hangman how to fix the noose, and finally drove him quite mad by insisting that the switch controlling the mechanism should be thrown from left to right instead of from right to left.

"In the South Sea Islands, where the game is played in open boats, the custom is to throw a dummy kibitzer to the sharks after first coating him with fishoil; a darned good idea.

"I am writing to the Warsaw Court of Appeals urging that Iljas be liberated and sent to America for a lecture or vaudeville tour. He would be a hero over here."

Enough Is Plenty.

One thing seems pretty certain: when television is perfected the radio audience is going to revolt right smack in the middle of an American political convention.

Experiments in a Yonkers, N. Y., institute for plant research prove that flowers grow more rapidly under electric lights. Will the orchestra please play that old favorite, "Watts and Flowers?"

According to the President's acceptance speech, we should all "enlist for the duration of the war." You don't suppose this is just paving the way for repudiation of all those bills as war debts, do you?

Use Of Words

By William Lyon Phelps.

"Literally."

The word is so inaccurately used and is so rapidly becoming more and more common, that it is well to consider what it means. A. P. Herbert, in his excellent little book called "What a Word!" devotes two pages to it. He heard a radio speaker in England describing the Derby, and the speaker said "The horse was literally melting like butter." This would certainly be an extraordinary spectacle, unless the horse were in a confectioner's window and made of chocolate or something like that.

• • • •

Mr. Herbert wisely adds, "The only safe way with literally, Bobby, is never to say literally. If you say literally a thousand times there is a faint chance that it may be correct and valuable once or twice—but not more. In most of the other instances you will perceive, if you give the brain a little work, that what you really mean is not literally."

Practically: Here is another word he tells us to avoid. For he wisely remarks, "As a rule, practically means not practically or nearly. For example, we say of a reluctant engine that it practically started when it did not start but made a bronchial sound and is now silent."

Mr. Herbert would have been pleased had he heard the answer my tennis opponent gave me once. I said "Is it thirty—love?" and he replied "That is practically right."

• • • •

"Big Four" Discuss Campaign Plans With President

Underwood & Underwood.

Foreign Pacts Break Down American Markets, He Charges.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 2.—George N. Peek, former special adviser to President Roosevelt on foreign trade, today charged the Administration's policies had opened "the United States and the Americas to economic and perhaps political colonization by other nations."

He declared, in an address prepared for delivery before the agricultural Club:

"The trade agreements program is breaking down the American market for American agriculture and industry and by contributing to the prolongation of the farm crisis is undermining the whole basis of recovery . . .

"Those in the Administration charged with the responsibility of disposing of our farm surpluses have refused to trade realistically in foreign markets and have prevented others from doing it when substantial trades were offered . . . This is a matter which calls for full and searching Congressional inquiry."

Peek accused Secretary of State Cordell Hull of attacking "the independence of the American economic system" in pursuit of a low tariff policy.

"In their zeal to reduce tariffs generally," he said, "they extended all our concessions to all nations (except Germany), including nations in default on public and private debts, nations whose exchange restrictions were crippling our trade, nations which had negotiated special agreements from which we were excluded, in fact to all nations whether or not they offered us reciprocal treatment of any kind in return.

"This was not reciprocity, nor was it bargaining in any real sense—it was general tariff reduction with a fancy name and with fancy trimmings."

Polish Police Kill 15 In Peasant Labor Riots

Lwow, Poland, July 2 (AP).—Fifteen persons were killed and many wounded in peasant rioting today.

The trouble began when owners of large estates imported poverty-stricken farm workers to aid in harvesting.

One landowner in the Ruda district, near here, brought two peasants from the mountains. Local farmers refused to permit them to work. Rioting, in which police killed eight peasants and wounded ten, ensued.

A similar disturbance in the Przeworsk district cost the lives of seven more peasants.

Farley Ignores Cabinet Issue

of absence and not return to the Cabinet if Roosevelt is re-elected.

Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, spearhead of the President's independent Republican support, has been insistent in demands that Farley either leave the Cabinet or quit his committee post, while Republican opposition has made Farley the symbol of politics in government.

As party leaders met at the White House for the first general conference on broad campaign strategy since the new National Committee was elected in Philadelphia, W. Forbes Morgan, treasurer of the committee; L. W. ("Chip") Robert, secretary; Charles West, Undersecretary of the Interior; Stanley High, committee aid, and Michelson, sat in. Plans are said to call for booming the campaign's big guns in a burst of electioneering between the first week in September and the November election.

Farley set the proposed setup of national headquarters in New York was discussed, details of the party's budget reviewed, and names of leaders to head the various campaign bureaus hashed over, without any definite decisions being reached.

Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, already is said to have been selected tentatively as head of the Democratic speakers' bureau, with an oversupply of almost 2,000 volunteer speakers at his command, but has not yet accepted. There has been some talk of Gov. Paul McNutt of Indiana directing Western speakership activities from Indianapolis, but this has not been confirmed.

Sure of War Chest.

When questioned whether the Democrats could raise the $2,000,000 Farley said would be their budget limit in the coming campaign, the Postmaster General replied: "I'm sure we can."

But there seemed to be some difference between Farley and Morgan over how much the party had raised from the country-wide Roosevelt "nominator" rallies. Farley said $1,000,000. Morgan placed the figure as low as $600,000. But Farley countered that Morgan had underestimated the $300,000 Jackson Day dinner proceeds at $150,000.

Farley at Philadelphia had reported the party had obliterated its $500,000 deficit and had a substantial credit balance.

The national committee chairman said "a hell of a lot" of ground was covered at yesterday's White House conference, but added it was "too bad we can't tell it all."

May Swing Through West.

Although no official word was forthcoming as to when the President would take the campaign stump, he is expected to follow largely his 1932 schedule, and begin a speechmaking swing through the West and probably across the continent in September.

Intensive Democratic campaigning is expected to be concentrated in the East in New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, and in the Middle West in Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and Indiana. Pro-New Deal Progressive Republican aid is expected to be sought by the Democrats in stumping such States as Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, Nebraska and Minnesota, while Southern Administration stalwarts are expected to work the once "solid" South.

Throughout yesterday the President continued the series of political conferences opened here Wednesday with leaders from States that still might be placed in the doubtful column. Senator Joseph Guffey, of Pennsylvania, and Charles Sawyer, new Democratic National Committeeman from Ohio, were among the day's White House callers.

Auto Fumes Kill Ex-Taxi Driver

Millard Boynton, 42-year-old-former cab driver, was found dead late yesterday afternoon in a garage in the 400 block of Fourth street northeast. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said he had apparently killed himself by inhaling monoxide gas from his machine.

When found by Clayton B. Jenkins and Policemen Fey and Sadtler of the Ninth Precinct, Boynton was huddled on a sheet, his head resting on a pillow near the rear of the car. A burned out cigar was clenched in his hand.

The ignition of the car was turned on, the gasoline supply exhausted and the battery run down. Coroner MacDonald said he had been dead for at least 48 hours.

Tick Fever Claims First Victim Here

The first death in Washintgon this year from Rocky Mountain spotted fever was reported by the Health Department yesterday.

Reba Hansborough, 11 years old, of Noakesville, Va., died at Children's Hospital. She contracted the disease early in June after being bitten by an infected tick.

There have been three other cases this season, Health Department officials said, but the victims have all recovered.

In 1931 there were 11 cases and 3 deaths, in 1932 there were 9 cases and 3 deaths, in 1933 7 cases and 2 detahs, in 1934 4 cases and 2 deaths, in 1935 8 cases and 3 deaths.

WPA Will Show U. S. Index of Art

To preserve the history of American art, a record of its enterprises has been compiled by the Works Progress Administration, and beginning Monday the Index of American Design will go on exhibt at the National Museum.

Nearly 200 drawings and photographs illustrating furniture, costumes, jewelry, ceramics, glass and interior architectural design between the years 1620 and 1890 will be displayed. The illustrations are the work of WPA artists.

Purpose of the American Index of Design is to compile by means of accurate black and white and colored illustrations a pictorial index of native American decorative and applied arts. Although many European countries have made such compilations of their own arts, this index is the only such American project.

U. S. Jury Indicts Ten In Chicago Lottery Case

Chicago, July 2 (AP).—The Federal grand jury today returned indictments against ten men, charging importing and transporting lottery tickets and conspiracy, which the district attorney's office described as a Nation-wide lottery scheme.

Those indicted were L. T. Sprague and Howard Basset, of Peoria, Ill.; Leonard Lovely, of Helena, Mont.; J. McMillan, of Portland, Oreg.; David, Julian and Joseph Shapiro (brothers), M. G. Paulis and William M. Spencer, all of Chicago, and L. H. Pulsipher, address not disclosed.

They were charged specifically with handling tickets for two lotteries, the Hundred Day Specials, a baseball pool and the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, a sweepstakes.

Tradition Goes At the Mayfair; Woman Billed

Dude Ranch Will Change Start of Dancing to 7 Instead of 9.

By Chanticleer.

Tradition has gone at the Mayfair Cafe of All Nations—and the result is entertainment by Wes Warren and Mildred Bodes. Mildred is the cause. As far back as we can remember there have been no women on the Mayfair billing.

Mildred is a bride. She and Wes were married less than two weeks ago when they changed from Manhattan's Jimmy Kelly Club to their present engagement here.

Wes plays the piano, as well as singing with Mildred. Already the Mayfair customers are calling for the Warren-Bodes arrangement of "Samson and Delilah."

* * * *

There's going to be a change made at the Dude Ranch before long, blowing another tradition into smithereens. The idea that dancing must start at 9 is going to take a walk. The dancing at the Ranch very soon will begin at 7.

* * * *

How about a touch of sentiment and romance about this point. They say that a night never passes at Chevy Chase Lake that some dancer doesn't step up to Lee Fields as he directs the band and ask for an old-time number.

* * * *

Ida Clarke, who entertains the Shoreham's dinner guests on the Terrace with her accordian artistry, adds another bright touch of entertainment at the cocktail hour. She plays the organ. Margaret Arrow, the numerologist, continues to provide forecasts both during the afternoon and evening. She'll give you your lucky number. The Four Flying Flemings and their 60-foot trapeze act, right on the Terrace, also entertain.

Youry Yourloff, the young Cossack who walked off with the opening of the Club Del Rio's Chauve Souris last night, has danced his way all over the world. Youry left Russia with the revolution, toured the world—and wound up in America.

* * * *

Big week at the Lotus—more people on the floor than for many a week. Heading the show are the Five Ames Sisters in a song and dance rhythm turn with a little acrobatics thrown in (and they're really sisters!); Jimmy Givens and Anne Karol, in a comedy dance number; Frances and Carroll, specialty waltz numbers, emphasizing the doll dance, and Bill Strickland and his Capitolians for your own dancing.

Don't miss the display of dolls at the Russian Roof. They're carved and dressed by the peasants through the long winter months. And many other toys and trinkets, too.

* * * *

Mary Nolan is coming to the Cocoanut Grove. The same Mary Nolan who has starred on stage and screen and known as one of the country's most beautiful young women. Her Washington debut is set for 8:30 tonight. In the supporting company are Frank McCormick, whose clowning antics already are known here; Burns and Olds, direct from the Ritz Carlton in Atlantic City—and a new Jack Pomeroy unit of 10 beautiful gals.

* * * *

They sort of expect George Gordon to be at Maryland Club Gardens again next week. George is the gentleman who walks the slack wire along the edge of the Garden pool while Jimmy Harris and his boys play a little brass accompaniment. Then there's a brilliant new cabana on the east terrace where the bathers sip their afternoon juleps.

Here and There Among the Night Clubs

On the Air Today

A great many impressions are clear in my mind following the initial appearance of Stoopnagle and Budd as pinch hitters for Fred Allen. First, and of greatest note, it appears to this magnificent pillar of observation that the Colonel and Budd seem to have struck the bull's-eye squarely in the "Town Hall Tonight" billing.

Stoop and Budd probably are the most consistent in-and-outers in radio. They register for one series and flop in another. So far as I am concerned, their co-starring with the Warings not so long ago was dismal. Invariably they do better when not sponsored.

Unfortunately, I failed to hear the first portion of their broadcast last Wednesday night. But the amateur show portion was skillfully handled. They outdid Allen himself in some respects and as a whole their performance was as entertaining and provocative of sustained interest and old-fashioned laughs as Allen's best efforts.

Due allowance must be made, I assume, for the differences in style of Allen and his summer substitutes. Allen can draw a laugh with material that conceivably could fall flat if handled by Stoop and Budd. But Allen could not have drawn any more laughs from an audience than the Buffalo Comics did on this first show.

It also seemed that Stoopnagle and Budd are gradually shaping into a Clarke and McCullough. Budd's work in this first "Town Hall Tonight" show was almost straight, although I hastily add again that I heard only the amateur section. Clarke and McCullough always were to me just Bobby Clarke when it came to the business of being funny.

But we shall see. It looks as though Stoopnagle and Budd have found the right setting and the right show for a very successful summer.

Spokane Awaits Rep. Zioncheck With Jazz Band

House Member in Better Condition Than Ever, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, July 2.—Representative Zioncheck rode confidently toward a jazz-band greeting at Spokane tonight after proclaiming himself "in better mental and physical condition than ever."

"Are you insane?" asked a clerk as Zioncheck stopped at a Butte, Mont., railroad station.

"Are you sane?" shot back the eccentric Washington Congressman, bare-headed and wearing a blue sweater in a blazing sun.

The Athletic Round Table, a fun-minded Spokane organization, made plans for a jazz band to meet Zioncheck on his arrival there. A membership blank was ready for him, leaders said. His train was due near midnight (Eastern standard time).

At Butte Zioncheck bought an armful of papers and magaines because "I want to see what they say about me."

Zioncheck said he is "not worried about my wife. She'll come on out to Seattle later. She's in Washington, D. C., but I don't know just where."

The Representative said he was traveling alone "in an upper berth. I couldn't get a lower."

Ivan Merrick, a Seattle attorney, met the train and talked to the Representative, assuring him he would be re-elected.

"I know it," Zioncheck agreed. "I know I will win."

Zioncheck's brother-in-law, William J. Nadeau, planned to meet the Representative on arrival here tomorrow morning, but other Democratic Party leaders said they had made no arrangements for an official greeting.

None of the 17 candidates, both Republicans and Democrats who seek Zioncheck's office, has disclosed any plans to be there.

Culbertson on Bridge

Bad Breaks.

The familiar wail at the average bridge table is, "What a break!" Whether the cause has been the failure of the wailer to win all the finesses he thought he had to try, or the malice of the outstanding trumps in grouping themselves in one hand, the groan of anguish is apt to be just as heart rending.

These wailers overlook a point that should be superobvious. If finesses invariably "worked," and suits always broke favorably, contract would be a pastime for the feeble-minded. There hardly would be such a thing as a difficult hand. Bidding would become 95 per cent of the game. The proper contract having been reached, the greatest expert would have little advantage over a novice. The true measure of a contract player, like the true measure of a man or woman, is the way he meets adversity. The declarer in today's hand was not a "wailer."

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 clubs	Pass
3 spades	Pass	5 spades	Pass
6 spades	Double	Pass	Pass
Redouble	Pass	Pass	Pass

(North chose to jump the three spade bid instead of bidding four no trump, since a five no trup response would force rather than invite the slam.)

West opened the seven of diamonds. Declarer won and saw at a glance that the contract was cold unless West had all four trumps, which his double indicated. The ace of spades was laid down and the bad news verified. But the declarer had just begun to fight! There still was a possibility of holding West to one trump trick. A club was led to dummy's ace, the king was cashed, and a diamond discarded from the closed hand. A low club now was led and ruffed. The king of diamonds was cashed and three rounds of hearts were played, ending in the dummy. Now a diamond was led and ruffed by declarer. When West had to follow suit it was clear sailing. All hands were down to three cards. Declarer simply led a low trump away from his K 9 6. West had to put up an honor to top dummy's ten, and had to return a trump into declarer's remaining ten-ace.

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

Approximately 1,000 Government employes of the Veterans' Administration now will be able to save approximately $300,000 a year under a new ruling of the administration which goes into effect August 1.

The new regulation eliminates compulsory charges for living quarters, meals and laundry for employes of the Veterans' Administration's hospitals throughout the country. Twenty-nine such institutions, several in or near Washington, will be affected.

Up to this time, the employes of the hospitals have been required to live in their stations at their own expense if quarters were available. The employes, many of whom are married, are thus forced to maintain two residences—one for themselves in the hospitals or institutions and another for their families. Often they elect to live at home, but deductions from their salaries are made just the same.

The American Federation of Government Employes last winter brought this situation to the attention of Congress which made an appropriation for partial relief. At least 50 per cent of the employes still will be required to live within the Administration's institutions, but the managers will be asked to adjust some of the most meritorious cases so that those in particular need do not have to spend double money for living expenses. Instructions to the institution managers will be mailed soon.

The remodeling of the vacated quarters into housekeeping apartments is also being considered by the Administration so that some employes can have more homelike surroundings. The new regulation is not compulsory for any employe who wishes may continue to live at his station.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces it will accept applications not later than July 20 for the following positions:

Inspector of locomotives, $4,000 a year, Interstate Commerce Commission.

Cadastral engineer (aerial surveys), various grades, $2,600 to 3,800 a year.

Climatologist, geomorphologist, economic geographer, statistical meteorologist, $3,800 a year; associate climatologist, associate geomorphologist, associate economic geographer, associate statistical meteorologist, $3,200 a year; assistant climatologist, assistant geomorphologist, assistant economic geographer, assistant statistical meteorologist, $2,600 a year.

Assistant physicist (textiles), female, $2,600 a year.

Agronomist (forage crops), pathologist (virus diseases), $3,800 a year; associate agronomist (forage crops), associate geneticist (forage crops), $3,200 a year; assistant agronomist (forage crops), 2,600 a year, Department of Agriculture.

There also is another job for which applications will be taken and that is for criminal research statistician, $3,000 a year, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce.

This is a newly created job which Dr. William L. Austin, head of the bureau, says is being filled to "improve the work done in compiling statistics on criminal prosecutions and dispositions."

For 15 years, the bureau has tabulated figures on commitments to State prisons and recently added, because of popular demand, the information on the disposition of the cases before major courts of the country.

Now it is felt a trained criminal statistician is needed to improve the service to the public which rapidly is becoming crime conscious and asking all sorts of questions about crime from the Census Bureau.

We do not often record marriages in this column, but we think an exception ought to be made to mention the party that took phase yesterday in the Income Tax Unit of the Internal Revenue Department, when the staff celebrated the marriage of Mrs. Genevieve C. Green and Joseph Foley.

When Mrs. Green came into the office in the morning her desk was festooned with pink and white crepe paper and on it was a display of silver and a lamp her fellow workers had given her. She has been with the income tax division since 1920 and her husband is a radio engineer, now stationed in Miami. They were married a week ago and Foley went back to his Southern job yesterday.

Secretary Roper of the Commerce Department lost one of his best righthand men yesterday when Chester H. McCall resigned to become a business executive with a New York advertising firm. McCall has been an important person around the Secretary's office, for he served as chief buffer for the Secretary, seeing people who called on Mr. Roper when he was busy, making addresses for him and handling much of the administrative end of the department's work. His new job is executive vice president with the United Advertising Corporation.

The question of why Government employes should organize and join unions was discussed last night at a meeting of the Agricultural Lodge, 31, American Federation of Government Employes. Gilbert Hyatt, legislative representative of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, which was the first civil service group to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor, led the discussion to which various lodge members contributed questions and stated their points of view.

Company Honors Telephone Officials

John C. White, general plant manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., and Noble D. Larner, general plant supervisor, were honored for their 30 years of service with the company at a luncheon yesterday at the Continental Hotel. Each was presented a sapphire-set gold pin.

White began his telephone career here July 2, 1906, as wire chief's clerk. Larner entered the service of the company the same day as station inspector.

4 Marine Officers Given Promotions

Promotions for four Marine officers stationed in Washington effective with the new fiscal year were announced yesterday.

Officers promoted are Lieut. Col. Thomas Clark, commanding officer of the Marine Barracks here, to the rank of colonel, and Capts. John Beckitt, post quartermaster of the barracks; Kenneth Inman, post quartermaster of Marine headquarters, and John T. Selden, paymaster, all to be majors.

Second lieutenant commissions have been awarded the following enlisted men assigned to the Marine Barracks: Stewart B. O'Neill, jr., son of Marine Capt. S. B O'Neill; Charles R. Nicholson and Roy Robinton.

J. P. Morgan Described As 'Getting Along Fine'

New York, July 2 (AP).—J. P. Morgan, the world-known financier, ill at his island estate off Long Island, was said late today by an associate, George Whitney, to be "getting along fine." A Morgan secretary conveyed similar information.

The 68-year-old banker, brought home yesterday from Massachusetts by private railway car, litter and ambulance, suffering with what physicians described as neuritis, was under medical orders to reduce his weight.

Hiss illness has not wholly confined him, as he has been able to take the sunshine from time to time on a great veranda of the Morgan estate.

Motor Trips Are Planned By First Lady

Mrs. Roosevelt to Leave Monday for Visit to Hyde Park.

Will Go to Nova Scotia to Greet President on July 20.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will leave the White House Monday night for Hyde Park, N. Y., where she will remain, except for occasional short trips, for about two weeks.

Then, she asserted yesterday, she will drive to the Roosevelt summer home at Campobello, Nova Scotia, in time to greet the President and sons, who will arrive there July 30 from a cruise.

Ten days later, the First Lady said, she plans to motor back to Hyde Park, where she will spend most of August. She expects to accompany the President on his longest campaign trip.

She will motor with the Chief Executive for the dedication of Shenandoah National Park, on the Skyline drive, today.

Next week she will visit the National Youth Administration camp at Bear Mountain, N. Y., and then she will open the summer course of lectures at Columbia Teachers College.

Betty O'Malley Is Entertained

Ten Guests Attend Affair at Army and Navy Country Club.

Miss Juliet Kemp, who is here from Santa Barbara, Calif., as the guest of Capt. and Mrs. Jack Hodgson, at Bolling Field, until after the wedding of Miss Betty O'Malley and Lieut. Robert Hollis Strauss next Friday night, entertained for the bride-to-be last evening at a small dinner party for ten guests. They gathered at the home of Capt. and Mrs. Hodgson for cocktails before going to the Army and Navy Country Club, where Miss Kemp entertained.

Miss Kemp, who will be one of Miss O'Malley's bridesmaids, has many friends in and near Washington as she visited here frequently when her uncle, Col. Martin Scanlon, was commandant of Bolling Field. Col. Scanlon was transferred to London last January as military air attache at the American Embassy there.

Following the wedding of Miss O'Malley and Lieut. Strauss, which will be one of the important social events of next week, Miss Kemp expects to go to Connecticut to visit her grandmother for a few days before returning to Santa Barbara.

Mrs. Rose P. Fitzpatrick will give a farewell party this evening for her daughter, Miss Dorothy H. Fitzpatrick, and Miss Pauline E. Kohlerman, who are leaving Sunday by boat for a two-week vacation at Virginia Beach.

Mrs. D. M. McNeale, Miss Peggy McNeale and Miss Sylvia McNeale, of Washington, are staying at St. Andrews-by-the-Sea, New Brunswick.

Mrs. Larry Hershfield, of Augusta, Ga., is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Levi David, on Twenty-seventh street.

Mrs. Thomas W. Brahany entertained at luncheon at the Shoreham yesterday.

Mrs. Sydney West and her two children, Miss Alice West and Sydney, jr., have moved into their new home at 3841 Harrison street.

Entertains in Honor of Miss O'Malley

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. JACK HODGSON, who with Capt. Hodgson, gave a cocktail party at Bolling Field last night preceding the dinner at which her house guest, Miss Juliet Kemp, entertained for Miss Betty O'Malley, at the Army-Navy Country Club.

Mr. Demory Weds Pauline McArtor

Parsonage Scene of Ceremony in Lovettsville, Va.

Miss Pauline McArtor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl McArtor, of Lovettsville, Va., was married to Mr. Foley Demory, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Demory, of Lovettsville, last Sunday. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Frank A. Tyler at the Methodist Episcopal parsonage.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lilburn Demory. The couple are now on a wedding trip in Canada.

Among the guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Demory, Miss Beulah Demory, Mr. and Mrs. Lilburn Demory, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Demory, of Gaithersburg, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Demory, Mr. and Mrs. Glendon Demory, Mr. Floyd Demory, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Carnes and Mrs. Laura Spring, of Lovettsville; Mrs. Robert Frye, Mr. Homer Mulleaunix, of Hagerstown, Md.; Mrs. Anne Fusik, Mrs. E. R. Maglis, of Brunswick, Md., and Mrs. Harold Stump, of Washington.

Miss Sara Sweeney, Mr. Barnard Marry

Miss Sara Sweeney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Earle Sweeney, of Breckenridge, Tex., became the bride yesterday morning of Mr. Job Bernard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph P. Barnard, of Washington. The ceremony was performed at 11 o'clock at the Church of the Holy City by the Rev. Bramlette, of Belle Haven, Va.

Mulfords Celebrate Wedding Anniversary

Mr. Bentley Mulford, chairman of the Rainbow Division veterans' medals of valor committee of the District of Columbia Chapter, R. D. V., celebrated his wedding anniversary yesterday with Mrs. Mulford, at their Westchester residence in White Plains, N. Y.

He will return to Washington in time to leave with the District delegation attending the eighteenth annual national reunion of the Rainbow Division Veterans in Kansas City, Mo., July 12-15.

Mr. and Mrs. Thom Sail for Bermuda

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Thom, who were married on Wednesday, have sailed for Bermuda on their wedding trip.

The bride, the former Miss Elizabeth Ann Barnes, is the daughter of Mr. nd Mrs. A. Eugene Barnes. The wedding took place at St. John's Church, the Rev. James F. Madison officiating.

Mr. Thom's sister, Miss Myrtle Thom, was the bride's only attendant. Mr. Dallas Morgan Barnes, brother of the bride, was best man. The wedding was attended only by members of the two families and close friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Thom will be at home after August 1 at Sedwick Gardens.

Club at Herndon Will Meet July 14

Mrs. Bready and Mrs. Fynn to Be Co-Hostesses.

The Home Interest Garden Club of Herndon, Va., will have its regular meeting July 14, at 2 p. m., at the home of Mrs. George R. Bready with Mrs. Russell Lynn as co-hostess. Mrs. C. M. Lawrence will have charge of program on the subject of "Landscaping." A speaker from the Department of Agriculture will be present to discuss the topic.

The club projects for the year have been the beautifying of railroad parks and building of a stone gateway and an iron gate at Chestnut Grove Cemetery. Both projects are nearly completed.

Plans for the annual fall flower show will be discussed. The club, which has a membership of 45, will continue its meetings through the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Frantzen, of Chicago, have arrived in Washington and are at the Shoreham. They will remain until the end of the week, when they will leave for New York, Quebec, and the North Woods.

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Robb, of Washington, are stopping at the Ritz Tower Hotel, Park avenue at Fifty-seventh street, New York City.

Kitty Barrett, Mr. Helgesen Wed in South

Couple Flies to New York; Plan to Make Home in Greenwich, Conn.

Miss Kitty Barrett, daughter of Mrs. Robert Randolph Meyer, was married to Mr. Raymond Helgesen, son of Mrs. Henry T. Helgesen, of Boston, in a ceremony at the Mountain Brook Country Club, Birmingham, Ala., yesterday.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Henry Edmonds in the large ballroom, decorated for the occasion with white satin covering the floor and a circular altar arranged against the windows opening on the club gardens. The bride was given in marriage by her stepfather, Mr. Robert R. Meyer. She wore a gown of white satin made on empire lines with a round yoke of alternating bands of satin and net. The long sleeves, flaring at the wrists, were of the same design as the yoke. Her circular train was bordered with net and satin stripes. A long tulle veil fell over the train and a second veil, finger tip length, was caught with a Juliet cap of net and satin bands. White orchids and a shower of lilies of the valley hung from the marker in her white satin prayer book.

The matron of honor was Mrs. James Palmer Neill, of Birmingham, and Miss Janet Weed, of New York, was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Teresa Shook and Mrs. Barney Ireland, of Birmingham. They wore white mousseline de soie redingotes over white satin and large white picture hats. They carried tiny muffs covered with white gardenias and showered with lilies of the valley and swansonia.

Mr. Gustave Miller, of Washington, was best man. The three brothers of the bride, Mr. Edmund Barrett, of New York; Mr. Robert Meyer, jr., and Mr Jack Meyer, of Birmingham, were ushers

News Club Gives $300 to Hospital

The money will be added to the hospital's milk fund for undernourished children.

The check was presented by Mrs. Josephine Tighe to Sister Margaret, who is in charge of the hospital.

The money represents a portion of the funds raised by the club at the St. Patrick Day's Carnival, held in the auditorium of the National Press Club.

With additional proceeds from the carnival the club has given Children's Hospital $1,000 for maintenance of a bed established last year and $100 to the milk fund of the Ladies of Charity.

Mrs. Samuel Saks, who passed the winter in Houston, Tex., has joined her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Saks, at their summer home in Atlantic City.

Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

Washington debutantes are receiving exciting letters from Miss Janet White, daughter of Mrs. Richard J. White, of Baltimore, who is frequently entertained at debutante festivities in the Capital and now is in Istanbul, Turkey, as the guest of the American Ambassador John V. A. MacMurray and Mrs. MacMurray and their daughter, Miss Joan MacMurray. Ambassador and Mrs. MacMurray have given a number of parties for Mrs. White and her daughter.

Many Washington girls are looking forward to the dinner Mrs. White will give in honor of Miss Anna Thomas, daughter of the late Mr. John Thomas, of New York, and Mrs. Thomas, before the first Baltimore cotillion.

The Ambassador to Turkey and Mrs. MacMurray, of course, have many friends here, as he was in the Department of State before accepting the diplomatic post, and the MacMurrays regard Washington as their permanent home. It is understood they will come to America late this fall.

Another debutante who will join in festivities here this fall is Miss Edith Ogden Harrison, of Chicago, who came here for a few days last week with her mother, Mrs. Carter Harrison, and her grandfather, Mr. Carter Harrison, former Mayor of Chicago. They had been at the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia with the Chicago delegation and came to Washington en route to their summer home in Spring Lake, N. J. There they will be joined by Mr. Carter Harrison, jr., and the three younger Harrison girls. Miss Edith Harrison will be among the Chicago debutantes this season. During the Christmas holidays her parents will give a ball in her honor.

Washingtonians at the North Shore are feting Donna Julia Brambilla who, with her children, is the guest of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George von L. Meyer, jr., and her mother, Mrs. George von L. Meyer, at Myopia, Mass. Donna Brambilla is the daughter of the late Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Meyer. As Miss Julia von L. Meyer, with her sister, Miss Alice Meyer, now Mrs. Philip Coffin, of Washington, she was a belle of official and social circles of the city.

Donna Brambilla and her children will sail for Europe July 23 and will be guests at the Italian Embassy in Berlin for the Olympic games.

Goodalls Are Off For Europe Today

Newly Married Couple to Tour Continent.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Burrows Goodall, who were married on Saturday, will sail today from New York City for Europe, where they will spend the summer on a tour of the continent.

Mrs. Goodall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Shewmaker, is the former Miss Lillian Alice Shewmaker, and is principal of John Eaton School. Mr. Goodall is a United States patent examiner.

The ceremony took place at St. Alban's Church, and was followed by a supper at the Dodge Hotel.

James Warren Adamses Off to Bay State Home

Mr. and Mrs. James Warren Adams, of Woodley Park Towers, have gone to their summer home in Marblehead, Mass. They will return the last of September.

Their niece, Miss Betty Radeker, who makes her home with them and who made her debut last season, is visiting in Asheville, N. C. During the June rhododendron festival in Asheville, she was one of the ladies-in-waiting.

Miss Radeker will join her uncle and aunt later in the summer. She is visiting another aunt, Miss Carrie E. Radeker, in Asheville.

Mrs. Herbert J. Brees Is Visiting in Capital.

Mrs. Brees, wife of Brig. Gen. Herbert J. Brees, U. S. A., has come to Washington from Fort Leavenworth, Kans., for an indefinite stay.

Mr. James de Graffenreid Graves, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Temple Graves, of Washington, with his wife, Mrs. Graves, is visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Cowperthwaite, at their home in Southampton, Long Island. Mr. and Mrs. James Graves were married last November.

A New Series of Articles by

SIBILLA SKIDELSKY

Daughter of Mme. de Bianchi, Wife of the Minister of Portugal

The first article in this new series by Miss Skidelsky, graduate of the University of Paris in the History of Art and Literature, concerns itself with the origins of the City of Washington, its architectural plan as Maj. l'Enfant first conceived it, as that plan has been carried out, as it should be continued in the future. Subsequent articles will deal with Washington's churches, galleries and museums, statues and murals . . . all the spots of beauty that should be viewed by the intelligent visitor to and resident of the Capital. The first of the series will appear this Sunday on the Art Page of

Band Concert Is Attended By Notables

Colomo and Stewart Are Featured Soloists at Second Affair.

Pan-American Envoys Are Among the Diplomats Attending.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Aztec Gardens of the Pan-American Union last night formed the setting for the second in the series of summer concerts to which invitations have been issued this season by the director-general, Mr. Leo S. Rowe. Diplomats and officials whom July finds still in Washington were there to enjoy the program by the United States Army Band, under the direction of Capt. Thomas F. Darcy. Rosalmira Colombo, Mexican contralto, and Christine Stewart, who presented Latin-American dances, were the featured soloists.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who was to have been among the guests, was unable to be present.

Despite the threat of rain during the day, the night was mild and clear and many of the guests found the wraps they had brought unnecessary. The summer evening gowns of soft shades worn by the women in the audience, the flags of all nations grouped at either side of the white walls of the director general's home, and the rhythm of music such as only the Latin-American countries produce, contributed to a setting so picturesque as to seem like that of a theater spectacle of which one was an observer rather than a part.

Blooming in the pool of the gardens were rare Eyptian lotus of salmon color. The dancer and singer added color to the picture also. Miss Stewart wore first a full Spanish gown of white, ruffled in gay colors, and for her next group of dances, a black costume with a gold cape lined in violet.

Miss Colombo, who, with her sister, Miss Aourielia Colombo, was the first person to appear over television some years ago in a test made in Washington, last night wore a gown of white satin with a corsage of talisman roses at the V-neck, a rose scar, and her black hair parted and combed back with a thick braid forming a cornet about her head.

Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis was accompanied by Miss Jelks, who is here from Florida as her guest.

As the concert was concluding, Dr. Rowe addressed the countries of South America in an international radio broadcast.

Those attending included the Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Manuel Trucco, and his daughters; the Ambassador of Turkey, Mr. Mehmet Munir Ertegun; Senorita Olga Patterson, daughter of the Cuban Ambassador; Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Panama; the Minister of Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro; the Minister of Portugal and Senora de Bianchi, the Minister of Haiti and Mme. Blanchet; the Minister of Latvia, Mr. Alfred Bilmanis; the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza, the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Lozano, the Minister of Bulgaria, Mr. Dimitri Nauomoff; the Minister of Paraguay and Senora de Busk Codas, the Charge d'Affaires of Mexico and Senora de Quintanilla and the Charge d'Affaires of Cuba and Senora de Baron.

Secretary Hull Present.

Members of official society present included the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, the Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. Francis Sayre; the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Miss Josephine Roche; the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring, the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Oscar L. Chapman; the Assistant Secretary of Labor, Mr. Edward F. McGrady; Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Brigham, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Arthur W. Brown, Brig. Gen. Burt, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frederick W. Coleman, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. De Witt, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Embick, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos Fries, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Gibbins, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Patrick Guiney, Brig. Gen. John Hughes, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Charles Reynolds, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. C. D. Roberts, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Dion Williams.

Mme. Von Matsch, Feminist Of Austria, Woman's Party Guest

By Dudley Harmon.

The walled garden of historic Alva Belmont house, headquarters of the National Woman's Party, was the setting yesterday of a tea in honor of Mme. Lillian von Matsch, well-known feminist of Vienna. The former Miss Lillian Hendricks, of Washington, she is a sister of Mrs. Royal McKenna of this city.

Preceding the tea, Mme. Von Matsch gave a short talk, in which she pointed out that the feminist movement in America is the hope of European women, who have lost ground in their battle for equal rights under present dictatorships in their country. She said international communication has been so facilitated by radio, cable, and transoceanic telephones, it is a comparatively easy matter for women of Europe to follow feminist developments in this country, and to profit by them.

Mme. Von Matsch recently returned from the Philadelphia convention, where she was a member of the group working for inclusion in the Democratic platform a plank advocating equal rights for women.

To Sail Wednesday.

She sails next Wednesday aboard the Queen Mary to return to Geneva, where her husband is Austrian expert on League of Nations affairs.

Yesterday Mme. von Matsch wore a frock of navy blue georgette with bands of hemstitching around the skirt, and a white sailor hat tipped at an angle.

Mme. von Matsch interrupted her talk yesterday afternoon to greet Doris Stevens, well-known feminist and active member of the National Women's Party. Miss Stevens, who arrived late, wore a white frock with a jacket of white polka dots on a background of Chinese red, and a wide brimmed red straw hat with a band of flowers around the brim.

Tea Under Trees.

Mrs. Norman Underwood and Mrs. Ernest Daniel poured tea later in the afternoon at a table under the spreading trees in the garden. The latter had as her guests Mrs. Fred Young and Mrs. Eugene Woodson, who also recently returned to Washington from the Democratic Convention in Philadelphia.

Mrs. McKenna was present at the tea in honor of her sister, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Bambie McKenna, a student at Vassar. Miss McKenna wore a frock of printed linen, a brown, small-brimmed hat of rough straw, and low heeled brown sports sandals.

Mrs. Abby Scott Baker, former member of the national executive committee of the Woman's Party, was present, as were Miss Martha Suder, who is in charge of the Washington headquarters; Mrs. Harvey Wiley, well-known Washington club woman, and Mrs. George Morey, of Chevy Chase, president of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs. Miss Minerva Bernardino and Dr. Consuelo Bernardino of the Dominican Republic also were present.

Mrs. Georgette Howard Off on Europian Trip

Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard, accompanied by her daughter, Jean, sailed for London yesterday on the City of Havre from Baltimore, where they will spend the summer. They were joined by Miss Lelia Ware, a classmate at Goucher College of Mrs. Howard. Mrs. Howard plans to motor through England and Scotland, then go to France and Germany. In August she plans to attend the International Goodwill Congress at Budapest.

Secretary Morgenthau Resting in Bay State

Hyannis, Mass., July 2 (AP).—Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, arrived here tonight for a month's vacation at the Wianno Club.

The Secretary, who was alone, landed at 6:25 p. m. in a new Coast Guard plane after a flight of 2 hours and 15 minutes from Washington.

Mrs. Glanville Heads Australia Unit to End War

Capital Visitor Is Named Chairman by People's Mandate Group.

Announcement was made here yesterday that Mrs. Edith Glanville, well-known feminist and writer, of Sydney, Australia, who has been visiting in Washington, has become Australian chairman of the People's Mandate to End War, which has its headquarters at the Willard Hotel.

Upon her return to Sydney, she plans to enlist the support of all the leading women's organizations of her country, and to form an Australian committee of prominent women to circulate the mandate in every part of the commonwealth.

"Every Australian woman," asserted Mrs. Glanville, "will be glad to sign this mandate.

"We mothers who gave our sons in the late war know what war means, and we are ready to enter, heart and soul, into such a campaign that will demonstrate to the governments of the world how bitterly we are opposed to war.

"The People's Mandate gives us an opportunity to do something concrete. If the women of the world will unite, they can accomplish anything, and it is through women that reform must come."

Filling of Fruit For Sandwiches Is Summer Dish

Easy to Make and Pleasing to Warm Weather Appetites.

FRUIT sandwiches made either by putting two thin slices of buttered bread together with a fruit filling or by using thin slices of fruited bread are ideal accompaniments for summer beverages and salads.

These fruited sandwiches are easy to make, not nearly so much fuss in the kitchen as baking a cake, and they are just sweet enough to please warm-weather appetites.

Here is a delicious recipe for pineapple honey bread and two fruited sandwich suggestions that you will want to try as soon as you read them.

Pineapple Honey Bread.

2 tablespoons fat
1 cup honey
1 egg
2¼ cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup chopped nuts
1 cup whole bran
1 cup pineapple juice

Blend fat and honey. Add egg and beat well. Sift dry ingredients together. Mix about one-half with nuts. Add half of remaining dry ingredients to honey mixture. Add bran and pineapple juice. Add remaining ingredients. Pour into a well-oiled loaf pan which has been lined with waxed paper. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about 1¼ hours. Makes 1 large loaf.

If allowed to age for a day the flavor of this bread blends pleasantly. To serve, cut in thin slices and spread with softened butter or cream cheese which has been softened with cream.

Cherry and Cheese Sandwich.

For each sandwich, spread two slices of cracked wheat bread lightly with butter. Then spread one slice generously with softened cream cheese. Arrange on it stoned and well-drained Royal Anne cherries. On the other slice of bread, put a crisp lettuce leaf or a few sprigs of water cress. Serve the sandwich open-face.

Here is another suggestion for serving the pineapple honey bread. For each sandwich, spread three slices of the bread lightly with whipped butter. Next spread one slice with softened cream cheese. Add the second slice of bread and the thinnest of slivers of ripe banana. Add the third slice of bread and serve.

Weaving Firms Repatch Clothes

Patched clothing, draperies, table linens, etc., have become unnecessary even if the fabric has been damaged by ravenous moths or a carelessly handled cigarette.

Until recently the housewife depended upon her skill with the needle to mend damaged fabrics. This task was frequently unsuccessful which meant the torn article must be replaced. The needless expense of replacing injured fabrics has been overcome for there are weaving concerns all over the country that can so successfully mend any woven fabric that it is hard to find the damaged spot.

Cushions, damask tablecloths, draperies, sweaters, bathing suits, knitted dresses and articles made of wool, silk, linen, etc., which are too numerous to mention have been successfully mended by this weaving process.

Before Dinner Tidbits to Whet Lagging Appetites

Crisp crackers or toast cut in fancy shapes make an effective backgro und for any of the spreads mentioned in the accompanying story. These simple appetizers may be served with tomato juice cocktails to successfully tempt the appetite during warm weather.

Morning Pickup Adds Needed Zest to Light Repast.

TOMATO JUICE as a beverage to serve at every meal and at social gatherings has enjoyed a phenomenal rise in popularity during the past few years.

It is always wise to have a bottle of tomato juice in the refrigerator to serve as a beverage when unexpected guests arrive for an afternoon of bridge or in the evening when informal gatherings require refreshments.

Tomato juice, used in connection with the baby's food, under the direction of your doctor, is one of the finest adjuncts to baby's diet. A bottle of tomato juice contains vitamins A, B and C, needed by children for growth and health. For older children in school, tomato juice brings vitamin A, which helps build resistance to infection and, because of the proportions of natural sugars and acids, makes a refreshing drink one does not tire of.

If you are accustomed to serving tomato juice with canapes when you entertain you will wish to jot down some of the following combinations which make delicious spreads.

Cream cheese mixed with minced onion.

Deviled ham or deviled tongue.

Sardine paste seasoned with lemon or onion.

Peanut butter with lemon juice.

Peanut butter with chopped pickle.

Chicken livers, cooked, mashed and seasoned.

Following is a list of suggested garnishments for your canapes:

Finely chopped hard-cooked egg white

Circles, stars, or strips cut from pimiento or cooked beets

Finely chopped chives, onions, or parsley in border, strips, or other decorative arrangement

Sliced stuffed olives, or ripe olives

Tiny pearl onions

Slices of lemon, tomato, radish or pickle

Halves of salted almonds or pecans

Tomato and Orange Cocktail.

3 cups tomato juice
½ cup orange juice
1½ tablespoons lemon juice
1¼ teaspoons sugar
2 teaspoons chopped onions
A little salt, pepper and paprika

Combine the ingredients; mix thoroughly and let stand in refrigerator for at least 1 hour. Then strain through colander and pour over crushed ice in cocktail glasses.

Loveapple Cocktail.

1½ cups tomato juice
½ cup evaporated milk
½ cup chipped ice
¼ teaspoon celery salt
¼ teaspoon table salt
Dash of black pepper

Pour chilled tomato juice into the milk and stir virgorously. Add the ice and the seasoning. Serve this delicious, appetizing cocktail in chilled glasses.

Appetizer Cocktail.

1 onion, finely chopped
1½ cups tomato juice
Lemon juice to taste

Imperial Cocktail.

Place small sections of grapefruit in a sherbet glass—about half full. Pour over two tablespoons of grenadine sirup. Fill glass with small balls of cantaloupe, place cherry on top and serve ice cold.

Spanish Cream.

1 ounce (2 tablespoons) granulated gelatin
½ cup cold water
½ cup hot milk
1-3 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
2¼ cups cold milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Make a custard of the egg yolks, sugar and hot milk. Add the gelatin which has been softened in the cold water. Add cold milk, salt and vanilla. When partly congealed fold in stiffly beaten egg whites, mold and chill until firm. Turn out and garnish with crushed and sweetened fresh raspberries.

Fried Chicken Recipes Sought In Post Contest

FRIED chicken should certainly be considered good material on which to base a recipe contest, especially in Washington where it is the popular summer piece de resistance for Sunday and company dinners, for picnics and outings of all kinds.

There is always some controversy, however, as to the approved method for frying chicken, whether it is to be served with or without gravy.

Next week every Washington housewife will have an opportunity to air her views on the subject, for fried chicken has been chosen as the theme of The Post's recipe contest. Cash awards will be offered for the five best fried chicken recipes. The first prize will be $5, the second $3, and the three remaining prizes $1 each.

To enter the contest merely write out your favorite recipe for fried chicken and send it to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post in time to reach this office not later than next Saturday morning.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Family's $24,000-a-Year Income Wiped Out, Girl of 14 Hopes to Find Work as Mannequin.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read your column with much interest and hope you may be able to help me. We used to have a regular income of $24,000 a year. My father has since lost his position, and financial matters are always uncertain. We have a comfortable home, good food and a few nice clothes. My mother continually speaks of money, how low the supply is, until I could tear out my hair. I feel like a criminal if I spend a cent.

* * * *

I am only 14, but I have a talent for dramatics and such. Do you think it would be possible for me to get a position modeling girls' clothing? The only experience I have had in this line was in a fashion show staged by a private school here, tracing the development of American styles since Colonial times.

* * * *

If I could only make enough to buy my clothing and save a little I would be content. May your great work continue, and may you not think my request unworthy of your time and attention. Sincerely yours,

SCHOOLGIRL.

Chances Are Slim.

DEAR SCHOOL GIRL: I wish it were possible for me to hold out some definite hope of your finding the kind of job you visualize. But I think your chances are slim. However, the only thing to do is to put yourself in the market for such work by calling on the stylists or personnel directors in department stores and shops which specialize in misses' and children's clothing, and asking for a job as a model. I am not sure a child of your age would be considered, but the more contacts you make in the business world the more likely you are to come upon the door which leads to opportunity.

* * * *

Have you discussed your ambition with your parents? Unless you have their consent both to seek and accept employment, it occurs to me you would not very far with your plans. Perhaps the best and only thing you can do for the next three or four years is turn a deaf inner ear to your mother's laments, while making the most of your educational opportunities, and graciously practicing whatever self-denial your father's reduced income necessitates. When you are 17 or 18, your chances of making money through your own endeavor will be considerably greater than they are today. M. H.

Personality Handicap?

DEAR MAY HAWORTH: I came to Washington eight months ago from a Northern State to find employment. I had fitted myself for office work, and I have registered with various employment agencies here, and also have made contacts through a local business school. So far, all I have found are temporary positions. In each case, I have been retained longer than the time stipulated in the beginning, and twice have been called back when extra help was needed. I believe this shows my work is satisfactory.

* * * *

But what I am looking for is a permanent connection. And here is my problem: I have been sent to any number of places where an incumbent for a permanent position was being sought. I was questioned at length as to my training, experience, background, salary expected and ambitions. My answers seemed to be satisfactory and I was told I would be called within the next day or two.

* * * *

In each case I waited anxiously by the telephone, only to be notified at the end of a day or two that the position had been filled. Now, what is my trouble? I have no physical defects, do not wear glasses, am less than 23 years old, weigh 110 pounds, have naturally curly hair, simply cut, wear plain, tailored clothes, good hose and shoes and do not use bright nail polish. There must be something in my voice or personality which antagonizes—but how can I tell what it is? Not knowing what ails me, how can I set about changing myself?

* * * *

I hate to admit it, but I am getting pretty thoroughly discouraged. Won't you answer me soon? It will mean so much to a homesick

YANKEE.

Interview Suggested.

DEAR YANKEE: It would be impossible for me even to guess what your personality handicap may be without having a personal interview with you. Judging from the snapshot you inclose with your letter, I should say you are more attractive in appearance than the average young woman. Your picture shows you to be tall, slim, animated and intelligent looking, with exceptionally nice features, and your dress was both smart and becoming. Why don't you call at my office some afternoon? It would be best to telephone first and made a definite appointment. I can be reached any morning after 10 a. m. by telephoning NAtional 4200, Branch 343.

Ammonia, Soda, Relieves Pain Of Insect Bites

Swelling and Inflammation Should be Treated to Avoid Infection.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

This is the season when certain insects take advantage of the opportunity to vary their diets, and there are enough mosquitoes, spiders, flies, fleas, gnats, etc., in the world to keep us all of a-twitter. Many of them in the act of sucking blood inject an irritating fluid beneath the skin and the poison produces—according to the susceptibility of the patient—swelling accompanied by intense itching. Sometimes there is considerable pain and actual inflammation.

Few of us realize that many of the "bites" we complain of are due to the tiny fly known as the midge or gnat. These insects are so small that they may not be observed and, as they can pass through the ordinary window screen and are night as well as day biters, they frequently cause eruptions on the bodies of infants.

Among the stinging insects we think of bees, wasps, hornets and ants, and any one of these may cause irritating lesions that in some cases may prove serious. The systemic effect is due not only to the original poison, but to bacteria that may be introduced into the wound. This complicates the situation and in no small number of instances leads to abscess formation. Furthermore, some individuals exhibit a high degree of sensitivity to bee or wasp venom and will develop alarming constitutional symptoms.

While superstition has exaggerated the menace of spider bites, yet the black widow of vile repute is dangerous. Recognition of the "crittur" is not difficult because of the red spot on the abdomen which has the appearance of an hourglass. The symptoms are aching and numbness, with the affected part of the body becoming purplish red and greatly swollen.

A Simple Plan.

For most insect wounds there is a simple but effective plan of treatment. In the first place, the skin surface should be cleansed thoroughly with soap and water, then covered with gauze soaked in ammonia water or a strong solution of baking soda. This application should be continued for several hours. If the swelling is severe an ice bag will be helpful. Tincture of camphor or even compresses saturated with alcohol will prove soothing. If it is obvious that the area of a bite is swelling rapidly, and there are accompanying systemic symptoms such as fainting, collapse, and shortness of breath, a physician should be summoned. In the meantime, the wound should be incised quickly and the poison sucked out, much as one might treat a snake bite. An antiseptic dressing should then be applied.

No one should invite contact with the venom of any sort of bug—creeping, crawling, or flying. Some odoriferous oils, such as citronella, will aid in preventing the attacks of mosquitoes, but avoiding their vicinity is the best procedure. Thorough screening of living quarters is important.

Double Duty Lace Frock

Here is an ideal double duty frock for summer; one that can go to business and then on to dinner with fashion abandon. It is also just as much at home in the country as it is in town. Simplicity plus smart details distinguishes this cool costume of cotton lace which may be had in pink, natural and turquoise blue, all trimmed with brown ric rac braid and buttons. It is a delightful deviation from the more stereotyped summer dress and one that lends itself to changes of accessories. For information call The Post Fashion Editor, National 4200, extension 323.

Woman Lobbyist Discovers Common Sense And Intelligence Best Methods of Appeal

Mrs. West Declares Men Do Not Fall for Flattery.

THE FEMININE LOBBYIST, according to popular tradition, is one of two types—a determined zealot or a smirking buttonholer. But Mrs. Helen Hunt West, of Jacksonville, Fla., who has been lobbying since her teen-age days, says that the modern technique of lobbying is built neither upon aggressiveness nor charm, but on common sense.

As chairman of the Congressional committee of the National Woman's Party, Mrs. West has charge of the lobbying activities of a group that since pre-suffrage days never has hesitated to go directly after what it wanted. As a militant suffragist (before she was even old enough to vote), as a White House picket, as a leader of many a feminist Congressional skirmish, and more recently as director of her organization's drive on the Democratic platform committee at Philadelphia, she has had wide opportunity to study the best methods by which men can be influenced.

Appeal to Intelligence.

"Appeal to men's intelligence rather than their sentimentality," she says. "They are not the soft fellows they have been pictured. Of course, it's certainly no handicap to have attractive women lobbyists, but in the final analysis men are influenced by a woman's common sense and her forceful presentation of facts."

Mrs. West stopped in Washington on her way home to confer with leaders here over her party's next step in its equal rights campaign.

"We are not at all discouraged by our experiences at the two national conventions," she said.

MRS. HELEN HUNT WEST.

"While the parties did not incorporate our planks for equal rights and for lack of of minimum wage discrimination, we yet feel that we have found in both parties much support in high places.

Way Left Open.

"The Democratic platform left the way open to go forward along the line of equality legislation, although the platform was vague and should be clarified. The Democrats stressed a belief in equality of economic opportunity, and that would affect women as well as men.

"The fact that the Republicans came out for a minimum wage for women may have been due to a misunderstanding as to just what such legislation meant to women. The party did not realize that giving women protection in industry also meant putting industrial restrictions on them.

"What we are trying to make clear is that our organization is not fighting a minimum wage, but that we feel that any minimum wage legislation should apply equally to men and to women, should be on the job rather than on sex. Otherwise women will suffer from it."

Mrs. West said her party would cotinue before the next Congress its campaign for an equal rights amendment. "Meanwhile," she said, "we will work in the States to develop sentiment in favor of our program."

Mrs. West is an attorney and newspaper woman. She was the first registered woman voter in the State of Florida.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I DECIDED that my job was important enough to be run from a desk," announced Marcia Elliott to her bridge foursome. "So I've bought myself one and I'm going to be so business-like you won't know me."

"For about a week!" laughed Lucy Nail. "Then I'll bet the bills are tucked under the cocoa can the same as always. Anyway, that's how I do it."

"Wait and see," retorted Marcia. "And anyway I'll have a desk which will be beautiful at least, even if I do forget to use it for my million-dollar contracts. I guess I need a place for stationery and pen and ink and all that business."

Marcia's new desk is pickled pine and simply lovely. We don't blame her for turning over a new leaf in order to add that to her possessions. And it's nice in her living room, too. She has the walls and carpet both in a dust or dun color . . . of exactly the same shade. The woodwork is in ivory and most of the furniture is mahogany, with the exception of this pickled pine piece. The sofa is in olive green satin . . . so are some side chairs. The draperies are in zinnia colored damask . . . a love seat is in this same material. The other chairs are in a figured material on an ivory ground with splashes of dull green and zinnia in the pattern.

The dining room adjoining has the same dust colored walls and carpet, but the contrasting colors are different, yet harmonious. French blue is used for the chair seats and backs and the figured material in the living room is used for the draperies over draw curtains of blue taffeta, then glass curtains of ivory.

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

CHAPTER 22

AT LAST she heard the door of the studio open slowly, and to her mingled relief and surprise Helen Bates came through into the small hall. The girl looked sheepish and uncomfortable, as well she might.

"What are you doing here at this time of night?" asked Ruth.

"I don't know," mumbled Helen.

"Do go back to the castle! Capt. Trefane would be really angry if he learned that you stay on here as late as this. Why, it's nearly 11!"

"I don't care what Philip Trefane is likely to fear one way or the other! Besides, I know you won't give me away——"

And then a sudden suspicion filled Ruth's mind. "Were you sleeping in the room I'm in now before your stepfather arranged for me to have it?"

Helen nodded.

"Oh, my dear, I am sorry I turnd you out!"

And the American girl did feel really sorry. "Did they know that you slept over here?" She was telling herself that Iris at any rate must have known.

"I told them both that nothing would induce me to sleep in the room they gave me at the castle; it's a horrible room, close to the kitchen, and full of rats."

"Rats?" echoed Ruth, incredulously.

"Yes, rats; for it's next to the larder. It's the room they gave the servant last time we were here—I mean a woman Iris brought from London. She wouldn't sleep there, and they had to give her one of the good bedrooms. Oh, Miss Starling, do let me stay down here! I am absolutely comfortable, and there's a bed in the studio now. It's the one that was upstairs, before they got the new one for you. I promise I won't make any noise. I'm awfully sorry you heard me!"

Helen was looking pleadingly at Ruth, her large eyes, the one good feature of her face, were fixed imploringly on the older girl's grave countenance.

Pleads to Stay.

"Please, please, let me stay!" she said again. "No one will ever know. I promise not to make a noise!"

"I don't mind you making a noise, now I know who it is," said Ruth hesitatingly. "But it seems to me such a queer thing to do. I mean to sleep in that cluttered-up studio." She didn't like to add a question which was trembling on her lips, that was: "Do you sleep in your clothes?"

Helen said with a sudden laugh, and it was strange to hear the girl laugh, "I keep two nightgowns down here. There's a kind of a little scullery, where there used to be a fresh water tap, and I did my own washing there. But now they've diverted the water away from the scullery because of the bathroom." As if driven to tell the truth, she added, "Yesterday I washed out my nightgown in your bath. I felt rather ashamed of going through your room without asking your leave, but I didn't think you'd mind."

Ruth smiled. "Of course you can use my bathroom."

"May I really? How awfully good of you!"

And so it was left, for Ruth hadn't the heart to banish the girl, but she felt guilty when Iris, the next day, asked her whether she did not mind being alone in the annex.

"We might arrange for one of the two girls we have in from the village to sleep in the studio," she suggested. "Anything can be managed if one is willing to pay for it."

But Philip frowned, and said it was absolutely safe, and hastily Ruth answered that she preferred being alone.

And that was not all, for the next time she was riding with Lord John he asked suddenly, "Is it true that you are now living in the annex?" and he looked puzzled, even angry.

"Why shouldn't I?" she parried. "In some ways it's very much pleasanter sleeping there in a small cozy room than in the castle. As a matter of fact I prefer the annex."

"You may prefer the annex, but it isn't a bit safe for you to sleep there alone. It's open to any passer-by to walk down on to the beach, and break into the house."

He didn't add what was in fact the truth, that there had been a certain amount of local gossip concerning Ruth Starling's jewels. Not only had she the string of emeralds which had so impressed Philip Trefane the first time he had met her; she also had some fine pearls, and a superb diamond ornament she had bought in New York from the wife of a man who had at one time been very wealthy, and who had suddenly lost everything he had.

Lord John Is Anxious.

Ruth's friend was looking at her with anxious eyes. "I can't make it out," he muttered half to himself. "I mean why the bathroom was put there instead of in the castle? I didn't believe it when I first heard it."

"The real reason——" she began, and then she stopped.

"Yes, tell me the real reason."

"Lady Cicester didn't like a lot of pipes being brought into the castle; also Philip discovered that there was already cold water in the cottage, laid on from a well in the garden. There's the electric power station in the flower garden, and the bath water is heated with an electric geyser."

He still looked so disturbed that she confessed at last the truth: "I'll tell you a secret," and she smiled, he said to himself, enchantingly. "As a matter of fact poor Helen Bates sleeps in the studio."

His face cleared, but though Ruth was never to learn the fact, Lord John had not heard the last of that bathroom in the annex.

On the afternoon following his ride and talk with Ruth, he sauntered down the flower garden, and he had only been there for a few minutes when he turned to see Troutbeck at his elbow, "I would like a word with you, my lord."

The old Yorkshireman had noticed that his employer had fallen into the way of spending quite a lot of time close to what was locally called "the shore," and that he came oftener to the flower garden than he had been wont to do.

"Certainly, Troutbeck. "What is it?"

"It's about the water and the electricity I'm supplying from up here to the annex. I am not satisfied with the way the work was done, for that old chap from Lilyford don't know much about plumbing. That's the plain truth of it, my lord! Capt. Trefane was set on its being all done—you might almost say in a few hours. Once he'd got a grand glass bath down from London, he wanted the young lady who's sleeping there now to move in instanter. And so the work was rushed through, extra being paid all along the line."

Edgar Testifies In Suit to Win $300,000 Balm

Tells Court of Intimacy of Former Wife and Wealthy Oil Man.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., July 2.—James Edgar, jr., testified today at the trial of his $300,000 love-theft suit against Lewis E. Mallory 3d, wealthy Pennsylvania oil man, he saw his former wife unclothed in Mallory's hotel room last March.

Edgar, 27-year-old Flint (Mich.) manufacturer, is suing Mallory for alleged seduction and alienation of the affections of Kathryn Crawford Edgar, one-time film actress.

Recounting that he became tired of waiting for his wife on a March night at a fashionable ocean-front hotel, Edgar said he went for a stroll about the grounds.

Heard Voice.

"I heard a voice that resembled hers," he said. "It came from a corner of the building. The window was half-open. I looked in. I was amazed to see her and another man."

He said the man was Mallory.

Then, he testified, "I was grabbed by the arm and forcibly taken away."

William Holstruck, night watchman who was an earlier witness, said he took Edgar from the window.

Found Note in Bag.

On one occasion, Edgar said, he found in his wife's handbag a note reading:

"Darling, never forget I have loved you all there is, and never forget I still love you all there is. Lew."

He said he allowed his wife—they were divorced last Friday—$700 a month for personal and household expenses. He said he bought her a $2,500 mink coat last December.

Mallory, who preceded Edgar on the stand, was called in a surprise move by the young manufacturer's attorneys.

He told the six-man jury that $1,250,000 he inherited upon becoming of age in October, 1934, has shrunk to $130,000.

Efforts of his attorneys to prevent testimony regarding his wealth was overruled by Circuit Judge W. W. Trammell, who said he must answer questions he could "of his own knowledge."

Garner Returns After Mexico Visit

Monterrey, Mexico, July 2 (AP).—Vice President John N. Garner of the United States received in Mexico with head-of-state honors and a thorough baggage examination, returned to the border today.

When he left, 60 automobiles bearing 150 citizens of the United States and Mexico started for Victoria, en route to Mexico City, over the new International highway under dedication.

Mr. Garner and his fellow citizens were enthusiastically received when they arrived yesterday.

When the motorcade started South, Mr. Garner said: "I am very disappointed that I am unable to go to Mexico City."

Although the government instructed that he be honored as a visiting chief of state, the customs and immigration officials at Nuevo Laredo apparently were not advised. They gave his baggage a most searching examination.

Here, however, he received a 21-gun salute by the military garrison and was banqueted by Gen. Juan Andrew Almazan, commander of the zone.

Killer, 72, Freed In Denist's Death

San Jose, Calif., July 2 (U.P.).—Peter Voiss, 72, bearded prosecutor, was acquitted of the murder of Dr. Jasper Gattuccio today by a jury which deliberated exactly 60 minutes.

The old man allegedly killed Dr. Gattuccio, an amateur photographer, because the dentist took a photograph of the old prospector and his picturesque burro-drawn wagon without paying Voiss for the privilege. The picture in question, showing Voiss clutching the shotgun with which he killed the photographer an instant later, was published widely.

It is believed the death gun, an old-fashioned single-barrel, single-shot shotgun, was the most important evidence leading to Voiss' acquittal. The defense had contended that the gun was fired accidentally when the trigger was caught on a strap. That very thing happened during the trial when the gun was being handled by attorneys.

Twin's Life

Mother Not Told.

Mrs. Fiorenza does not yet know that she is the mother of Siamese twins. More than a score of newsmen and photographers trooped to her home in Winthrop street this afternoon, but relatives curbed her curiosity by telling her that she had given birth to an extraordinarily small baby that was in an incubator at Lawrence Memorial Hospital in nearby Medford. The attractive, dark-eyed mother has two other children, Carl, 3, and Anna, 2, both of whom were born under normal circumstances.

It was early today, two hours after the death of Carina, that the Siamese twins were transferred by ambulance from their home to the small but well-equipped hospital on a hill in the center of this city. Placed in a private room, with a nurse assigned for constant attendance, Mary gradually gained strength during the day as the hour approached for the delicate operation to free her from her dead sister.

"I don't think the operation itself will be very difficult," Dr. Vernaglia said. "The chief danger lies in the after-effects—meningitis, injury to the brain, etc. Then, of course, there is the danger of infection due to deterioration. Naturally, the operation itself would cause a lot of trouble if it were found that there are communicating arteries. Chances of the operation being successful would improve the longer it was delayed.

On Danger List.

Though Mary's condition was described as "fairly good" at the hospital tonight, her name remained on the danger list. Attaches withheld information as to how and what she was being fed, but reported that she was responding satisfactorily to a formula diet.

At birth, Mary weighed five pounds, while Carina, the first-born weighed seven.

Short, thick-set Dr. Vernaglia indicated at first that a prominent Boston brain specialist would operate, but later decided to do so himself.

"It will be necessary," he said, "to cut down between the skulls, keeping carefully to the side of the dead infant." Thus, he explained, he probably would not need to anesthetize Mary.

Not nearly so rare as quintuplets, Siamese twins, according to a Johns Hopkins Hospital authority, occur about once in 50,000 births. This same authority said the chances were about 10 to 1 that a severance operation would prove fatal.

Lipstick Message Studied in Slaying

Chicago, July 2 (AP).—A clew to the slayer of Mrs. Florence Thompson Castle, 24-year-old tavern entertainer, beaten to detah as she lay in bed with her 7-year-old son, was sought by the police today in the crytic message, "Black Legon Game," found scrawled in lipstick on the dresser mirror of the victim's hotel room.

Capt. William J. O'Brien, in charge of the investigation, ordered officers to examine records of all suspects to determine if any of them had worked in groceries, meat markets or restauraats where they might have been experienced in printing signs on glass.

The order followed receipt of a letter signed by D. Conway, of Milwaukee, Wis., a sign painter, who said the inscription had been written by a man familiar with such work.

The young son of the victim, 7-year-old Jimmy Thompson, who told officers he saw a "big Negro" bludgeon her as he slept with her, spent the day with his father, James Vincent Thompson, of Revere, Mass. The elder Thompson flew in to Chicago yesterday and prevailed on police to permit him to try to get from Jimmy the truth of his frequently varied account of the crime.

Amos P. Wilder Dies; Connecticut Editor, 74

New Haven, Conn., July 2 (U.P.).—Amos P. Wilder, 74, father of Novelist Thorton Wilder and dean of Connecticut newspaper editors, died here today.

In 1906, Wilder was appointed by President Theodore Roosevelt as consul general at Hongkong, China. Three years later he was assigned to the same position at Shankhai. He remained in the latter post for five years and then returned to the United States.

Death of Heir To Oil Fortune Held Accident

Daughter Testifies at Boise After Asphyxiation of James McDonald 2d.

By the Associated Press.

Boise, Idaho, July 2.—An Ada County coroner's jury brought in a verdict tonight that James McDonald 2d, Boise heir to a Standard Oil Co. fortune, died accidentally in the garage at his residence early today of carbon-monoxide poisoning.

The body of the heir to wealth accumulated by his father—one-time London partner of John D. Rockefeller—was found in the garage of the family residence here today by Less Outzs, caretaker, and Mrs. Lulu McDonald, McDonald's third wife.

Miss Jane McDonald, foster daughter of the 46-year-old World War officer, said he had been perturbed by financial affairs a few hours before he was found dead.

Drank Beer.

She said she had last seen him in her room about 3:30 a. m., four hours before the body was found.

"He had had a drink of beer, but I don't think he was intoxicated," Miss McDonald replied to questions.

"When I last saw him, he told me he was going for a ride."

Outzs, the caretaker, said he heard a motor running in the garage, looked through a window and saw McDonald's body lying on the running board.

He called Mrs. McDonald, had firemen and physicians summoned and then broke down the garage door—locked automatically from the inside.

Father Died in D. C.

Surviving besides Mrs. McDonald and Miss McDonald are James McDonald 3d and Robert McDonald, of San Francisco.

McDonald was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, May 8, 1890, son of the late James McDonald, one-time European representative of Rockefeller in the Standard Oil Co. The father died in Washington, D. C., 21 years ago, leaving an estate estimated by attorneys at $5,000,000.

One case which attracted wide attention was that decided by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals May 3, 1926, interpreting McDonald's rights under the will left by the elder McDonald.

Sued Executor.

McDonald sued Lawrence Maxwell, executor and trustee under his father's will.

He contended he was entitled to the outright possession of certain portions of the estate which his attorneys claimed his father had attempted to dispose of through provisions of his will that were void.

At the time the principal of the estate was estimated at $2,500,000, and accumulated income of approximately another $2,500,000.

The Appellate Court decided that McDonald's views were not incompatible with the interests of his minor children, who also were beneficiaries under the will.

Miner Buried 22 Hours in Pit Dies of Injuries

All 'Home-Made' Workings Dynamited in Area After Tragedy.

By the Associated Press.

Shamokin, Pa., July 2.—Enoch Kuklinskie, jr., who was trapped for 24 hours by a fall of rock in an abandoned coal working, died tonight, 12 hours after his rescue.

Internal injuries and a fractured vertebra caused his death, physicians said. Oxygen was administered late in the day and everyone had been barred from his hospital room except doctors and nurses.

His rescue this morning from a coal hole in North Mountain was a signal for dynamiting of every "home-made mine" in the district, including the one from which he was taken.

Kuklinskie, 35, one of the hundreds of unhired workers selling fuel from makeshift holes, was brought to the surface of a 30-foot pit this morning.

Shouts went up from the crowd that spent the night about the hole, as the pitiful figure, swathed in blankets, crusted with black mud and strapped to a plank, was brought into the sunlight.

"Air, air, give me air!" he gasped through the wet towel bound about his face. Kuklinskie struggled and rescuers raised the towel from his mouth.

The former miner and his father had only recently returned to the hole for some "Fourth of July money."

They defied warnings of the Stevens Coal Co., which owns the property. Shamokin Valley is honeycombed by abandoned workings, and rock falls are frequent.

But in the center of this danger spot, unemployed men and boys have dug mines of their own.

Father Escapes.

A rock fall caught the Kuklinskies. The father escaped, and spread the alarm. The Stevens Coal Co. called out picked rescue men. Encouraged by cries from the depths, rescuers worked throughout yesterday and last night.

Down the jagged gangway they scrambled and slipped to where Kuklinskie lay, pinioned by his wheelbarrow and a pile of small timbers. Rescuers said the wheelbarrow provided the opening through which Kuklinskie breathed air.

A heavy plank was lowered. Kuklinskie was strapped on it. Heavy chains were bound about the plank and attached to the hand-windlass at the top. Slowly, Kuklinskie was hoisted.

George Jones, superintendent of the Stevens Coal Co., crusader against such mining which operators claim produces and sells more than 5,000,000 tons of anthracite annually, immediately directed that every hole in the mountain be destroyed.

City Orders Study of Tax; Rise Is Hinted

Fiscal Inquiry Causes Uncertainty; Thomas at White House.

By James D. Secrest.

The specter of additional local taxes, removed temporarily when Congress voted to appropriate $5,000,000 as a Federal lump sum payment to the District, was raised again yesterday by the District Commissioners as they turned their attention to budget needs for the fiscal year 1938.

Anticipating a shortage of possibly as much as $1,000,000 in revenue as compared with estimated operating expenses, the Commissioners revived a special tax investigating committee and ordered it to resume and complete a job started last winter.

Although the exact state of District finances will not be known until Auditor Daniel J. Donovan makes his report for the past fiscal year to the Commissioners, probably early next week, Melvin C. Hazen, president of the board, said there is enough evidence on hand to show that the District will have to obtain additional revenue to meet the budget which they will submit to the Budget Bureau in early fall.

The uncertainty of the outcome of the fiscal relations study authorized by the 1937 District act makes the problem more difficult, Hazen admitted, and, should the President recommend to the next Congress an increase in the Federal contribution of a million or more above the $5,700,000 proposed last year, there would be no need for additional taxes.

Thomas Sees President.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, author of the fiscal relations study plan, called on the President yesterday, but he said the District-Federal fiscal policy was not discussed. He suggested that District officials confer with Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director, regarding the scope and direction of the investigation.

One of the possible temporary solutions to the District's financial enigma, Hazen said, is the utilization of the gasoline tax fund to pay the expenses of maintaining the traffic department, the police traffic bureau, and the network of traffic signals.

This would take about $650,000 off the burden on general revenue, he said, and thus would provide that much more money for other municipal expenses. Hazen said he considered the expenses of supervising traffic legitimate uses of the gasoline tax fund now impounded.

Gas Tax to Be Studied.

The major new income sources to be studied by the special tax committee are an increase in the gasoline tax, a motor vehicle weight tax, inheritance levies, additional taxes on public utilities, and possibly an income tax, although the latter is not favored by the Commissioners.

Maj. Donovan is chairman of the committee, which made a preliminary report setting forth the fiscal problem but offering no recommendations several months ago. He succeeds E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel, who was the original chairman.

Other members are Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission; People's Counsel William A. Roberts, Vernon West, acting corporation counsel; Fred D. Allen, tax assessor, and Chatham M. Towers, tax collector.

All of the bills proposing new taxes for the District before the Seventy-fourth Congress died with adjournment, so that the new Congress will start with a clean slate. However, District officials expect many of the old measures will be reintroduced and they will be in a position to make their own recommendations.

Guffey Kin Called Minister to Rally

By the Associated Press.

Responsibility for the presence of a colored clergyman on the program of the Democratic National Convention at Philadelphia was assumed yesterday by Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, for his sister, Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, Democratic national committeewoman for Pennsylvania.

The presence of the Rev. Marshall T. Shepard, of Philadelphia, who offered the invocation opening the second day's session, resulted in the walkout of Senator E. D. Smith, of South Carolina, and a number of members of the Palmetto State delegation.

Child, Missing After Playmate Is Shot, Returns

Boy, 10, Passes Night in Woods as Girl, 10, Fights for Life.

Herbert William Hall, 10, of Takoma Park, Md., who disappeared late Wednesday after seriously wounding his 10-year-old companion, Jean Patton, in an accidental shooting, returned home yesterday after a night of tramping through the woods, dining on berries and sleeping in garages.

The injured girl, meanwhile, was fighting for life at Children's Hospital. An emergency operation was performed to remove a .22-caliber slug from her abdomen. Relatives and friends stood by, ready to give their blood should a transfusion become necessary.

She was shot at the home of another playmate, Billy W. Detrich, 12, of 10 Valley View avenue, Takoma Park.

Billy was proudly showing his friends the rifle his father had given him for his birthday when the telephone rang.

The Hall youngster, with Jean, who lives in Washington, Pa., and was visiting her sister, and Mary Jane Detrich, 10, had been watching Billy fire the gun into a mudpuddle.

"I was loading the rifle so Billy could shoot it again when he came back," Herbert told Takoma Park Policeman Albert Thomas.

"I started laying it on the bed when my finger accidentally touched the trigger and it went off."

2 Marine Officers Go to Philadelphia

Two prominent Marine Corps officers, both natives of this city, have been named to head the Marine Corps Depot of Supplies at Philadelphia. They are Col. Charles R. Sanderson, who was named depot quartermaster, and Lieut. Col. David L. S. Brewster, selected executive officer and assistant to Col. Senderson.

Col. Sanderson relieves Col. Seth Williams, who comes to the Capital on July 1 as assistant to Brig. Gen. Hugh Matthews, quartermaster of the Marine Corps.

The new depot quartermaster has been executive officer under Col. Williams, while Lieut. Col. Brewster relinquished the post of officer in charge of the Western recruiting division, prior to coming to Philadelphia.

Red Bat, Kangaroo Rat Invade National Parks

The red bat and the kangaroo rat, the first of which is distinguished by its red wings and the second of which is unusual because he has a very big tail like the Australian kangaroo, have invaded the National Park Reservations in Utah, Department of Interior scientists reported yesterday.

The animals are not unusual in other parts of the country, but this is the first time they have been found on the national Western reservations.

70 Youngsters Ready to Enjoy District Camp

4 Doctors Examine Boys Who Will Leave for Dumfries, Va.

Seventy eager youngsters are ready to enjoy a two weeks' vacation at the Boys' Club of Washington summer camp near Dumfries, Va. Physical examinations were completed yesterday and the boys will leave by bus at 9 a. m. Monday.

And as the youthful club members awaited turns to be thumped and inspected by four attending physicians at the clubhouse, 230 C street northwest, one of the medical examiners recalled a time—some years ago—when he stood in line for the same examination.

He was Dr. Richard B. Castell, now resident physician at George Washington University Hosptial. Dr. Castell, former high school and university basketball star, offered his services in the summer vacation program.

He gathered together a group of medical men and conducted the examinations without charge.

"The club helped me when I needed help and this is the least I can do in return," said Dr. Castell.

Through his aid, the club is able to send several additional boys to camp. Donated services of the medical examiners and funds of the Community Chest combined to provide a vacation to youngsters unable to supply the small camping fee.

Drs. George Hutto, William Aud, John Dominick and Thomas Foley aided in the examinations.

Mrs. Roosevelt Visits Projects At Alexandria

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday inspected two projects sponsored jointly by Alexandria and the Works Progress Administration. She was accompanied on her tour by her secretary, Miss Malvina Schneider; Miss Marie McCurry, representative from the office of Mrs. Ellen Woodum, assistant administrator of WPA projects, and Mrs. Mary Funkhouser, director of public works in Washington.

One project is the sewing center, where Mrs. Roosevelt talked with several women working under the supervision of Mrs. Ida Lanum.

She then went to the colored day nursery, in its temporary quarters at the Parker Gray School, where she found 29 children, from 2 to 6 years old. She displayed interest in the care of the children and questioned Bertha Tancil, superintendent, as to the food supplied them, and urged that their mothers be instructed as to proper nourishment for them. She expressed satisfaction when told that the nursery would be installed in a permanent home on the 400 block of Gibbon street within the next 30 days.

Others who accompanied Mrs. Roosevelt included Miss Ella G. Agnew, State director of women's work for the WPA; Miss Dorothy K. Smith, of Staunton, district director of women's work in the State; Mrs. Emma Swartz, Alexandria, field superintendent of women's work; A. W. Petersilia, Alexandria, field superintendent of construction projects, and H. E. Howard, Alexandria, local project superintendent.

'08 Speed Demon (15 M.P.H.) Now Seeks Safe-Driver Title

Back in the good old days when the automobile was a snorting novelty which frightened horses, Capt. Milton D. Smith, commanding the Police Traffic Division, was arrested for speeding.

He confessed it all yesterday as he signed an application for entrance in the National "Safe Driver" Contest, sponsored by the C. I. T. Safety Foundation and the American Automobile Association.

That was in 1908.

Capt. Smith, then a young man, was chugging along a downtown street in his two-cylinder car. He forgot to look at his speedometer. He was going 15-miles an hour. Along came a policeman, wearing one of those blue felt derbies gendarmerie everywhere wore in those days.

"You're pinched," said he.

But that is the only blemish on Capt. Smith's record. He first started driving in 1906. He has driven his own automobile 100,000 miles since then, in all sections of the country.

So, naturally, he feels he is entitled to enter the contest to determine who is Washington's safest driver.

Application blanks for the contest may be obtained at the local motor club headquarters in the Mills Building, Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Entrants must file intentions before July 15.

Checking Nation-wide applications received during the last several weeks, officials of the A. A. A. announced that the average age of motorists seeking safety honors is 46, and the average number of driving years without an accident or law violation is 20.

Overpass Work To Start Soon At Kensington

Work will be started within the next few days on the construction of an overpass at the Baltimore & Ohio crossing in Kensington to eliminate the dangerous grade crossing, officials of the Maryland State Roads Commission announced yesterday.

The project will be financed with a PWA appropriation and is part of a Nation-wide Federal grade crossing elimination program authorized in the summer of 1935 after the tragic accident in Rockville when a train collided with a school bus.

The contract has been awarded to the firm of Jarboe & Houghton, of Mechanicsville, Md. It calls for construction of a bridge 120 feet long with a 36-foot concrete roadbed and 5-foot sidewalks on either side. The bridge will cost $27,570 and is to be completed in 70 working days.

Surveys are now being made by engineers of the State commission for approaches to the overpass, and officials hope to advertise for bids for this work soon.

Announcement also was made at the State roads commission office that bids will be opened next Tuesday for improving Wisconsin avenue with a center parkway from the District line to Bradley lane and pavement from Bradley lane to the Old Georgetown road.

Bus Overcrowding Inquiry Is Started

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday began an investigation of a complaint filed by People's Counsel William A. Roberts that a Massachusetts avenue bus with a capacity of 31 carried 39 passengers on a downtown trip during the morning rush period.

Roberts urged the commission to prosecute the Capital Transit Co. for violation of its order prohibiting overcrowding of buses and offered to aid in the prosecution.

Richmond B. Keech, acting chairman of the commission, said the complaint is being investigated and that it will probably lead to the withdrawal of the smaller buses on the Massachusetts avenue line, at least during rush periods.

The people's counsel, who furnished the commission with the names of two witnesses, said he had previous complaints of overcrowding on the same line. Violation of the commission's order in this regard, he said, is hazardous not only to the passengers aboard the bus but to other traffic on the streets as well.

Antinoise Gains Listed for Mayors

Real progress in muffling city noises was reported at the headquarters of the United States Conference of Mayors by Paul V. Betters, director of the conference, yesterday.

Seven specific sound sources now being regulated in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, Portland, Oreg., Jacksonville, Fla., and Albany were listed.

These are auto horns and sirens, compressed air devices, street cars and buses, loudspeakers, building operations, "advertising by noisy methods and devices," "old-fashioned milk wagons, garbage and rubbage carts."

Trade Board To Seek Fund For New Span

Group Is Named to Push Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge Plans.

Another Committee Is Formed to Study Ekington Approaches.

A committee to co-operate in obtaining funds for the new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge was appointed yesterday at a joint meeting of the committee on streets and avenues and the committee on bridges of the Washington Board of Trade. The sessions was held at the Harrington Hotel.

The principal speaker was Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways of the District. Capt. Whitehurst told of the street and bridge program for the future.

Another committee was appointed to study roadway approaches in the Ekington section of Washington. Its members are D. S. Wright, Robert H. Dalgeish, Oliver Metzerott and Everett C. Crites.

The following were appointed to the committee to study the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge situation: Adelburt W. Lee, chairman, Metzerott, Roy S. Braden, Crites and others.

Resolutions of sympathy on the death of Representative Bernhard M. Jacobsen were passed, and Dr. Llewellyn Jordan was appointed to draft consolation to be sent his family.

Another committee was named to take up with the District Commissioners the matter of giving official recognition to the name of "Langley" for the New Hampshire avenue viaduct.

Buchholz Is Freed In Traffic Fatality

Fred W. Buchholz, prominent restaurant owner, was exonerated yesterday when a coroner's jury held accidental the traffic death of John F. Oertel, 78, of Vienna, Va.

Oertel was killed Tuesday when struck at Nineteenth street and Constitution avenue northwest, by Buchholz's car. He died in Emergency Hospital a few hours after he was struck.

Capt. John L. Hernheim, of the Eleventh Engine Company, who was a passenger in Buchholz's car at the time of the accident, testified the car was moving at a moderate rate of speed and that Oertel appeared in front of the car before Buchholz could stop. He said apparently the man had walked into the street from between parked automobiles.

Oertel will be buried in Vienna, Va., this afternoon.

Carlisle V. Weakley Dies at Home Here

Carlisle Vincent Weakley, 42, assistant manager of Warfield Motor Co. and member of the Washington Board of Trade, died at his home, 4107 New Hampshire avenue northwest, yesterday after nearly a year's illness, following a cerebral hemorrhage.

Weakley had lived in Washington for more than 25 years. He was born in Baltimore, Md.

His wife, Mrs. Frances D. Weakley, survives.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at his residence and mass will be said at St. Gabriel's Catholic Church, of which he was a member, at 9 a. m. Burial will be in Long Green, Md.

Kindler, Back In Washington, Hails Concerts

City Cannot Afford to Be Content With Any But Best, He Says.

From a two-month trip abroad, Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, yesterday extended his best wishes to the Washington Summer Concerts Association, now planning a summer symphony series, and declared that Washington "cannot afford to be content with anything but the best in musical entertainment."

"Giving and arranging great concerts is not as easy as it seems," Dr. Kindler said. "It needs not just wishing for them, but countless other factors. A good enough attitude is the worse curse in art.

"Last summer, through the united efforts of all, I materialized the first vision of summer concerts in Washington," he said. "I wanted them this summer greater than before. But to achieve them again we once more needed concerted effort on the part of all."

The National Symphony Orchestra Association abandoned plans for a summer concert series after a long struggle with the local musicians' union over contract terms. Orchestra musicians then formed the Washington Summer Concerts Association, which is now planning summer concerts at the Watergate site.

Dr. Kindler said yesterday he had "hoped until the last" that differences standing in the way of National Symphony concerts this summer might be cleared. He stopped here en route to Cleveland, where on Monday he begins a six-concert engagement as guest conductor of the orchestra playing at the Great Lakes Exposition.

Executive Greeter Begins 36th Year

Second in command of the White House police force, Lieut. Seaman modestly cast aside congratulations with this statement:

"I've only greeted around 100 visitors a day."

But that—if Lieut. Seaman doesn't know it in his modesty—amounts to approximately 1,300,000 people.

Lieut. Seaman formerly was a Washington policeman and was added to the White House force when extra guards were placed on duty following the death of President McKinley.

Interior Building Fall Gravely Injures Mason

Two Boys Injured As Firecrackers Explode in Hands

Two boys were slightly burned yesterday by exploding fireworks.

James T. Williams, jr., 15, of 2236 Decatur place northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for a badly torn finger after a torpedo exploded in his hand while he was playing on the rear porch of his home.

Humphrey D. Howell, 9, of 1107 Maryland avenue northeast, was burned on the right hand when a "sizzler" he had picked up exploded in his hand. He was treated at Casualty Hospital and later released.

Heads of Howard U. Are Sued by Architect

Damages of $250,000 were asked of Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University; T. L. Hungate, Thomas J. Jones and Anson Phelps Stokes, members of the board of trustees of the university, in a suit filed in the United States District Court yesterday by Albert I. Cassell, architect.

Through attorneys Baker & Tepper, Cassell claimed he had lost prestige and money through the action of the University in recently obtaining the services of another architect after the 20-year expansion plan he had drawn for the university had been acclaimed by numerous persons. After the university officers had selected another architect, the suit claimed, Secretary of the Interior Ickes overrode the selection and announced the Government would place building matters in the hands of a Government engineer.

Gain of 7,438 U. S. Clerks Noted in May

Executive Branch Aids Treated in Statistics by Civil Service.

2,132 Increase in D. C. Personnel Reported During Month.

Statistical tables released yesterday by the Civil Service Commission showed 817,856 civilian employes in the executive branch of the Federal Government for the month of May.

This figure represented a net gain of 7,438 employes over April.

The net gain in the District of Columbia over April was 2,132 employes.

Responsible for the increase were the bonus payment, reflected in the figures for the Treasury Department and the Veterans' Administration in Washington, and the regular summer season increase in the Engineer and Quartermaster Corps of the War Department outside the District.

The commission classified employes in three divisions, those of regular agencies, those in new agencies and those in emergency agencies under the works program.

A summary of the three groups showed:

A gain of 8,343 in the regular agencies, making a total of 626,120; a loss of 52 in the new agencies, making the total 49,516, and a loss of 853 in the emergency agencies and agencies under the works program.

D. C. Playgrounds Sent Equipment

Baseballs and bats, basketball, volley balls, quoits, beanbag, checkers and dominoes were included for the older children.

And for the kindergarten class the Department of Playgrounds sent colored folding paper, sewing cards, scissors, paper napkins and paste.

J. E. Meyer, property clerk for the playgrounds, is in charge of supplying the centers with necessary equipment.

Bookings for New Season in Capital Expand

Both Branches of Theater Further Plans for an Imposing 1936-37.

An announcement from Warren Munsell, of the American Theater Society and the New York Theater Guild, communicated to Bess Davis Schreiner, Washington subscription manager for the American Theater Society, gives definite assurance that two of next season's subscription plays in the National Theater will be S. N. Behrman's "End of Summer," starring Ina Claire and featuring Osgood Perkins, and Helen Jerome's dramatization of Charlotte Bronte's "Jane Eyre," starring Katharine Hepburn.

Other reasonably definite possibilities include Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew," costarring Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, and "Prelude to Exile," by William McNally, with Claude Rains as star.

The Washington subscription list for the Guild season now numbers approximately three times as many entries as were on the books last year at this date. The goal for the 1936-37 season is 5,000 regular subscribers and it is rapidly being approached.

So active is the booking of new subscribers' seat locations that Miss Schreiner is keeping the local box-office of the American Theater Society of Washington, in the National Theater, open daily from noon to 5:30 p. m. Information also may be obtained by phone by calling District 2433.

Short Screen Subjects.

The Vitaphone Corporation, short subject unit of Warner Bros.-First National Pictures will produce a total of 140 short subjects during the 1936-37 season, it is further announced. These featurettes will be presented locally at Warner Bros. Earle and Metropolitan theaters, according to John J. Payette, Warners' general zone manager for the Washington territory.

Already an imposing list of stage, screen and radio stars have been signed to appear in various productions on the list. Included in this group are Georgie Price, Bernice Claire, Lou Holtz, Regis Toomey, Hal LeRoy, Georges Metaxa, Donald Novis, Fifi D'Orsay, Irene Delroy, Georgie Tapps, Countess Albani, Loretta Lee, the Radio Ramblers, Jean Sargent, Irene Bordoni, Buster West and Lucille Page, Virginia Verrill, Geraldine and Joe, Nini Olivette and John Forgarty.

Famous Orchestras.

E. M. Newman will inaugurate a new series of 13 travelogues in color in the coming season and other features on the list include 18 Merrie Melodie cartoons in color, 16 Looney Tunes cartoons and 13 "Vitaphone Vaudeville" reels.

Hollywood

The Camera Isn't Looking.

Hollywood, July 2.

These are glimpses of some of your movie favorites when the camera isn't looking; pictures taken while they were waiting to perform for you.

* * * *

GRACE MOORE.

Fred Astaire: He is a quiet fellow on the set and takes his flicker making seriously. Between scenes, when doing a dramatic sequence, he will go to his portable dressing room to relax. But, if filming a dance routine, Astaire keeps going. He talks to the piano player, or to Hermes Pan, his dance director, or he practices the dance steps by himself. He doesn't care to have visitors on the set unless he knows them.

* * * *

Spencer Tracy: walking on the set—if you didn't know him—you'd take him for one of the workmen. He is a natural guy. He doesn't wear much make-up. He seems to have studied his role. Understands it and knows what he is going to do. Tracy doesn't act like an actor on the set—He does his acting in the flicker.

* * * *

Grace Moore: Her dressing room is decorated with autographed photos of practically all the contemporary great musical names. When working, Miss Moore generally has lunch in her room. On the set now, she plays with a new toy—her own motion picture camera. She takes movies of herself making a picture. When she is in scene, she has someone turn her camera for her. Her stand-in is Jane Draper, who has been her friend and companion for years. Jane Draper liked the movies so much that she stayed here and is now playing bits in pictures.

Merle Oberon: She is a friendly person on the set. She makes it a point to be so. She is friendly with her leading man, and always with the director. About four every afternoon, Merle has tea and cookies served for the entire cast. She likes to hear a joke on the set and will tell one. Recently, David Niven has been calling for her on the set. However, if David doesn't put in an appearance you can bet that he is waiting in Merle's dressing room.

* * * *

Fred MacMurray: He is eager to learn, shows it and admits it. He takes direction easily. Therefore a good director gets a fine performance from him. Anxious to please, he poses willingly for all publicity pictures. He goes to the projection room to look at the rushes with the director. A former member of a jazz orchestra, he is amused by the fact that he is a cowboy in the "Texas Rangers." Right now he does anything the studio desires.

* * * *

Alice Faye: If there is a good-looking leading man in the picture, and if he is working the same day, he can generally be found sitting next to Miss Faye. She is not noisy on the set, but she is fun and a good mixer. She pays a lot of attention to her make-up before playing a scene. She generally has to powder the tip of her nose. There was a time when Miss Faye would rush from the set to her dressing room to listen to the Rudy Valle broadcast. She doesn't now.

Mother of German Ace Will Visit Washington

Montreal, July 2 (AP).—The mother of Germany's most famous World War flier, Baron Manfred von Richthofen, came today to the native land of the man who was reported to have killed her son.

Baroness Kunegunde von Richthofen will visit Niagara Falls, Washington and New York.

Baron von Richthofen, after bringing down scores of Allied aviators, was himself killed over the lines during a fight with Canadian Capt. A. R. Brown.

Nelson B. Bell

About the Showshops

DESPITE the fact that that omniscient organ of show business known as Variety expresses the opinion that, brought face to face with the problem during her Los Angeles engagement in George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," Katharine Cornell will succumb to the lure of the cinema, one who has discussed the matter with her feels reasonably safe in adhering to the belief that she will do no such thing.

BELL.

It would be in complete consonance with the prerogatives of her gender, of course, for Miss Cornell to change her mind, but it seems inconceivable that even a "closeup" of Hollywood could shake the grim finality of her statement to this column during her engagement in "Romeo and Juliet," at the National, that the motion pictures were not for her.

This flat declaration was made in no spirit of belittlement or disparagement of the screen. Miss Cornell avowed an intense enthusiasm over the better things of the films and marveled at the perfection with which they were acted and photographed. Her attitude was not one of superiority, but rather of an abject and rather surprising humility insofar as the films were concerned.

"I have no quarrel with motion pictures," she said. "I enjoy them greatly and attend whenever I can find the opportunity, but I feel that they are not my medium. There are a great many actresses in Hollywood who can make pictures more successfully than I possibly could. My proper metier, I feel, is the stage. It is the one to which I have been trained and the one I love. Then there is the thought that at just this period in its history the stage needs all of the support it can get from those who cherish its ideals and its achievements. There are comparatively few actors and actresses today who are bending their efforts toward a survival of the best in the traditional theater; there are a great many who can make worthy and successful pictures. So I feel that my first duty, if you care to put it that way, is to the stage. The cinema does not need me. The stage does. So I shall not go into pictures."

It seems to me not to be in the Katharine Cornell nature to undergo so complete a reversal of viewpoint and purpose as reported in quite so short a time.

* * * *

Her legal name now is Jean Harlow. I mean to say that the platinum-golden-orange blonde—by turns, you understand—has just received court sanction of the adoption of her mother's maiden name as her own lawful handle. Christened Harlean Carpenter, the first name being a combination of her mother's maiden names, the dynamic young actress might, if she chose to use everything that has come to her in the way of nomenclature through three marriages, appropriately sign herself Harlean Carpenter-McGrew-Bern-Rosson. "Jean Harlow," does seem to simplify it, sort of.

* * * *

The Columbia Players, one of Washington's more competent amateur acting groups, has had an election of officers, it seems, although it took a recent column devoted to the amateur situation in the Capital to smoke it out. 'Way back on June 13 it was that the Columbians got themselves together in convention assembled, or something of the sort, and elected Margery Rice, president, and G. DeWitt Miller vice president. Bunnie Skinner was balloted into the secretaryship and Selma Klein into the treasurer's job, sometimes looked upon as the best of the lot. Jane Lasater Rubey, Wade Robinson and Warren Head were named to the board of directors, or governors, or whatever the group calls them.

It is reported that in addition to electing its officers, the organization put its play-reading committee to work under the chairmanship of Eileen Fowler. The bulletin ends with, "we are hard at work to make some real news for your columns of the future."

That makes two of us.

Glen Echo Park announces the completion of plans for the accommodation of Fourth of July holiday crowds up to the limit of the park's capacity on Saturday, with continuous diversion of one sort or another on tap from 9 a. m. to midnight. The Crystal Pool and picnic grounds will be open at 9 a. m., all of the 50-odd general attractions begin operation at 1 p. m., and at 9 p. m. dancing starts in the Spanish Garden Ballroom to music by Dave McWilliams' 12-piece swing band. A very likely place, everything considered, to shoot off your firecracker.

* * * *

The scramble for the Max Schmeling-Joe Louis fight picture goes on apace or two. With the engagement at Mr. Hiser's State Theater in Bethesda, Md., scarcely over, slightly impetuous bulletins are received from both F. C. Ramsdell's Lyric Theater in Gaithersburg, Md., and Sidney Lust's Cameo, in Mount Rainier, that they are tossing the fisticuffers on their screens beginning Sunday and Saturday, respectively. Mr. Ramsdell states that Herr Schmeling's right in action may be viewed in his opera house on Sunday every hour, on the hour, from 5 to 11 p. m., and, Monday through Thursday, from 7 to 11 p. m. Mr. Lust announces a similar schedule, beginning at 2 p. m., and continuing until midnight.

Whatever he did to Mr. Louis, Herr Schmeling certainly slugged a lot of box offices into the important money.

Amicable settlement out of court is reported of Merle Oberon's suit for $125,333.33 against the Selznick Studios. The Tasmanian "English actress" is unofficially reputed to have been paid something in the neighborhood of $90,000. Miss Oberon, whose real name is Queenie Thompson, had charged that she was signed for the stellar role in "The Garden of Allah," which went eventually to Marlene Dietrich.

* * * *

Cash-on-the-Barrelhead Note.

The whole business turned out to be a sort of pictorial "Garden of Allahmoney," as you might say, for Miss Oberon.

Fletcher Secretary Gets Senate Seat

Tallahassee, Fla., July 2 (AP).—Gov. Dave Sholtz today appointed William L. Hill, of Gainesville, temporary successor to the late United States Senator Duncan U. Fletcher.

He will leave for Washington Friday. He was secretary to Senator Fletcher for 19 years.

Hill will serve until a successor to Fletcher is elected in November and qualified next January.

By the Associated Press.

William L. Hill, one of the Capital's oldest and best-known secretaries, will serve as one of Florida's Senators without the formality of being sworn into office by the Senate.

Appointed after the adjournment of Congress, his term will expire as another session opens next January.

He is the fourth man in less than two months to serve his State as Senator. Scott M. Loftin succeeded the late Park Trammell May 26.

Wanderbirds' Picnic Scheduled Tomorrow

The Wanderbirds Hiking Club will hold an all-day picnic tomorrow. There will be swiming and canoeing during the day followed by an evening campfire and fireworks. Members and their friends will meet in front of the National Theater at 9:30 a. m.

On Sunday the hikers will hike from the end of the Cabin John car line to Babcock's cabin. The hike will be eight miles and there will be swiming at the end. Members will meet at Cabin John at 10 a. m.

Turner Battle to Head Ship Labor Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

Turner Battle, executive assistant to Secretary Perkins, was designated yesterday to head a Labor-Commerce Department inquiry into working conditions on ships.

The appointment was made by Miss Perkins and Secretary Roper.

The inquiry, Miss Perkins said, would start at once.

Governor Fears Alaska Will Be Next War Scene

By the Associated Press.

Gov. John W. Troy, on leaving the White House yesterday, said the people of Alaska were afraid that their section would be the theater of the next war.

Troy was accompanied on his White House call by Delegate Anthony J. Dimond and Robert Bender, editor of the Alaska Empire, of Juneau.

Youth Admits Killing 'Harsh' Grandfather

Big Rapids, Mich., July 2 (AP).—George Durling, 21, surrendered today to Sheriff Ceasar Hampel, who quoted him as saying he shot his grandfather, George Stimer, 79, to death because he was "cross to me."

The shooting occurred at Stimer's farm early today. Officers found $6,749 on Stimer's body. Hampel said Durling told him his grandfather has been "browbeating" him, his mother and a brother, and that he had decided to kill him with a shotgun after abandoning a plan to burn Stimer's barn.

Spokane Workers Join Idaho Lumber Strike

Spokane, Wash., July 2 (AP).—Spokane lumber mill workers joined more than 2,000 north central Idaho timber employes on strike today, demanding higher wages and better working conditions.

After a strike vote by carpenters and joiners, nearly 600 men walked out in Spokane. Saws and planers in two large mills were silent.

A scattering of union workers in 14 other plants also went on strike, union leaders said. Company officials refused comment.

Trials at Law Are Not Joyrides

One suspects that all is not well with the case in the courtroom scene from "The Crime of Dr. Forbes," the Twentieth Century-Fox release which occupies the screen at Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning today. The principals in the story are Gloria Stuart, perhaps most vividly memorable as the faithful wife in "The Prisoner of Shark Island," and Robert Kent. They are pictured above, in the customary direction, quite obviously wondering where they go from here. Only the screen at Loew's Fox can answer that one to the reader's satisfaction.

Palestine Peace Is Reported Near

Jerusalem, July 2 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency.)—Although scattered Arab disorders continued, peace appeared to be nearing in Palestine today after almost three months of unprecedented Arab violence that cost the lives of more than 140 Jews, Arabs and Christians.

It was reported a crucial meeting has been scheduled for an early date between some members of the Arab supreme committee, prominent Arab merchants and leading bank directors, including S. Hoofien, of the Anglo-Palestine Bank, important Jewish institution.

The meeting reportedly will consider the question of a moratorium for Arab merchants. Chief points to be discussed, it is understood, will be a method of avoiding bankruptcies and protests of bills by Arab merchants after they have reopened stores which have been closed for 11 weeks in the general strike against Jewish immigration.

Veteran Jewish observers said in their opinion the Arabs have reached the end of their financial rope. Leaders of the strike are believed ready to capitulate.

Miss Mathews Named.

By the Associated Press.

Senator George, of Georgia, said yesterday Miss Annabel Mathews, Gainsville, Ga., would be appointed a member of the reviewing board of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Miss Mathews was not reappointed to the board of tax appeals when her six-year term expired recently.

George said she would accept the new post.

Ship Strike Chief Sues Marine Firm

New York, July 2 (AP).—Joseph Curran, leader of the recent strike of seamen, filed a libel suit for $200,000 damages today against the International Mercantile Marine Co., alleging the firm publicly stated that he was responsible for a "mutiny" on the California, one of its ships.

The suit, Curran said, will help to determine the question whether it was an act of mutiny for seamen to engage in a "sit-down" strike when their ship is in a port.

The action is an outgrowth of an incident last March 2 when 374 members of the California's crew refused to take this ship out of the port at San Pedro, Calif.

Curran claimed the company refused to pay the men off at San Pedro, whereupon the crew remained on board, obeying all orders of the captain except that "they declined to let go the lines."

Purse Theft Reported By Wife of Joe Judge

Her pocketbook containing $65, including two $5 gold pieces and a silver dollar, was stolen from a shelf in a restaurant owned by Mr. and Mrs. Joe Judge, the wife of the former Washington ballplayer, reported to police.

Mrs. Judge said she had placed the purse on a shelf in the lunchroom at 5335 Georgia avenue northwest and that she missed it when she closed the place for the night.

Helen Jacobs Goes to Net Finals

Polish Ace Bows, 6-4, 6-2, Victor to Meet Frau Sperling.

Fred Perry, Von Cramm Play for Men's Title in Singles Today.

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, Eng., July 2.—For the fifth time in her career, Helen Hull Jacobs, of the unyielding spirit, today fought her way to the finals of the all-England tennis championship with a 6—4, 6—2 victory over Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, of Poland.

Saturday Husky Helen will play Frau Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, the German star for the title that escaped her by a single point last year when she muffed the simplest kind of a smash against Mrs. Helen Wills Moody.

Almost without exception, the 14,000 spectators who watched Helen carefully chop her way to a triumph over the plump, pigeon-toed Pole, were hoping she'd at last achieve her ambition, a Wimbledon championship.

At the same time, after marvelling at Frau Sperling's seven-league strides and deadly accuracy in disposing of Mme. Simone Mathieu, of France, 6—3, 6—2, they realized Helen still had a mighty high mountain to cross. She defeated Frau Sperling in the semifinals last year but the German star has been playing great tennis this season.

Meanwhile, Fred Perry, defending champion, and Baron Gottfried von Cramm, who'll meet in the men's final tomorrow, took things easy. Perry's feet, blistered in his match against Don Budge yesterday, were heavily taped.

Miss Jacobs seldom looked better in her life than she did in spiking the heavy artillery of the husky, pile-driving Miss Jedrzejowska. For a while in the first set, when her opponent led, 3—2 and then 4—3, the American's supporters were a bit worried.

Feeds Soft Shots.

Then Helen settled down and fed her rival, who thrives on speed, nothing but soft shots. Before the match ended Jadwiga bore slight resemblance to the girl who blasted Kay Stammers off the court in the quarter-finals.

Miss Jedrzejowska might just as well have left her vaunted forehand in the dressing room for all the chance she had to use it in the closing stages.

Jean Borotra, veteran French star, suffered a torn muscle in his thigh when he fell heavily on the stone flagging at the side of the court in the third set of quarter-finals doubles match with Jacques Brugnon against the American-Japanese team of Merriman Cunninggim and Jiro Itoh. The French won, 6—2, 7—5, 5—7, 6—2, but later scratched from the competition.

Because of the injury it was feared his long and spectacular career was ended.

"I'm afraid I'm through," he said. "But it's about time anyway."

The withdrawal of the Frenchmen sent Charles Hare and Frederick Wilde into the final where they will meet the winner of the match between the Americans, Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, and the British Davis Cuppers, Pat Hughes and Charles Tuckey.

Mike Jacobs, Garden Declare Boxing War

New York, July 2 (U.P.).—Polite negotiations between Madison Square Garden and the Twentieth Century club over a Braddock-Schmeling title bout in September flared into a bitter promotional brawl today as wrathful Mike Jacobs yelled at the Garden, "all right—if you want to fight about this fight—let's go to it."

White with rage, waving clutching hands aloft and stamping up and down like a cat on a hot tin roof, Jacobs declared war. He declared a fight to the finish—"a fight which will prove whether the Twentieth Century or the Garden is running boxing in New York City."

Here is what Jacobs said he would do: I'll arrange to stage the Braddock-Schmeling title fight in September. And I'll have Joe Louis on hand as a substitute for Braddock in case the Garden—by political maneuvering — manages to keep Braddock out of the ring with injunctions or restraining orders. Regardless of who fights, Braddock and Louis will be paid well. And Braddock will not fight for the Garden this year."

It seems that Champion James J. Braddock is under contract with the Garden to make his first title defense for the house that Rickard built—if an acceptable opponent is produced by the Garden before July 29. Unfortunately for the Garden, Max Schmeling, of Germany—conqueror of Joe Louis—has been designated No. 1 challenger by the New York Boxing Comission. Schmeling is the only "acceptable" challenger for Braddock and his manager, Joe Gould. But Schmeling is roped and hogtied by Mike Jacobs.

Mike has offered to sell Schmeling's contract to the Garden for $50,000 and 10 per cent of the net gate, or to buy Braddock's contract for $75,000 and give the Garden 10 per cent of the net gate. But the Garden countered by offering to "join hands" with Jacobs in promoting fights during the next four years. The Garden would provide Braddock, Light-Heavyweight Champion John Henry Lewis and Lightweight Champion Tony Canzoneri and the Long Island bowl and the Garden itself. And Mike would provide Schmeling, Welterweight Champion Barney Ross and the two ball parks, Yankee Stadium and Polo Grounds, and the city's newspaper goodwill. Also the Hippodrome.

This counter offer almost slew Don Michael. "They want to join hands with he," he shouted. "They want to join their hands around my windpipe and strangle me out of the fight game. I've made them my offer and they're trying to do a sideslip and punch me in the belly.

"The Garden fellows think they are big shots—that they have the God-given rights to run boxing in New York—and that I'm just an upstart promoter. Why when I was connected with Tex Rickard and the Garden I taught that outfit most of what it knows about fight promotion. But I didn't teach it half of what I know. We'll see who comes out on top."

Albany Gets Miles On 24-Hour Recall

By a Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, July 2.—The Nats today released Outfielder Dee Miles to Albany of the International League on the 24-hour recall option. Manager Harris was eager to place Miles with a team on which he could play regularly.

Miles parted company with the Nats and joined Albany in Baltimore in time to take his place in the lineup for the game against the Orioles tonight.

Seeking to sweep the four-game series with the Athletics here, Manager Harris will start Pete Appleton on the mound tomorrow. Niketinas, a newly-acquired rookie, is scheduled to pitch for the Mackmen.

Mrs. Robinson Loses.

Philadelphia, July 2 (AP).—Mrs. Stanley R. Robinson, of Washington, was eliminated, 6—0, 6—0, here today in the semifinal round of the women's Middle States lawn tennis championships at the Philadelphia Cricket Club by Helen Pederson, 1934 national girl champion.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 2.—The Yankees' murderers' row coupled a new act with its customary heavy-hitting today, coming from behind with a two-run splurge in the ninth to defeat the Boston Red Sox, 8 to 7, and knock them farther down the American League ladder.

Instead of following their usual procedure of slugging out a big lead in the early innings and then coasting in the Yanks waited until the sixth before firing their big guns at Jack Wilson, the Sox starting pitcher, and Fritz Ostermueller, who wound up the game, to make a clean sweep of the four-game series.

Oarsmen Gather at Philadelphia for Olympic Trials; Dan Barrow Favorite to Win Single Sculls

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 2.—Glistening blades churned the placid Schuylkill today as oarsmen from all parts of the United States worked through their final practice drills for the Olympic rowing finals, other than eight-oar shells, tomorrow and Saturday.

The crews of eight will compete at Princeton Saturday and Sunday. The Schuylkill Olympic tests were combined with the National and People's Day regattas under auspices of the National Association Amateur Oarsmen.

Dotting the 2,000-meter course in Fairmount Park were single and double sculls and four-oared shells both with coxswain and without coxswain.

Earl Baltz, secretary of the N. A. A. O., announced that all 83 entries were on hand with the exception of the Toronto fours. They were expected momentarily.

Interest centered on the heats of the single sculls field, although the finals in the pair-oared shells with coxswain was scheduled for 3 o'clock (E. S. T.).

The single sculls entries included Winthrop Rutherfurd, jr., of Princeton, 1934 champion; Dan Barrow, of Philadelphia; Russell Codman, of Boston; Joe Burk, former University of Pennsylvania sweep oarsman in the Olympic sculling trials; Frank Adams, of Long Beach, Calif.; Erwin Konrad, of Buffalo, and Alred Vogt, of Philadelphia, for one of the finest fields in years.

Grouped in the second heat were Codman, Barrow and Burk.

"I believe the sculler who wins this heat will represent the United States in Germany," said Bill Miller, former national champion, after watching the workouts today.

Griffs Remain in Fight for 2d as Boston Is Dropped to 5th.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Philadelphia, July 2.—The aging, but still willing and talented pitching arm of Earl Whitehill today brushed aside the slightly obstreperous Athletics and ushered the Washington Club into undisputed possession of third place.

Up in the Bronx, the Yankees' fourth straight defeat of the backsliding Boston Red Sox today was a contributing factor in the Nats' advance in the league standings, but Whitehill's pitching against the A's was the mightiest influence.

The venerable southpaw had his troubles, but when he had his troubles he was at his best, turning in a 4-3 victory over the Athletics with an 8-hit performance. Thus the Nats matched strides with the Detroit Tigers, who beat the White Sox and maintained their second-place position only a single percentage point ahead of Washington.

Support Helps Earl.

Whitehill appeared to be swooning rapidly in the late innings when his 4-0 lead began to evaporate. In both the eighth and ninth, the A's had the tying and winning runs on base only to succumb to the rejuvenated Whitehill and some superb defensive play by his supporting cast.

The Nats had gotten in their licks early against Gordon Rhodes, the former Yankee and former Red Sox, who was on the mound for the A's and it was well that they did. Because after taking a 3-0 lead in the second inning, he gave but two hits, one of 'em a badly tainted affair that produced the winning margin. They ended up with eight hits for their day's efforts.

Five blows in that second inning netted the Nats their 3-0 lead. Travis and Bolton singled to cen-

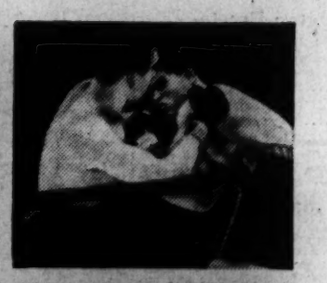
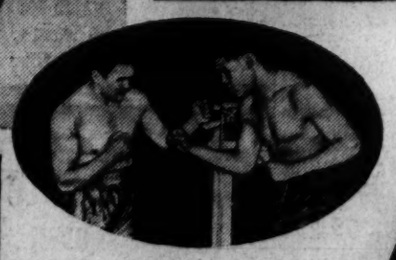
AT LOUIS-SCHMELING FIGHT—

66% VOTE FOR WHITE OWL'S VINTAGE FLAVOR





WHAT A FIGHT! . . . the real heavyweight battle of the century. Action, and roaring crowds. And the outcome surprised the experts. But there was one heavy favorite that came through a winner—Vintage White Owl won the taste test among the spectators, as it has won every other test at the big sports events. Mild, mellow flavor puts it on top every time.

WEIGHING IN AT THE N. Y. HIPPODROME . . . Before the fight the boxers weighed in at the N. Y. Hippodrome. It was a stirring scene, packed with people. Here again the tastes of most men preferred White Owl's flavor. And every White Owl you buy will taste just as good as the cigars that won this test.

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 19—The rich, mellow flavor of Vintage tobacco has scored again. If it happened just once, it might be luck—but when hundreds of men choose a Vintage White Owl as the best tasting cigar in test after test, it must taste better.

In White Owl's twelfth straight victory—at the Louis-Schmeling Fight—289 smokers were picked at random from the crowd . . . given two unidentified cigars—a Vintage White Owl and another, representing the leading nationally advertised brands.

The cigars bore no names or familiar bands to prejudice them. Each man smoked both, then indicated the one he liked best—by taste alone. For taste is the only thing that really makes for smoking pleasure. 66% preferred Vintage White Owl's mildness.

MORE SMOKING PLEASURE . . . Today's White Owl is a double "best buy." It's a Vintage cigar—and it's larger, too. Look at this actual-size picture. White Owl averages a 10% longer smoke than other widely advertised 5¢ cigars.

Compare White Owl with your present brand. Taste the Vintage tobacco—see the extra size. Wherever you are, you can get the same mild, uniform Vintage cigar that won these taste tests. It costs but 5¢ at your nearest cigar store.

Lady Kiluna Wins Charles Town Purse; 2 Horses Take a Spill

Two Jockeys Uninjured In Tangle

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 2.—Eddie Smith, Washington jockey, rode Lady Kiluna to victory in the Frank Cronan Purse, named for his friend, here this afternoon. Making his move on the outside of the track and escaping a jam which saw horses and riders go rolling along the track. Smith applied the whip to the mare with a vengeance that sent him on to win by two lengths from Miss Symphony. A head away came Visa to take third money.

Jockeys R. Root and J. Leonard as well as the horses Miss Fern and Amasin had a narrow escape from serious injury at the far turn. Miss Fern, with Root up, ran up on the heels of Miss Symphony and tripped and fell. Amasin, close behind the falling horse, tumbled over her. Parade On, with O. Hernandez up, swung out of the way, but Sammy Palumbo, with Blonde Baggage, jumped over the rolling boys and horses.

The jockeys rode back to the paddock in the track ambulance and surprised everyone by quietly inquiring as to which horse won the race. Miss Fern jumped the fence and went back to the stable while Parade On pulled himself up and trotted back to his handlers.

The daily double provided a pay off of $68.20. The winning combination was that of Valeen and Castle Cliff.

Gaylass came from far back in a field of eight to win the Walter Haight Purse. Ridden by J. Hernandez, the daughter of Brown Bud developed a stretch momentum that Channing could not resist. The fastest closing horse in the field was Black Sweep which overcame a slow start to be third.

To prove that he was not injured and to collect the $20 fee that goes with riding a winner, Jockey Root came back to ride Miss Catalan to an eight-length victory in the seventh race. The winner, chased by Bay Wrack and George Jessell, tied the track record held by Royal Lassie. The time was 2:08. Miss Catalan paid a $5.80 mutuel. Sammy Palumbo and Lou Pikor each rode two winners for the day and they are deadlocked at 40-all in the race for the riding championship at the meeting.

Chart of Charles Town Races

THURSDAY, JULY 2, 1936.

WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, SLOW.

FIRST RACE—About four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:35. Off at 2:38. Winner, Mrs. G. Hutchins' b. f. (2), by Wrack—Marshmallow. Trained by E. Brining. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:52 3-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	Start	¼	Stretch	Finish	Straight
WHITE SWEETS	(Pikor)	113	5	2	2h	2h	1h	$1.80

JUSTA TOWN	(Smith)	110	2	3	4½	3½	4'	3.60
ROYAL BROOM	(Garrett)	103	1	5	3h	4'	5h	19.00
LADY PENNY	(Palumbo)	113	4	6	6'	6'	6h	2.60

†Mrs. M. R. Waugh's entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHITE SWEETS, $5.00, $4.20, $3.00; JUSTA GAL (entry), $3.40, $2.40; LEW DUNLIN, $3.60.

WHITE SWEETS, outrun by JUSTA GAL to the stretch, swung out to the better going and wore down pacemaker in the final stages. JUSTA GAL, first away, was hustled along in front, but stayed on the rail and could not resist the winner. LEW DUNLIN closed courageously to catch JUSTA TOWN for the show. ROYAL BROOM showed a good effort and was pinched back entering the stretch. LADY PENNY showed a dull effort in behind horses.

SECOND RACE—About four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:10. Off at 3:12. Winner, M. J. Daly's ch. g. (4), by Jean Valjean—Sweet. Trained by M. J. Daly. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:52 3-5.

VALEEN	(Palumbo)	111	7	1	1'	1'	1½	$10.10
GEE SHARP	(Smith)	110	1	2	2'	2½	2½	2.80
MARY WALES	(J. Hernandez)	107	4	4	4'	4'	3½	3.60
MISS NOBBY	(Feltner)	112½	5	3	3h	3½	4h	8.10
LADY CIREK	(Garrett)	101	2	5	5½	5h	5h	6.60
MR. MELVIN	(Berg)	111	3	7	6h	8'	8h	19.60
TODY CON	(Pikor)	111	6	6	7	7	7	2.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VALEEN, $22.20, $6.60, $8.20; GEE SHARP, $4.60, $3.20; MARY WALES, $4.40.

VALEEN took command at once, was hustled along without a breathing spell and held GEE SHARP safe in the final drive. The latter, running on the rail and in closest pursuit of the pacemaker, dropped back and came to the outside and was wearing down the winner at the end. MARY WALES, off in a tangle, came to the outside entering the stretch and closed willingly. MISS NOBBY raced wide most of the way and faltered suddenly. The others were outrun.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but Transtine from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:39. Off at 3:41½. Winner, C. A. Worline's ch. g. (7), by Polymelian—Chiffon. Trained by E. J. Wood. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:39 3-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
CASTLE CLIFF	(Pikor)	113	4	6	6h	4½	1'	1½	$2.30
TWENTY THREE	(Feltner)	108	8	5	1½	1½	1½	2h	13.00
THE BARD	(Palumbo)	113	2	2	5h	6½	3½	3'	6.50
DORAMELIA	(O. Hernandez)	109	1	3	4'	3½	4h	4h	3.60
MABEL BEYOND	(Terhune)	108	7	1	3'	2'	2'	5h	33.50
McDONALD H.	(Shanks)	113	5	7	7½	7h	7½	6h	14.50
MAINS WANDER	(Steinmeier)	111½	6	4	2½	5'	6'	7½	12.20
TRANSTINE	(Root)	103	7	8	8	8	8	8	9.20

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CASTLE CLIFF, $4.60, $3.20, $2.60; TWENTY THREE, $8.00, $4.20; THE BARD, $3.40.

CASTLE CLIFF, much the best, was knocked about at the first turn, came to the outside to rest comfortably entering the stretch and easily disposed of TWENTY THREE. The latter went up on the outside to take command going into the first turn, was raced along in front to the stretch, but failed to stay under vigorous handling. THE BARD, outrun for three furlongs, saved ground entering the stretch, but tired. DORAMELIA went evenly and had no excuses. MABEL BEYOND had speed to force the pace along the backstretch, but tired. TRANSTINE went into the air at the break and was virtually left.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $68.20.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. The Walter Haight. For 3-year-old maidens. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:11. Off at 4:16½. Winner, Mrs. I. K. Mourar's br. f. (3), by Brown Bud—Swizzle Stick. Trained by I. K. Murar. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:24.

TEXTON	(Terhune)	110	8	8	8	8	8	8	92.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GAY LASS, $13.60, $5.00, $3.80; CHANNING, $3.80, $3.20; BLACK SWEEP, $8.40.

GAY LASS, away slowly, was allowed to settle into stride, worked her way up on the outside swinging for the stretch and caught CHANNING to win going away. CHANNING was hustled along with LAURA V. disposed of her midway to the backstretch and continued willingly, but was unable to resist the winner. BLACK SWEEP, outrun for a half, came through on the rail at the final bend and was going fastest at the end. ALL SORTS improved position in the last three furlongs. DARLING PAT was pinched back going into the backstretch, came again and tired suddenly. LAURA V. quit after pressing the pace. LOOK FORWARD went forwardly for a half.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. The Hamilton Purse. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:42½. Off at 4:44. Winner, Mrs. M. N. Bond's ch. f. (4), by Tail Timber—Black Panther. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:22 3-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
TIMBER PHANTOM	(Palumbo)	112	7	7	5h	5'	1½	1½	$4.40
MONT DAISY	(Root)	104	3	2	2h	2'	2h	2h	8.60
SEA SAGA	(Smith)	110	2	1	1h	1'	1½	3'	10.00
FAMOUS CLAYTON	(Cushman)	109	1	4	4½	3½	3h	4h	4.00
JIMMY D	(J. Hernandez)	114	4	3	3h	4½	5'	5½	5.30
RIVER QUEEN	(Terhune)	107	6	5	6h	7	6½	6h	55.80
POLITEN	(Feltner)	112½	5	6	7	6h	7	7	1.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIMBER PHANTOM, $10.80, $4.60, $3.20; MONT DAISY, $9.00, $4.80; SEA SAGA, $5.00.

TIMBER PHANTOM broke sideways, was rushed into contention, gained steadily along the backstretch, hugged the rail entering the stretch and was up in the concluding strides. MONT DAISY pressed the pace of SEA SAGA and fought it out willingly. SEA SAGA sent to the front at once, was rated along, closed gamely, but had to be pulled up when crowded between horses in the last 20 yards. FAMOUS CLAYTON was poorly ridden and can do better. JIMMY D. was through early. POLITEN showed nothing and had no excuses.

SIXTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. The Frank Cronan. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:13. Winner, E. Sanchez's b. m. (5), by Tournament II—Heskiluna. Trained by P. Castro. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:22.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
LADY KILUNA	(Smith)	110	2	8	8	5½	1h	1h	$3.60
MISS SYMPHONY	(Garrett)	104	1	2	1½	2'	4'	2h	17.80

MISS FERN	(Root)	102	3	1	3½	3½	3½	Fell	7.50
AMASIN	(Leonard)	106	5	7	6h	8	Fell	Fell	10.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY KILUNA, $8.00, $5.40, $4.00; MISS SYMPHONY, $16.80, $7.60; VISA, $11.60.

LADY KILUNA, allowed to settle into stride, went wide for racing room, escaped interference and won going away under energetic handling. MISS SYMPHONY, away fast, came again after dropping back awhinsing for the stretch. DR. JILLSON tired from rushing tactics. PARADE ON was forced to pull up when horses fell. BLONDE BAGGAGE was making move when Palumbo pulled up. MISS FERN ran up on MISS SYMPHONY, fell and AMASIN fell over her at the far turn.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-fourth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:46. Off at 5:51. Winner, Leith Brothers b. m. (8), by Catalan—Medlor. Trained by A. L. Leith. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 2:08 (equals track record).

GEORGE JESSEL	(Feltner)	118	1	6	4h	4h	4h	3h	3h	10.00
KESWICK	(Garrett)	113	3	3	2h	2h	2½	3h	4½	2.60
BRAD	(Pikor)	118	6	1	6	5h	5h	5h	5½	10.50
CHATEAU ROOK	(Cusimano)	105	5	5	5½	6	6	6	6	47.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS CATALAN, $5.80, $3.20, $2.60; BAY WRACK, $3.80, $2.80; GEORGE JESSEL, $4.00.

MISS CATALAN assumed command at once, was rated along just out of reach of rivals, responded gamely to urging when entering the stretch and easily drew away. BAY WRACK saved ground all the way and rallied only when put to drive. GEORGE JESSEL came with good courage at the end. KESWICK quit after chasing the pacemaker. BRAD and CHATEAU ROOK could not threaten.

Rippy's Record Total of 274 Retains D. C. Municipal Golf Title

Burrows 2d, 8 Strokes Back; Score Betters His Own Mark.

Two dream rounds, one a 66, the other a 67, enabled Claude Rippy, 23-year-old clerk, to retain his District Municipal golf crown, and win the captaincy of the Harding Cup team in a walk yesterday at East Potomac's course in the National Public Links qualifying trials.

Shelling par with a running fire of pars, birdies and eagles, Rippy finished the 72-hole championship with a total of 274—believed to be the greatest score ever made by an amateur in an important tournament in the Middle Atlantic section.

Rippy did three things with his ten-under-par performance:

1. He cracked his own all-time competitive District record set last year in the same championship by eight strokes.

2. His 66 was the lowest 18-hole score ever registered in a tournament at the flat East Potomac layout.

3. He became one of a few champions to repeat.

Pacesetter at the half-way mark with 72—69—141, Rippy took a commanding lead at the end of 54 holes, thanks to a steaming 66. His closest pursuer, Bradley (Ted) Burrows, was eight shots from him.

With the championship in the bag, Rippy coasted along beautifully, winding up with an eagle deuce on the last hole, after rolling in a 20-footer.

The other three qualifiers who will make the trip to Farmingdale, L. I., for the National championship July 20-25 and their scores follow:

Ted Burrows .... 72-71-72-70—285
Pat Axtell ..... 73-71-73-74—291
Bobby Burton .... 78-71-70-73—292

Rippy, Burrows and Burton were members of the 1935 team which played in the National championship at Indianapolis.

Burton, bespectacled 27-year-old Navy Yard machinist, wasn't so sure of his place. Late in the afternoon he had to travel two extra holes before winning in a playoff from Barney Welch. A birdie four turned the trick for Burton.

Welch, who was forced into a tie at 292, failed to clinch a place by taking a four on the seventy-first hole, finishing with a 75. He will be the alternate on the team.

During the last 36 holes Rippy collected ten birdies and two eagles. His two eagles came on the last 18 which he covered in 33 and 34. In the morning he had a chance to score a 62, but he was quite satisfied with his 34-32, 5 under par.

Dizzy Dean Wins 14th; Bucs Bow, 4-2

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 2.—Jerome (Dizzy) Dean, and the gas house gang from St. Louis, defeated the third-place Pittsburgh Pirates today, 4-2. Dizzy held the Bucs to seven hits in winning his fourteenth victory of the season.

The victory gave the Cardinals three out of four in the series.

Big Jim Weaver, Pirate hurler, worked eight innings against the Cards and was charged with the loss of the game.

TIME OUT!

By Chet Smith

"Pardon my interruption, but I'd suggest you keep your left high and sock the big lug with a right to the jaw!"

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

(Editor's note—Our Mr. Povich, apparently delirious from listening to convention speeches, suffered a complete breakdown when he arrived at the scene of the recent Democratic conclav. Povich imagines he is seconding the nomination of Arch McDonald, Washington radio sports commentator, named by the Columbia Broadcasting System as its announcer at the All-Star game in Boston, July 7.)

Philadelphia, July 2.

Mr. Chairman, Delegates and Friends: It is my very great privilege to indorse as the peepul's radio representative at this ga-r-r-reat spectacle in Boston the man who has been placed in nomination here by our party in solemn assembly.

Opposed to all the forces of private greed, public plundering and economic royalty, and an avowed disciple of the ga-r-r-reat tenets of faith, hope and charity, I give you a man who:

POVICH.

Was born (applause) at Hot Springs, Ark., in 1901. Moved with his parents in early childhood to Chattanooga, Tenn. Quit high school in his sophomore year and unsuccessfully perjured his age in an attempt to enlist in the Army during the war. Failing in that, went to work at Muscle Shoals on the Government nitrate plant project as a steel rigger's helper, timekeeper, truck driver and in other such noble callings. A man of the people.

Felt the call of the oil fields at Wichita Falls and Ranger, Tex., tired of the call of the oil fieds and moved to the boom camp at Fresno, Calf. Helped to build the big acqueduct there and was surfeited with building acqueducts. Satisfied with a job well done.

Wandered into Jack Dempsey's camp at Toledo before the Willard fight in 1919, found a job in the kitchen, and saw the fight. A man always on the winning side.

Went back to Chattanooga to work for a patent medicine concern with the title of advertising manager that entitled him to tack up signs on country stores and fences at a salary of $22.50 per week, and all he could knock down on his expense account. A man for whom no job was too humble.

Feet itched for the open road again and struck it out for the Texas Panhandle and work in the harvest fields. Wended his way up North with the crops, ending up in South Dakota. No swivel chair agriculturist (applause).

Drifted back to Chattanooga and played football for two seasons on McCallie Prep School team that won Southern championship in 1921. Laborer-farmer-athlete, har-rrumph.

From '22 to '30 escaped starvation (applause) in variety of enterprises—wholesale grocery salesman (when he married the boss's daughter), Bradstreet reporter, electric frigidaire salesman, and ham actor in the Smith Roberson Dramatic Stock Company, succumbing to the wiles of Tondeleyo seven nights a week in "White Cargo." A man who knows your problems.

Fell in with Joe Engel at the Chattanooga Ball Park on the day they installed a new public address system and stooged in the absence of the announcer during the first test. The announcer never got his job back.

Made a hit with the boss of the local radio station by his ballpark announcing and was offered a job on the air. Sold advertising, wrote continuity, conducted a 15-minute sports program nightly and generally grated on the ears of the listening public. A man gifted with a charmed life.

Won a nation-wide baseball broadcasters popularity contest in 1932 by 6,000 votes and still holds the cup symbolic of his triumph. Contest was discontinued after that year. A man who discourages competition.

Came to Washington in March, 1934, under contract to the Peoples Drug Store and the Columbia Broadcasting System. Largest commercial radio contract ever signed in Washington. Now known as the baseball radio voice of The Washington Post.

It is my very ga-r-r-reat pleasure and very ga-r-r-reat privilege to give you Arch McDonald, than whom, har-rrumph, a man who can be shushed with a flick of the dial (applause).

Detroit Wins Over White Sox by 7 to 1

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 2. — The Detroit Tigers, behind the seven-hit pitching of Schoolboy Rowe, beat the faltering Chicago White Sox, 7 to 1, today to sweep the abbreviated two-game series. It was Rowe's seventh victory of the season.

The Bengals, in winning their sixth straight tilt and their ninth in ten starts, collected ten hits off Johnny Whitehead and Clint Brown, mixing them with two Sox errors and Whitehead's wildness.

Indians Down Browns Twice, 14-6, 4-2

Campbell Gets 7 Straight Hits to Lead Attack for Cleveland.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 2.—Temperamental Johnny Allen held the St. Louis Browns to five hits and Hal Trosky clouted his twentieth home run of the season with one on as Cleveland won the second game of a double-header from the St. Louis Browns today, 4 to 2. Cleveland took the first with ease, 14 to 6.

Ivy Paul Andrews, for the tail-end Browns, gave up only seven safeties and walked only two, compared to Allen's nine passes, but his mates could not get hits when needed or capitalize on Allen's generosity.

Bruce Campbell, Indian outfielder, made seven consecutive hits.

Nats Beat A's 4 to 3, to Take 3d Place

Earl Whitehill Gives Up 8 Hits as Griffs Stay Point From 2d.

A's Rally in Sixth.

Rhodes didn't allow another hit until the sixth but that one produced the Nats' fourth and last run of the game. It followed a base on balls and the run scored from first when Bolton's pop fly to short right center dropped safely at the feet of Rightfielder Pucinelli. Centerfielder Moses, and Secondbaseman Niemic who were converging on the ball.

The A's, about to absorb their eighth straight licking, and their tenth defeat in 11 games with Washington this season, began to cut up in the sixth. Whitehill walked Puccinelli, Higgins singled to left and a run scored on Johnson's infield out. Niemic delivered a single to left that scored Higgins.

Still battling to protect his slender lead, Whitehill saw it reduced to 1 run in the eighth when he fell a victim to some sandlot play by Catcher Cliff Bolton on the heels of a great effort by Third Baseman Buddy Lewis.

Puccinelli led off the eighth with a single to left and Higgins pushed him to second with another single. When Whitehill walked Johnson the bases were full with one out. At this point Lewis grabbed Niemic's hot grounder, stepped on third forcing Higgins, and then threw to Bolton at the plate. Bolton, with plenty of time to retire Puccinelli, merely stepped on the plate, forgetting that he had to tag the runner, and Puccinelli scored with the run that made it 4 to 3.

But Johnny Stone and Ossie Bluege came to Whitehill's rescue at this point with a rare double play. Hayes flied to Stone, whose throw to Bluege at second caught Johnson, who had overslid the bag in his haste to get back to the base. Bluege tagged him out 3 feet beyond the base.

But Whitehill's support in the field was alternately good and bad. Getting a break in the ninth when Pinch Hitter Dean grounded out attempting to duck a pitch, Whitehill found himself in trouble when Kress' low throw put Finney on first with the tying run. Finney moved to second when Newsome drew a walk. But Whitehill disposed of the dangerous Moses on a pop fly to Bolton and Manager Harris walked to the mound to ask Whitehill if he felt equal to pitching to the right-handed Puccinelli, the A's clean-up hitter.

Whitehill snorted that he would take his chances with Puccinelli, cast a disdainful look at Weaver and Cohen warming up in the bull pen, and won his game by retiring the A's slugger on a weak fly to Stone.

Cubs Defeat Reds, 8 to 6; End Streak

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, July 2.—Stanley Hack's single, Augie Galan's double and Gabby Hartnett's outfield fly scored two runs for the Chicago Cubs in the thirteenth inning today to give them an 8-to-6 victory that broke at seven straight a Cincinnati winning streak. The defeat dropped the Reds to fifth place.

Lynch, Mitchell Win In District Net Play

By John R. Vosburgh.

Hard-swinging Hugh Lynch, the former Princeton tennis captain, stole a march on the field in the men's District tennis championships yesterday, routing Frank Shore, of the University of North Carolina, 6—1, 6—0 to move into the semi-final round at the Columbia Country Club.

Lynch had been favored to win, but Shore, seeded No. 8 in the locals, had been considered a tough enough foe to take him to at least a deuce set. Displaying the same terrific twist on his service and steady ground game which characterized his defeats of Commander H. C. Redgrave, Strand Johnsen and Jimmy Garnett, Lynch gained the round of four with one of the most impressive performances of the tourney. He was seeded No. 4.

At the same time, Dooley Mitchell, former champion, was experiencing difficulty in getting past Dean Judd, one of Washington's outstanding characters of the court, in fact more outstanding than formidable. Using his old steel racket and garbed in an old brown jacket, Judd forced Mitchell to scores of 6—2, 5—7, 6—2 before getting to the quarter-finals.

In the last fourth-round match on the program, Ralph McElvenny scored an upset by defeating Frank Goeltz, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., 1—6, 6—4, 6—4. Goeltz was seeded No. 3 in the out-of-town list and McElvenny No. 6 in the domestic rankings.

Of the three matches, that between Latona and Colvin, is likely to furnish the most fireworks. Colvin, seeded higher, is the logical favorite, but on the face of his showing in the tournament to date, this innocent bystander is selecting Latona.

Opponent Wilts.

The quarter-final match between Champion Barney Welsh and Lieut. James R. McCue will be played this afternoon, as well that between Tony Latona and Price Colvin, No. 2 seeded man from Baltimore in the visiting list.

Colvin gained the quarter-finals by winning two matches yetserday. He swept aside Hy Ritzenberg, 6—2, 6—0, in the first and then defetaed Freddie West, of Lynchburg, Va., 6—3, 6—3, in a fourth-round encounter.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.
Singles.

Third round—Price Colvin (Baltimore) defeated Hy Ritzenberg, 6—2, 6—0.

Fourth round—Price Colvin (Baltimore) defeated Freddie West (Lynchburg, Va.), 6—3, 6—3; Ralph McElvenny defeated Frank Goeltz (Wilkesbarre, Pa.), 1—6, 6—4, 6—4.

Doubles.

First round—Hathaway and A. O. White defeated Robbins and McDuffie by default.

Second round—Barney Welsh and McElvenny won by default from Hy Ritzenberg and Murray Gould; Kay and Hugh Trigg defeated Decker and Becker, 6—3, 6—2; Dooley Mitchell and Tom Markey defeated Hathaway and White, 6—2, 6—2; Hugh Lynch and Tony Latona defeated Stan McCaskey and Bill Buchanan, 6—2, 6—2.

Third round—Price Colvin and Alex Keiles (Baltimore) defeated Frank Goeltz Wilkesbarre, Pa.) and Ralph Adair, 6—4, 6—3.

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

Deputy commanders in the Maryland State conservation Chesapeake Bay patrol fleet have received orders to halt use of circular gill nets by commercial fishermen. The nets are from 1,000 to 2,000 yards wide and 20 feet deep. Fishermen can surround an entire school with one of them and very few of the fish escape.

Conservation officials said the campaign was not ordered because of any "grievance" against commercial fishermen. It was brought to their attention by this column.

"We want them to catch all the fish they can legally," they explained. "This particular method of encircling fish, however, is definitely out of the picture. It will greatly reduce the supply and such large catches will glut the market and force the price down."

Stations on the Bay.

Deputy commanders and their stations on the bay are as follows: Capt. John Smith, at large; Capt. Frank Akers, Sandy Point to head of bay; Capt. George A. Haddoway, Bloody Point to Sharps Island; Capt. Charles A. Bromwell, Sharps Island to Cove Point; Capt. Lannie Ruark, Hoopers Island Light to N. W. Middles; Capt. Thomas Wroten, Cedar Point to Cove Point; Capt. Dan Sanders, Sandy Point to Thomas Point; Capt. J. O. Rogers, Holland Light (Point) to Sisters Ground.

The circular nets are not specifically prohibited by State law. Circuit Judge Linwood L. Clarke, of Anne Arundel County, last summer ruled, however, that the type was included in the general statute prohibiting use of destructive apparatus.

Bluefish Plentiful.

Let's take a look at the anglers' side of bluefishing and boat captains' inefficient preparedness; no bait (alewives) at the wharf for the many sport fishermen who spend ten or more dollars a day to land one or more blues. The writer is confining these remarks to Point Lookout and St. Jerome's Creek (Ridge), Md.

Alewives cannot be purchased in that vicinity. A modern ice-making plant has all the facilities for caring for fresh chum, and is only two miles from the dock. June 20 we interviewed the owner of this most modern plant and asked him to get busy and provide the anglers with fresh bait, because it is not convenient to haul it in one's car without complete spoilage. He agreed to try to secure chum from the commercial netters in the bay and have it on hand daily.

Last night there wasn't an ounce in the eight miles that separates Point Lookout from the ice plant. Without question the boatmen wish to hold the anglers' trade in this area, but they are gradually watching it slip away to Reedville, Va., where as in other places fresh chum and bait are always on hand and aboard boat upon the anglers' arrival and at no additional cost.

Used Iced Can.

An ample supply of large alewives is now available at the Municipal Fish Markets, Water street southwest. Don't attempt to transport it unless you place it in a covered, large size ash can, well iced. It is the only safe method we can recommend. You can't fool a blue fish by attempting to feed him other than strictly fresh alewives, or fast-moving, attractive lures.

Bluefishing has increased since the writer's catch last Sunday: W. D. Tschiffely, 3028 Cambridge place northwest, yesterday tried our boatman, Capt. Taft Tippett, Ridge, Md. (phone Great Mills 16 F 12), and landed nine of the largest bluefish caught this season—the average was 9 pounds, which seems most incredible (they lost over 25 according to the boatman's telephone report).

This writer earlier in the season predicted that the blues would be more plentiful and larger this season than last because of the unusual conditions existing this season. Many anglers gave us the well known razz. The proof cannot be denied in the above picture. Try them and be convinced, but take along some liniment for sore muscles—you're going to need it before you call it a day.

If you are not a light tackle (fly or exceptionally light bass rod) fisherman, stay away from the current reports of huge catches of rock fish at Solomons Island (Cedar Point), Md. You won't enjoy the sport because the fish are very small—½ to 1½ pounds. Use a short wire leader of about two feet, with one swivel at top of leader and a small hook with spinner above, bait hook with blood worm and troll slowly. The rock fish are showing themselves by the thousands and can be caught with ease if light tackle is used. Forget the use of heavy salt water rods and its accessories.

Solomons Island at this season does produce exceptionally good trout and crocker fishing, the former small, the latter large when fished for on the edge of deep water Croakers are abundant everywhere; there is no choice as to grounds. From the mouth of the York River north to Galesville they are biting in profusion.

A Record Haul of Bluefish Hung on the Line

This catch, 14 Blues averaging 6 pounds 7 ounces each, was made by Jack Hawley, conductor of The Post's fishing column, on the Southwest Middles. The largest tipped the Fairbanks at 9 pounds 2 ounces. All were caught trolling with June bug spinner (double) and white Japanese feather (jig).

Leroy Haynes Gets Technical Knockout Over Tom Williams

Before the largest crowd that has witnessed a colored card here since the Kid Chocolate-Sarilla setto, Leroy Haynes, of Philadelphia, 198, one of five leading contenders for the world heavyweight title, defeated Tom Williams, of New York, 199, by a technical knockout at the end of the fourth round last night at Griffith Stadium.

Williams led off like a house afire in the first and landed freely, gaining courage as he went, until Haynes called him to come in and take it. His response was met by a powerhouse right to the jaw which rocked him till he shuddered, and, as far as he was concerned, ended the fight after the first two minutes.

To end the boos of the crowd, which called for action and a knockout, Haynes stepped into the fourth with determination in his eye. He sent a left and right to the jaw and Williams clung to the ropes. Another left to the jaw snapped Williams' head back. A right and left to his midsection brought his guard down, and another right to the jaw, that traveled a scant cubit, put Williams out on his feet, with the claret streaming from nose and lips.

With fear in his eye, and defeat in his heart, Williams absorbed a galaxy of lefts and rights, and rights and lefts from Haynes that cut him to ribbons. Williams clinched and held on with neither gameness nor courage, and all but fell in his corner as the bell rang. Referee Tom Sawyer stopped the bout, giving Haynes the technical knockout.

Cyclone Sammy Williams, 157, of Washington, won an unanimous decision over Roosevelt Rowe, 150, of Philadelphia, after six rounds of rather even fighting. In the first bout, Kid Howie, of Washington, 136, received an unanimous four-round decision over Young Harry Wills, of Baltimore. Among the officials introduced were the colored Democratic leaders, Judge Armond W. Scott, of the Municipal Court, and Joe Rainey, boxing commissioner of the Philadelphia district.

Out of a crowd that looked like 2,500, there were 1,877 paid admissions for a gross of $2,256. The bouts were staged by the Allied Democratic Clubs of the District.

Field Awaiting Takoma Run Tomorrow

Agee to Defend Laurels; Porter and Former 10-Mile Champion.

Bill Agee's decision to defend his 10-mile championship in the run sponsored by the Takoma Park Citizens and District Playground Department, to be held tomorrow has resulted in a noticeable decline of entries from Baltimore, his home town, it was disclosed yesterday. But the reason is quite simple.

Baltimore is staging a 6-mile handicap run the same day, and in the past Agee usually has won this event with ease. Thus, news that he would not compete this year caused a majority of Baltimore pavement pounders to remain at home where they have better chances of winning.

Agee also has announced that he will attempt to shatter the course record he established in 1932, when he covered the stretch in 55 minutes 21 2-5 seconds. He probably will have better the mark if he expects to win, for Mel Porter, in better form than before, and Paul Munday, former national 10-mile champion from Philadelphia, will be pressing him every inch of the way.

A record entry for a single local club was reported yesterday when officials received nine entries from the Southeast Business Men's Association. The squad is coached by Louis Mitchell.

Louis on Radio.

Joe Louis will make his first radio appearance since he was knocked out by Max Schmeling tonight over the National Broadcasting Co.'s blue network. As guest star of Frank Fay's weekly broadcast, the Brown Bomber will be heard over Station WMAL at 7:30 p. m.

Maximum Rise Abruptly Halts Wheat Trading

Advance Carries Prices Over $1; Corn Jumps 4 Cents.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 2.—Wheat trading halted suddenly late today in every North American grain exchange, prices having skyrocketed 5 cents overnight. Exchange rules prohibited additional rises for the day.

Simultaneous with suspension of business in wheat, corn values also soared to the allowable limit, 4 cents a bushel. Alarming extension of drought from the United States spring wheat belt into Canada and likewise menacing this company's corn crop led to the unusual rise of prices.

Wheat closed strong, 5@5⅛ above yesterday's finish; July, 1.00@1.00⅝; September, 1.02; corn, 3⅛@4⅛ up; September, 71½@71¾; December, 67¼@67⅛; oats, 2⅜@2⅞ advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12 cents.

Steel Shares Recover in More Active Trading; Wheat Jumps 5-Cent Limit.

New York, July 2.—On a turnover of over a million shares stocks were unsettled. Encouragement was given by a rally in the steel section, but a few other groups were weak. On the whole the tone was firmer and advances were more numerous, but selling was resumed toward the close, to lower prices. Treasury bonds stiffened a little. Grains rose the permissible limit for a day's trading. September wheat at Chicago closed 5 cents higher at 102 cents a bushel. Cotton was firm.

More excitement took place in the grain markets than was to be found among securities. Further alarmist reports on the drought in the Western States brought another speculative rush in wheat. Futures in Chicago were shoved up four cents a bushel at the start, and other grains were strong. That movement failed to excite other markets, recognized as it was as merely a speculative play.

If it turns out that the Western country's chief cash crop, wheat, is under the low total of the past two years, no matter how high the price might go, the general effect would be bad for business. Not only would the smaller movement of the grain be felt, but a decline in purchasing power would tend to reduce business of all kinds.

"We Planned It That Way."

Government in the last few years has not tried to get at the roots of the farm difficulties, but has hoped to carry the farmers along with doles and temporary reduction in output sufficient to wear off the surplus grain and cotton of a few years ago and lift the price. Actually the crop reduction program has wiped out the necessary surplus of grain that the country should have. The result has been greatly increased importation of foreign foodstuffs and higher prices paid by all consumers.

With the election coming on, the New Dealers are at long last beginning to get the wind up. They doubtless hope that no sudden and sharp rise in bread will take place, and they are attempting to pour taxpayers' money out of both vents by promising farmers that the dole will be paid even if acreage is increased. In other words, against the recent policy of paying farmers to fail to plant, to breed and to plow under, the bonus will now be paid to stimulate activity on the farms.

It has been suspected that a good deal of the bonus has been paid without adequate inspection of whether the farmer reduced his acreage or not; but the days of scarcity economy are drawing to a close. With the dole given for larger planting, the farmer will be kept on the right side of the polls this autumn and, so it is hoped, the food shortage next year may not become too noticeable to the city folks.

This is getting to be a funny country. If a bonus were paid for crop reduction, as has been done, with all the unfairness of the scheme from a taxpayers' point of view and its unsoundness economically, at least it had some logic in it. Likewise the promise of a bonus to farmers for extra efforts, for the planting of more than the normal number of acres, would "track" as they use to say in rural regions. But a bonus for merely returning to normal activity only serves to show how firmly the narcotic habit of taking doles has been fastened on large sections of the population.

"Stockholders."

An example of the New Deal at its worst was furnished last night by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau when, in giving a summary of the financial position of the country, he reminded citizens that they were "stockholders" in the Government. The illustration may have been an appealing one. It must also have struck some stockholders, more familiar with or more considerate of law than the New Dealers seem to be, that Morgenthau owed them further explanation. The stockholders would like to know why the special and extra dividends declared by their directors and distributed as doles and bonuses were sent to some stockholders and not to others. Stockholders under the New Deal are badly in need of a protective committee. Perhaps the less said about the position of New Deal bond holders the better.

Bills.

Since becoming President, Roosevelt has signed 2,694 bills out of the 2,915 passed by Congress and put upon his desk. To the person whose knowledge of Congress is gained mainly from the newspaper headlines, that seems to be about 2,693 more bills than possibly could have been passed had they been good bills. The explanation probably lies in the fact that 2,694 of the bills signed were sent over to the Capitol from the White House in the first place.

Margins.

The tabulation of results from the Stock Exchange inquiry on margin accounts has a certain value as a means of settling disputes on the percentage to the total of accounts in the restricted class. The statistics are scarcely comprehensive enough to prove the case for or against influence on trading activity. Stock Exchange officials claim that their position is supported, i. e., that the high margin requirements have restricted so many accounts that trading volume has dropped. They offer that to the Federal Reserve Board as a reason why margin requirements should be lowered.

Obvious.

To begin with, it scarcely seemed necessary to prove or to try to prove with statistics that high margins restrict trading. Any one with any practical experience in the markets knows perfectly that as margins go up, trading activity tends to go down. When margin buying power is exhausted and the accounts become inoperative because of that fact, naturally stock turnover falls. That is true with a 10 per cent or a 100 per cent margin. If at this point the margin requirements were reduced, automatically many accounts would again become free. One point which those who dislike high margins because they tend to restrict trading overlook is that, in a period of a large proportion of restricted accounts, the urge to speculate is at a low ebb anyway, because of the uncertainty or declining tendency of prices. When a good bull market is on, people dig up the money somewhere, and accounts are freed with new money or the rise in prices.

Clearings Here 17.1% Higher Than Last Week

The Washington Clearing House reports total clearings of $24,556,000.26 for the week ended July 1, which compares with $23,956,141.32 for the corresponding period last year, an increase of $599,858.94. Compared with a total of $20,969,655.49 for the previous week, clearings increased 17.1 per cent.

New York, July 2 (AP).—Bank clearings in the United States for the week ended Wednesday, July 1, continued the previous uptrend. The amount for 22 leading cities, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $6,021,760,000, against $6,810,432,000 for the same week of last year, a drop of 11.6 per cent. This contrasted with a gain of 11.5 per cent in the week previous.

At New York City the total of $3,900,135,000 was 18.0 per cent under the 1935 comparative, while the amount for the current period at outside centers was $2,121,625,000. This was 3.3 per cent over the total for the corresponding week a year ago. The figures for the latest week included only one day of the first-of-the-month payments whereas in 1935 three days were included, which accounts, in part, for the larger settlements at that time.

Reserves Gain $281,000,000 In July 1 Week

Circulation Increases 77 Million, Gold 12 Million.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported last night another heavy increase in member bank Reserve balances during the week ended July 1, bringing the excess to $2,670,000,000 above legal requirements.

A $281,000,000 boost brought the total to $5,589,000,000. Money in circulation rose $77,000,000 during the week, while the Treasury saw fit to withdraw from Reserve institutions $345,000,000, which was deposited in commercial institutions.

Monetary gold stocks rose $12,000,000, the smallest increase in recent days. The condition statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding during the week ended July 1, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,473,000,000, a decrease of $5,000,000, compared with the preceding week and of $2,000,000, compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

"On July 1 total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,473,000,000, an increase of $1,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $77,000,000 in money in circulation and $281,000,000 in member bank Reserve balances, and a decrease of $2,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency, offset in part by an increase of $12,000,000 in monetary gold stock and a decrease of $345,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks. Member bank reserve balances on July 1 were estimated to be approximately $2,670,000,000 in excess of legal requirements."

Cotton Seat Up $500.

New York, July 2.—The membership of Walter S. Thomson in the New York Cotton Exchange was sold yesterday to William S. Dowdell for another for $12,500, this price being $500 in advance of the previous sale.

Business Holds At High Level For Half Year

Manufacturing and Mining Are at Heaviest Rate in Six Years.

New York, July 2.—It should be with considerable satisfaction that business reviews the first half of 1936, Business Week will say tomorrow. Manufacturing output has been maintained at a high level, averaging 100 per cent of the 1923-1925 average. Mineral production has been equally high. Both are at the best levels since 1930. Agriculture also is headed back to 1930 levels. Railroads stand a good chance to beat the 1931 freight shipments and earnings totals. The eagerness with which new equipment is now being purchased reflects the improved prospects of the carriers.

Even the utilities which have smarted under stringent regulations have no doubt been surprised at the unusual strength of electric power demand this summer. Nor have wholesale and retail trade, advertising, and financial centers reason to complain of their lot this year. A number of mail-order houses and other national distributors have broken all records in sales in the past six months.

The heavy industries hardest hit in the late depression have evinced particularly strong recuperative powers this year. Agricultural implements, machine tools, rail equipment, and construction have all made big strides over last year. Employment and pay rolls in the durable goods industries have veered sharply upward.

Steel Activity.

The last-minute rush to get orders on the books before third-quarter prices went into effect and perhaps, in some cases, to be prepared for any strike eventualities, forced the steel operating rate up to 7 per cent of capacity, a new high since May, 1930. This probably represents the peak of the spring season, and is at least 10 to 15 points higher than most trade observers expected earlier this year. July may see a gradual decline in steel operations as orders now on the books are worked off.

Last week's buying of railroad equipment was the second best this year. Steel reports awards of 4,720 freight cars, 1,000 steel underframes, and six passenger locomotives. On June 1, Class I roads had more freight cars on order than on any June 1 since 1930.

Motor assemblies have dipped below the 100,000-cars-a-week line, and will probably continue to shrink slowly in the next eight weeks. July output may be on the par with a year ago when 350,054 cars were produced in United States and Canadian plants. By the end of August, work on the 1936 line should be completed and work on the 1937 line begun.

Need of Homes Is Backlog for Building Boom

Marriage Drop a Factor in Depression Slump in Construction.

New York, July 2.—The chief reason for expecting a continuance of building gains, says the monthly letter of the National City Bank of New York today, is that people during the depression stinted themselves in housing more than in most other wants, through doubling up, postponement of marriages, and use of houses beyond their normal life. The letter adds:

"The situation in effect parallels that of the automobile industry two or three years ago, when the number of cars registered had dropped 10 per cent from the peak and the average age of cars in use was climbing steadily. As people regained their purchasing power they began to fill their wants for automobiles, and the industry has had a sensational improvement. There is no reason to doubt that residential construction will follow the same course and for the same reasons, as rapidly as the economic factors involved become favorable.

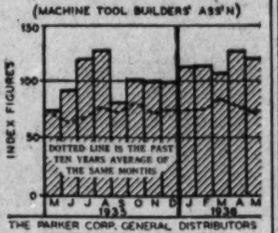
Behind Population.

"A measure of the deficiency in housing replacement during the past six years is provided by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which compiles figures showing the number of families provided for in new housing in 257 cities which include more than a third of the country's population. The bureau also gives population figures, from which the number of new families added to the population each year may be calculated.

"These figures indicate that at the start of the depression housing needs were well satisfied, doubtless more than satisfied. But for the past six years the number of families provided for has been far less than the increase of population; compared with the peak of 491,000 in 1925, only 22,000 units were built in 1934 and 56,000 in 1935. Allowing for an increase in 1936, there is evidently room for at least three or four times as much housing construction as is being done this year, merely to bring the housing curve up to the population curve. Moreover, the figures make no allowance for fire losses, demolitions and the obsolescence of houses in use. During the three years when construction was smallest these losses probably exceeded the number of new homes built.

"The marriage rate declined during the depression, dropping to 7.87 per 1,000 in 1932 from 10.14 in 1929. Catching up with marriages increases the demand for housing. The migration of population from farms to cities, which was reversed in 1930 to 1932, was resumed in 1933, and requires new housing."

Machine Tool Sales 62% Over Year Ago



Boston, Mass., July 2.—Increasing purchases of machine tools clearly indicates future manufacturing activity. New machine tool orders in May passed a year ago by 2 per cent, while in the first five months of this year activity exceeded the same 1935 months by 79 per cent.

Curb Utilities Resist Selling

New York, July 2 (AP).—Sharp declines in specialties took the edge off the Curb Market today, causing the general run of issues, except utilities, to close unchanged to a shade lower.

Aluminum Co., a volatile issue, often sensitive to light buying or selling, dropped 5½ points to 129. Humble Oil dipped 1 point to 62⅛, and New Jersey Zinc fell to 78½, also off a point. Others closing minor fractions to around a point lower included Sunshine Mining, Newmont, Molybdenum, Atlas Corporation, Fairchild Aviation and International Petroleum.

Gainers included American Gas, E. W. Bliss, Commonwealth Edison, Electric Bond & Share and Glen Alden. Sales of 323,000 shares compared with 290,000 the day before.

Mrs. Dowdall Wins Herald Cup Golf

Her 77 Beats Mrs. Gross and Mrs. Beavers by One Stroke.

Mrs. Joseph F. Dowdall, of Congressional Country Club, tournament chairman of the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association, beat off the challenge of a bevy of high handicap golfers to win the Herald Cup tournament at Indian Spring yesterday.

Mrs. Dowall carded 84—7—77, topping Mrs. J. Franklin Gross, of Columbia, and Mrs. Thomas N. Beavers, of Manor, by one shot, each. Mrs. Gross had 90—12—78, and Mrs. Beavers, 89—11—78.

Low gross honors went to Mrs. L. G. Pray, of Manor, who scored 86, Mrs. Dowdall's brace of 42's was good enough for the medal prize, but she waived it in preference to the low net honor entitling her to the trophy won last year by Mrs. Frank Royer Keefer, of Chevy Chase.

Omaha Beaten In Last Race In England

Top Weight of 138 Pounds Too Great Handicap for U. S. Horse.

By the Associated Press.

Newmarket, England, July 2.—Loaded down under the back-breaking top weight of 138 pounds, William Woodward's Omaha lost his last bid for a major victory on the English turf today when he dropped a narrow decision to the Aga Khan's Taj Akbar in the Prncess of Wales Stake.

The American-bred son of Gallant Fox, 8-to-11 choice to whip five high-class rivals, finished the mile and a half only a neck back of Taj Akbar. The winner, runner-up to his stablemate, Mahoud, in the Derby, stepped the distance in 2 minutes, 35 seconds over a heavy course.

Taj Akbar, second choice at 4 to 1, received 18 pounds from Omaha, which lost the Ascot Gold Cup in the same heart-breaking manner. James A. de Rothschild's Esquemeling was third, five lengths back. The defeat was Omaha's second setback in four starts in England.

British turf writers agreed the killing load packed on the American champion blighted his hopes before he left the paddock. Several declared "he's greater than either Reigh Count or Twenty Grand, but no horse in the world could win with such a handicap." The big chestnut seemed almost to realize the hopelessness of his task for he delayed the start for six minutes with a rebellious outburst at the post.

Japanese Paid Spy Suspect, Bank Aid Says

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, July 2.—A Japanese banker tonight told a Federal jury that funds from which Harry Thompson, accused of selling United States Navy secrets to a Japanese navy officer, was paid, came from a Japanese Navy officer's account in a New York bank.

B. Hirano, assistant manager of the Yokohama Specie Bank in San Francisco, identified markings on bank records indicating that money paid to Thompson came from the Irving Trust Co. of New York.

The money was deposited to the account of Toshio Miyazaki, lieutenant commander in the Japanese navy, indicted jointly with Thompson, but who left for Japan shortly after Thompson was arrested.

Hirano, a squat, dark-eyed man who smiled affably as he testified, held a picture of Miyazaki before a light for some time in an effort to identify it. Finally he said:

"Him I believe I saw only once, maybe once—but I remember him only as a customer."

Says It's Unimportant

Assistant United States Attorney Clyde Thomas said the identification was "not important now—at the proper time we will establish Miyazaki's identity."

Earlier, a roommate of Thompson's, Willard J. Turntine, 20-year-old Texas farm boy, had described meetings between Thompson and a Japanese named "Tanny," which the indictment charges was an alias for Miyazaki.

Hirano identified markings on records of his bank, showing the origin of monthly "salary checks" of $200 and $300 which the Government contends Thompson received for pilfering naval records and schedules of maneuvers of the battle fleet. The checks were deposited at frequent intervals, Hirano said, chiefly in the latter part of 1934. Miyazaki drew the checks in Thompson's favor, and they were cashed in Los Angeles, Long Beach and San Diego, Calif.

The Government also produced testimony from United States immigration officials showing that when Miyazaki entered the United States August 24, 1933, he said he was going to Washington to contact the Japanese Embassy on official business.

Produces Statement.

Turntine, a glib youth from Dallas, Tex., who roomed with Thompson during the fall of 1934 when the latter, a former Navy yeoman, assertedly stole naval secrets and peddled them to Miyazaki, gave a detailed account of mysterious movements of the dark-haired ex-sailor.

At that time, according to the Government's charges, he operated as an informer for Miyazaki, obtaining aircraft and gunnery secrets and information about movements of the battle fleet.

A letter from Miyazaki, dated at Stanford University, November 26, 1934, addressed to Thompson in San Pedro, Calif., where ships of the battle fleet were moored, asked the ex-yeoman to "send the schedule of force tactics which will commence the fifth of December."

"Go Slow and Steady."

The letter said:

"My dear Mr. Thompson: I received your letter just now after my pretty long trip. I am very glad to know you are doing very good. Don't be hurry. Go slow and steady.

"Since now your monthly salary will be sent not later than the first of each month and tomorrow $300 will be sent including your December salary, clothes and Christmas present.

"I shall have a very long trip next month and may return in January but not sure. I will send your January salary before I start here. Will you send me the schedule (details) of force tactics which will commence from the fifth of December.

"Please remember that you need not send me reports for all my questions all at one time. One report should be sent me at a time when you get.

"Sincerely, 'Tanny.'"

A. E. Norman Dies; Ex-Sears Official

Elberon, N. J., July 2 (AP).—Aaron E. Norman, 77, philanthropist and former vice president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., of Chicago, died yesterday of a heart attack at his summer home.

A New Yorker by birth, Norman went to Chicago when he was 18 and started a wholesale merchandising career, in time becoming resident partner of Feder Brothers of Cincinnati.

At his death he was a director of the Inland Steel Co., Phoenix Manufacturing Co., Industrial Rayon Corporation and the Graver Tank & Manufacturing Co.

A wife, a son and daughter survive.

Cummins, vice president, Consolidated Engineering Co.

Hecht Warehouse To Cost $1,000,000

Construction of a new $1,000,000 warehouse, to be built partially of glass brick, will start shortly at New York avenue and Fenwick street, it was announced yesterday by the Hecht Co.

The Hecht warehouse, which will also serve as a delivery building, will be the largest structure of its kind south of New York. It will be the first warehouse in the country to be constructed of glass brick.

Glass brick, besides allowing better lighting, has an insulating quality which will keep the building cooler in summer and warmer in winter, it was explained.

The new building will be six stories high, 350 feet long and 250 feet wide. It will have a total of ten acres of floor space. About 200 persons are expected to be employed there.

Hecht Co. officials say the increase in space and the centralization of activities in one warehouse instead of three will definitely make for speedier deliveries.

Rogers Dower Suit Argument Is Ended

Riverhead, N. Y., July 2 (AP).—Surrogate Robert S. Pelletreau tonight took under advisement Mrs. Pauline V. Rogers' suit to re-establish her dower rights to one-third of the millions left by her late husband, Col. Henry Huddleston Rogers, oil capitalist.

The surrogate, at the end of a three-day hearing on Mrs. Rogers' contention that she was persuaded to sign a waiver to her rights without being fully informed of what she was doing, indicated he would return a decision early next week.

Under the terms of her husband's will, Mrs. Rogers would receive an income of approximately $120,000 a year from the estate. If her suit is successful she would receive several millions outright.

World Battle On 'Bad Films' Urged by Pope

Bishops Told to Set Up Boards of Review Over Globe.

is evil? Why should the motion picture simply be a means of diversion and light relaxation to occupy the idle hour? With its magnificent power it can and must be a right and positive guide to what is good."

The Pope's encyclical recognized the motion picture as "the most popular form of diversion today among civilized and semicivilized nations" and demanded that since it "teaches the majority of men more effectively than does abstract reasoning, it must be elevated in conformity with the aims of the the Christian conscience.

A permanent national reviewing office would be established in each country and information would be exchanged to "achieve a unit outlet in the judgments and communications appearing in the Catholic press of the world."

Worked Year On Message.

Prelates said the encyclical represented years of thought by the Pontiff, who long forbade motion pictures in the Vatican.

The encyclical issued at the Vatican today was dated June 29, the day before Pius left for his summer home at Castle Gandolfo.

The public should stay away from films, the encyclical said, which "create prejudice among individuals and misunderstandings among nations."

"We thank the bishops and faithful of the United States," it said, "and we express our satisfaction over the good results achieved in this field by the 'Legion of Decency' and urge bishops and the faithful throughout the whole world to profit by their examples.

"We urge the necessity for a committee of censorship under the control of fathers and mothers of families, in order that a medium fraught with such power may be a source, not of debasement, but rather of virtue and national greatness in the contribution which it may make toward increasing the welfare, social and moral, of the world. * * *"

Cites 1930 Code.

"Cinema producers of America themselves became concerned over evil movies in 1930 and issued a code according to which they promised to abstain from production of films calculated to demoralize or bring discredit to natural or human law," the papal letter continued.

"However, in point of fact, they proved themselves scarcely able to put it into effect. For this reason the American bishops felt themselves called on to intervene and organize the faithful under their charge into a League of Decency which had as its object a public promise renewed every year to abstain from attending exhibitions of immoral films.

"This campaign succeeded in raising the moral level of films and in the process had in no wise inflicted damage on the industry because many Catholics who had abstained from the cinema resumed patronage when assured of its moral improvements. * * *

"It is necessary for pastors to be ever on guard lest their charges should be exposed to corruption during the hours devoted to recreation."

The encyclical was entitled "Vigilanti Cura." Its publication following a visit here by Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia, founder of the Legion of Decency. He spent a month in Rome and was granted several audiences.

The message concluded:

"That these desires which well in our paternal heart may be realized we employ the help of the grace of God and in the pledge thereof we impart to you venerable brethren and to the clergy and people entrusted to you our affectionate apostolic benediction."

Hollywood Reaction.

Hollywood, July 2 (AP).—In unofficial comment Hollywood tonight interpreted the world censorship on movies, called for by Pope Pius, as favorable to the American motion-picture industry.

Will H. Hays, spokesman for the industry as president of the Motion Pictures and Distributors Association, refused official comment on the Pope's encyclical letter until he has seen a complete text. But it was said unofficially he considers the action a tacit indorsement of the industry's own censorship plan.

It was pointed out that, in this country, a permanent picture reviewing organization for members of the Catholic Church already exists in the Legion of Decency. The Pope ordered the establishment of permanent reviewing organizations in every country.

It was admitted privately by a motion-picture executive, that the industry did not voluntarily raise the moral level of its films even when its code of morals was adopted six years ago, and that no serious effort was made to enforce the code until the Legion of Decency of the Catholic Church, and similar organizations, compelled the industry to undertake a clean-up campaign of its own.

The determination of the moral welfare groups to "clean up the motion picture" was met in the industry by the promise to enforce its almost dormant morals code. "Self-regulation" was the keynote of Hollywood's reply. Hays appointed his first assistant, Joseph I. Breen, as production code authority empowered to censor pictures before their release. Breen has been functioning in this capacity since July 1, 1934.

Legion System Elaborate.

New York, July 2 (AP).—The National Legion of Decency, praised today by Pope Pius for its fight against "bad" motion pictures as he ranged all Catholic Christendom against them, has developed in its fight of more than two years a vast system for critical analysis of films.

Every picture made, legion headquarters here said, eventually is reviewed, through a committee under direction of the Motion Picture Bureau of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae.

The findings of the reviewers go out weekly to millions through direct mail, through the Catholic press, through the general press, and in every parish over the land.

Two lists are published. The larger is in four classes, listing pictures under the terms "unobjectionable for general patronage," "unobjectionable for adults," "objectionable in part" and "condemned."

The second list, called a "special estimate," goes further and gives thumbnail reviews of pictures as well as classifying them as to desirability.

The current main list carries the names of more than 250 films. Of that number the great majority—about 160—are described as objectionable for family audiences, about 70 are termed unobjectionable for grown-ups, some 30 objectionable "in part," and only four flatly condemned.
